Certain of said defendants above named are described otherwise than by Christian name for the reason that the Christian name of each of said defendants is to your Orator unknown.

II.

On or about the twenty-fifth day of July, A. D. 1866, the Congress of the United States passed an Act entitled, which said Act was approved and became operative upon said twenty-fifth day of July, A. D. 1866, and which said Act is in terms as follows:

"An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,"

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that the 'California and Oregon Railroad Company,' organized under an act of the State of California, to protect certain parties in and to a railroad survey, 'to connect Portland, in Oregon, with Marysville, in California,' approved April 6, 1863, and such company organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said state shall hereafter designate, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to lay out, locate, construct, finish and maintain a railroad and telegraph line between the City of Portland in Oregon, and the Central Pacific Railroad in California, in the manner following, to-wit: The said California and Oregon Railroad Company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph within the State of California, beginning at some point (to be selected by said company) on the Central Pacific Railroad in the Sacramento Valley, in the State of California, and running thence northerly, through the Sacramento and Shasta valleys, to the northern boundary of the State of California; and the said Oregon company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph line within the State of Oregon, beginning at the City of Portland, in Oregon, and running thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys to the southern boundary of Oregon, where the same shall connect with the part aforesaid to be made by the first-named company: Provided, That the company completing its respective part of the said railroad and telegraph from either of the termini herein named to the line between California and Oregon before the other company shall have likewise arrived at the same line, shall have the right, and the said company is hereby authorized, to continue in constructing the same beyond the line aforesaid, with the consent of the State in which the unfinished part may lie, upon the terms mentioned in this act, until the said parts shall meet and connect, and the whole line of said railroad and telegraph shall be completed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the said companies, their successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores over the line of said railroad, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile (ten on each side) of said railroad line; and when any of said alternate sections or parts of sections shall be found to have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted or otherwise disposed of, other lands, designated as aforesaid, shall be selected by said companies in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections designated by odd numbers as aforesaid, nearest to and not more than ten miles beyond the limits of said first-named alternate sections; and as soon as the said companies, or either of them, shall file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior a map of the survey of said railroad, or any portion thereof, not less than sixty continuous miles from either terminus, the Secretary of the Interior shall withdraw from sale public lands herein granted on each side of said railroad, so far as located and within the limits before specified. The lands herein granted shall be applied to the building of said road within the States, respectively, wherein they are situated. And the sections and parts of sections of land which shall remain in the United States within the limits of the aforesaid grant shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold: Provided, That bona-fide and actual settlers under the pre-emption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the price fixed for said lands at the date of such settlement, improvement and occupation: And provided also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead act, who comply with the terms and requirements of said act, shall be entitled, within the limits of said grant, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres of the land so reserved by the United States, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby granted to said companies for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power and authority are hereby given to said companies to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, water, and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side tracks, turn-tables, water stations, or any other structures required in the construction and operating of said road.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That whenever the said companies, or either of them, shall have twenty or more consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line ready for the service contemplated by this act, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners, whose compensation shall be paid by said company, to examine the same, and if it shall appear that twenty consecutive miles of railroad and telegraph shall have been completed and equipped in all respects as required by this act, the said commissioners shall so report under oath to the President of the United States, and thereupon patents shall issue to said companies, or either of them, as the case may be, for the lands hereinbefore granted, to the extent of and coterminous with the completed section of said railroad and telegraph line as aforesaid; and from time to time, whenever twenty or more consecutive miles of the said road and telegraph shall be completed and equipped as aforesaid, patents shall in like manner issue upon the report of the said commissioners, and so on until the entire railroad and telegraph authorized by this act shall have been constructed, and the patents of the lands herein granted shall have been issued.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the grants aforesaid are made upon the condition that the said companies shall keep said railroad and telegraph in repair and use, and shall at all times transport the mails upon said railroad, and transmit despatches by said telegraph line for the government of the United States, when required so to do by any department thereof, and that the government shall at all times have the preference in the use of said railroad and telegraph therefor at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the rates paid by private parties for the same kind of service. And said railroad shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the government of the United States, free of all toll or other charges upon the transportation of the property or troops of the United States; and the same shall be transported over said road at the cost, charge and expense of the corporations or companies owning or operating the same, when so required by the government of the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the said companies shall file their assent to this act in the Department of the Interior within one year after the passage hereof, and shall complete the first section of twenty miles of said railroad and telegraph within two years, and at least twenty miles in each year thereafter, and the whole on or before the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five; and the said railroad shall be of the same gauge as the 'Central Pacific Railroad' of California, and be connected therewith.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said companies named in this act are hereby required to operate and use the portions or parts of said railroad and telegraph mentioned in section one of this act for all purposes of transportation, travel and communication, so far as the government and public are concerned, as one connected and continuous line; and in such operation and use to afford and secure to each other equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time and transportation, without any discrimination whatever, on pain of forfeiting the full amount of damage sustained on account of such discrimination, to be sued for and recovered in any court of the United States, or of any State, of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That in case the said companies shall fail to comply with the terms and conditions required, namely, by not filing their assent thereto as provided in section six of this act, or by not completing the same as provided in said section, this act shall be null and void, and all the lands not conveyed by patent to said company or companies, as the case may be, at the date of any such failure, shall revert to the United States. And in case the said road and telegraph line shall not be kept in repair and fit for use, after the same shall have been completed, Congress may pass an act to put the same in repair and use, and may direct the income of said railroad and telegraph line to be thereafter devoted to the United States, to repay all expenditures caused by the default and neglect of said companies or either of them, as the case may be, or may fix pecuniary responsibility, not exceeding the value of the lands granted by this act.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the said 'California and Oregon Railroad Company,' and the said 'Oregon Company' shall be governed by the provisions of the general railroad and telegraph laws of their respective States, as to the construction and management of the said railroad and telegraph line hereinbefore authorized, in all matters not provided for in this act. Wherever the word 'company' or 'companies' is used in this act it shall be construed to embrace the words

'their associates, successors and assigns,' the same as if the words had been inserted, or thereto annexed.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That all mineral lands shall be excepted from the operation of this act; but where the same shall contain timber, so much of the timber thereon as shall be required to construct said road over such mineral land is hereby granted to said companies; Provided, That the term 'mineral lands' shall not include lands containing coal and iron.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the said companies named in this act shall obtain the consent of the legislatures of their respective States, and be governed by the statutory regulations thereof in all matters pertaining to the right of way, wherever the said road and telegraph line shall not pass over or through the public lands of the United States.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said California and Oregon railroad companies, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act."

Said last described Act of Congress was amended by an Act of Congress approved June twenty-fifth, A. D. 1868, entitled, "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' " which said amendatory act is in terms as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section six of an act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, be so amended as to provide that instead of the times now fixed in said section, the first section of twenty miles of said railroad and telegraph shall be completed within eighteen months from the passage of this act, and at least twenty miles in each two years thereafter, and the whole on or before the first day of July Anno Domini eighteen hundred and eighty."

III.

No right, title or interest in or to any of the grants, franchises or other benefits in the State of Oregon, provided for by said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D, 1866, was ever acquired by any corporation or person, or otherwise, except at the time, in the manner, and upon the terms and conditions as hereinafter set forth.

On or about the sixth day of October, A. D. 1866, certain proceedings were had by which certain persons attempted to organize, under the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon, a corporation bearing the corporate name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal office at the city of Portland, in said State of Oregon.

Said Oregon Central Railroad Company projected its railroad line from said city of Portland in a westerly direction to the village of Forest Grove, and thence southerly to and beyond the village of McMinnville, on the westerly side of the Willamette River, from which circumstance said company and its line of railroad became known, and therefore will herein be referred to and mentioned, as the "West Side Company" and the "West Side Line" respectively, to distinguish the same from a certain other line of railroad projected at about the same time on the easterly side of said river by another railroad company bearing the same corporate name, as hereinafter set forth.

On the tenth day of October, A. D. 1866, the legislature of the State of Oregon adopted a joint resolution, which on the last aforesaid day was approved by the governor of said State, and which is in terms as follows:

"Whereas, The Congress of the United States, at its last session, passed an act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, Oregon, and made it the duty of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon to designate the company, organized under the laws of Oregon, which shall receive that part of said land grant lying within the State of Oregon; therefore be it

Resolved by the House, the Senate concurring, That the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' a company organized under the general incorporation laws of this State, be and the same is hereby designated as the company which shall be entitled to receive the land granted and all the benefits of an Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, entitled, 'An Act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, Oregon,' so far as the said grant applies to the State of Oregon."

Assuming in the premises to have been lawfully designated therefor, said West Side Company, on or about the twenty-fifth day of May, A. D. 1867, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in terms assenting to the provisions of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and, on or about the sixth day of July, A. D. 1867, filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States an authenticated copy of the last aforesaid resolution, together with a certified copy of its articles of incorporation, and a certified copy of the aforesaid joint resolution of the legislature of the State of Oregon; and, on or about the twentieth day of August, A. D. 1868, filed in the last aforesaid office a general map of survey of its projected line of railroad.

In the meantime, and on or about the twenty-second day of April, A, D. 1867, certain persons, residents of the State of Oregon, then and thereafter contending that said West Side Company was never lawfully incorporated or organized, and designing to secure the several grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, in that behalf caused certain proceedings to be had intended to organize, under the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon, a corporation bearing the same corporate name, to-wit, "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal place of business at the city of Salem, in said State of Oregon.

Said last mentioned Oregon Central Railroad Company projected its line of railroad on the easterly side of the Willamette River, and, for the reasons hereinbefore explained, said last mentioned company and its line of railroad became known as the "East Side Company" and the "East Side Line," respectively, and therefore will herein be so referred to and mentioned.

Said East Side Company, in furtherance of its aforesaid design, on the twentieth day of October, A. D. 1868, procured a joint resolution to be adopted by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, and approved by the governor of said State, which said resolution is in terms as follows:

"Whereas, The Congress of the United States, by an Act approved July 25, 1866, entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' did grant certain lands in the State of Oregon, and confer certain benefits and privileges upon such company organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said State should thereafter designate; and

"Whereas, The Legislative Assembly of Oregon, at its fourth regular session, did adopt a joint resolution known as 'House Joint Resolution No. 13,' designating in terms the Oregon Central Railroad Company as the company entitled to receive the land granted by, and all the benefits and privileges of, the said Act of Congress; and

"Whereas, At the time of the adoption of the said joint resolution as aforesaid, no such company as the Oregon Central Railroad Company was organized or in existence, and the said joint resolution was adopted under a misapprehension of facts as to the organization and existence of such company; and

"Whereas, The designation of the company to receive the lands in the State of Oregon granted, and the benefits and privileges conferred by, the said Act of Congress, yet remains to be made;

"Be it resolved by the Senate, the House concurring, That the Oregon Central Railroad Company, a corporation organized at Salem on the twenty-second (22d) day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven (1867), under and pursuant to the laws of the State of Oregon, be and the same is hereby designated as the company entitled to receive the lands in Oregon, and the benefits and privileges conferred by the said Act of Congress."

Thereupon a controversy arose between said West Side Company and said East Side Company, as to which of said companies was entitled to the grants, franchises and privileges of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866; which controversy continued until on or about the month of January, A. D. 1870, as hereinafter set forth.

Said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth,

A. D. 1866, prescribed as a condition precedent to the vesting of any of the grants contained therein, that the company designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon should, within one year from said twenty-fifth day of July, A. D. 1866, file in the Department of the Interior its assent to said Act and the terms and conditions thereof.

The time within which to file an assent as aforesaid had expired long prior to the designation of said East Side Company by the Legislature of the State of Oregon on October twentieth, A. D. 1868 as aforesaid. Because of the premises, said East Side Company did apply to the Congress of the United States, during the session thereof commencing in the month of December, A. D. 1868, for an extension of the time within which to file its assent as aforesaid; and, in that behalf, did lay before Congress said joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Oregon last herein described, and did represent that all of the recitals thereof were true, and that because of the premises, the several grants, franchises and privileges of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, had lapsed, and the benefits thereof would be wholly lost to the State of Oregon unless revived by Congress in manner aforesaid.

During the consideration by Congress of said application of said East Side Company, said West Side Company likewise appeared before Congress and opposed said application, and in that behalf contended that the several grants, franchises and privileges of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, had theretofore become, and then were, vested in said West Side Company.

Thereafter, and by Act of Congress approved April tenth, A. D. 1869, entitled, "An Act to amend an Act entitled, 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon, approved July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-six," Congress did grant the said application of said East Side Company, but upon the express condition that the lands granted as aforesaid should be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre.

Said Act of Congress approved April tenth, A. D. 1869, is in terms as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section six of an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to allow any railroad company heretofore designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, in accordance with the first section of said Act, to file its assent to such Act in the Department of the Interior within one year from the date of the passage of this Act; and such filing of its assent, if done within one year from the passage hereof, shall have the same force and effect to all intents and purposes as if such assent had been filed within one year after the passage of said Act; Provided, That nothing herein shall impair any rights heretofore acquired by any railroad company under said Act, nor shall said Act or this amendment be construed to entitle more than one company to a grant of land; And Provided, Further, That the lands granted by the Act aforesaid shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre."

On or about the eighth day of June, A. D. 1869, said East Side Company, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in the following terms:

"Whereas, The Congress of the United States, on the 25th day of July, 1866, passed an Act entitled 'An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' and

"Whereas, Such Act provided that such company thereafter organized under the laws of Oregon, and designated by the Legislature of such State, should be entitled to receive and manage the said grant in Oregon, said Act further requiring that the company so organized and designated should, within one year from the date of its passage, (to-wit: July 25, 1866), file its assent in the Department of the Interior, and

"Whereas, No company was designated by such Legislature within the year within which such an assent was required to be filed, and

"Whereas, The Legislature of the State of Oregon did, at its regular session in October, A. D. 1868, pass the following joint resolution, designating this company, (to-wit: 'The Oregon Central Railroad Company' of Salem, Oregon, a company duly incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Oregon) as the company to take and manage such grant, and receive all the benefits of the same, in the State of Oregon;"

(Quoting in full said joint resolution, and which is hereinbefore set forth).

"And Whereas, The Congress of the United States did, in April, A. D. 1869, pass an Act amendatory of the said Act of July 25, 1866, extending the time in which the company designated might file its said assent, which Act was approved by the President of the United States, April 10, 1869, and is entitled 'An Act to amend an Act entitled an Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon, approved July 25th, 1866';

"Therefore, Resolved, That this company, the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon, incorporated at Salem, Oregon, April 22, 1867, do hereby accept all the provisions, rights, privileges and franchises of said Act of July 25, A. D. 1866, entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' and of all Acts amendatory thereof and upon the conditions therein specified, and do hereby give our assent and the assent of such company thereto, and the Secretary of this company is hereby instructed to prepare a true copy of this resolution, certified to under the seal of the corporation, signed by himself as Secretary, and by the President of this company, and such certified copy transmit to and file the same with and in the office of the Secretary of the Interior at Washington City, D. C."

On or about the thirtieth day of June, A. D. 1869, said East Side Company filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States a certified copy of said resolution last herein set forth.

On or about the twenty-ninth day of October, A. D. 1869, said East Side Company filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States a map of survey and location of the first sixty miles of its projected line of railroad.

On the twenty-fourth day of December, A. D. 1869, said East Side Company completed the construction of the first twenty miles of its aforesaid line of railroad, commencing at the City of Portland, and on the thirty-first day of December, A. D. 1869, the same was examined and approved by commissioners appointed therefor pursuant to the provisions of section four of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866.

Said West Side Company wholly failed to complete the construction of any part of its said line of railroad pursuant to the terms and conditions of the aforesaid Acts of Congress; and on or about the month of January, A. D. 1870, said West Side Company acquiesced in the aforesaid substitution of said East Side Company as the recipient of the aforesaid grants, privileges and franchises, and abandoned and waived all claim thereto, and in lieu thereof, applied for, obtained and accepted a separate and similar grant of lands, franchises and other benefits, pertaining to its line of railroad projected as aforesaid, by Act of Congress approved May fourth, A. D. 1870, as hereinafter more particularly set forth.

By reason of the premises, no right, title or interest in or to any of the grants, franchises or other benefits of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, was ever acquired by said West Side Company, or by, through or under it; or by said East Side Company, or by, through or under it, except by virtue of, and expressly subject to, all of the terms and conditions of said Act of Congress approved April tenth A. D. 1869.

In the meantime said East Side Company had become involved in litigation questioning the validity of its incorporation and organization and its right to use said corporate name. Because of the premises, the promoters, officers and stockholders of said East Side Company did, on or about the seventeenth day of March, A. D. 1870, organize the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company under the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon. In that behalf certain articles of incorporation were, on said last mentioned date, executed in triplicate and filed, one in the ofice of the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon, one in the office of the County Clerk of the County of Multnomah, Oregon, (being the county in which the principal office of said corporation was located), and one in the office of the Secretary of said corporation, at the city of Portland, in said County of Multnomah.

The principal object of said corporation, as stated in its aforesaid articles of incorporation, was to become the successor of said East Side Company, and as such, to receive and exercise the grants, franchises and privileges of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid Acts amendatory thereof; a copy of which said articles of incorporation is hereto attached marked "Exhibit A" and made a part of this bill.

Pursuant to the premises, on or about the twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1870, said East Side Company did execute and deliver to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company a certain instrument in writing, purporting to assign, transfer and convey to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company all of the property of said East Side Company, including the right, title and interest of said East Side Company in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid Acts amendatory thereof, a copy of which said instrument is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit B," and made a part of this bill. Thereafter, and during the months of March and April, A. D. 1870, said instrument last described was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid Acts amendatory thereof.

The purpose, intent and effect of said last described instrument was and is not to operate as a sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by the aforesaid Acts of Congress, but to constitute said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the sucessor of said East Side Company to construct, complete and equip the line of railroad aforesaid, and, in aid thereof, to receive and exercise the grants, franchises and other benefits in that behalf extended by Congress as aforesaid, and upon all of the terms and conditions aforesaid, and not otherwise.

On said twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1870, said East Side Company, by action of its Board of Directors and its stockholders, became and was dissolved and since said last mentioned date, no corporate powers or franchises have ever been exercised by, or in the name of, said East Side Company.

On the fourth day of April, A. D. 1870, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in terms as follows:

Whereas, This company has purchased and taken an assignment from the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon, incorporated April 22, 1867, of all the railroad franchises and other property of such corporation, including all the right, title, interest and claim, both legal and equitable, absolute and contingent, of such corporation, of, in and to the lands and all other benefits granted to the Oregon Company by an Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' approvel July 25, 1866, and amendments thereto, therefore,

Resolved, That this company do accept the grant conferred by such Act of Congress, and all the benefits and emoluments therein or thereof granted, and upon the terms and conditions therein specified, and

Resolved, That the President and Secretary of this company be and they are hereby authorized and directed to file the assent of this company to such Act of Congress and amendments thereto, as aforesaid, in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, which shall be done by filing a copy of these resolutions in such office, certified to under seal of this company, and signed by the President and Secretary respectively.

Resolved Further, That a copy of the deed of assignment from said Oregon Central Railroad Company, certified to by the President and Secretary under the seal of this company, be also filed in such office of the Secretary of the Interior, and accompanying these resolutions."

On or about the twenty-eighth day of April, A. D.

1870, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States an authenticated copy of said last described resolution, and a certified copy of said instrument dated March twenty-ninth, A. D. 1870; and at all times thereafter said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed and still assumes, to be the successor of said East Side Company and of all of its rights under said Acts of Congress, as aforesaid.

IV.

Having abandoned and waived all claim to the grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, as hereinbefore set forth, said West Side Company did importune the Congress of the United States to extend to it, in lieu thereof, a similar grant of lands, franchises and other benefits pertaining to its aforesaid projected line of railroad, known as the "West Side Line;" and thereafter, by an Act entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon," approved May fourth, A. D. 1870, Congress in that behalf provided as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria, and from a suitable point of junction near Forest Grove to the Yamhill river, near McMinnville, in the State of Oregon, there is hereby granted to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, now engaged in constructing the said road, and to their successors and assigns, the right of way through the public lands of the width of one hundred feet on each side of said road, and the right to take from the adjacent public lands materials for constructing said road, and also the necesary lands for depots, stations, side tracks, and other needful uses in operating the road, not exceeding forty acres at any one place; and also, each alternate section of the public lands, not mineral, excepting coal or iron lands, designated by odd numbers nearest to said road, to the amount of ten such alternate sections per mile, on each side thereof, not otherwise disposed of or reserved or held by valid pre-emption or homestead right at the time of the passage of this Act. And in case the quantity of ten full sections per mile cannot be found on each side of said road, within the said limits of twenty miles, other lands designated as aforesaid shall be selected under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior on either side of any part of said road nearest to and not more than twenty-five miles from the track of said road to make up such deficiency.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall cause the lands along the line of said railroad to be surveyed with all convenient speed. And wherever and as often as the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior maps of the survey and location of twenty or more miles of said road, the said Secretary shall cause the said granted lands adjacent to and coterminous with such located sections of road to be segregated from the public lands; and thereafter the remaining public lands subject to sale within the limits of the said grant, shall be disposed of only to actual settlers at double the minimum price for such lands: And provided, also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead Act who comply with the terms and requirements of said Act, shall be entitled, within the said limits of twenty miles, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each of the said ungranted lands, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That whenever and as often as the said company shall complete and equip twenty or more consecutive miles of the said railroad and telegraph, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the same to be examined, at the expense of the company, by three commissioners appointed by him; and if they shall report that such completed section is a first-class railroad and telegraph, properly equipped and ready for use, he shall cause patents to be issued to the company for so much of the said granted lands as shall be adjacent to and coterminous with the said completed sections.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said alternate sections of land granted by this Act, excepting only such as are necessary for the company to reserve for depots, stations, side tracks, wood yards, standing ground, and other needful uses in operating the road, shall be sold by the company only to actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres or a quarter section to any one settler, and at prices not exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the said company shall, by mortgage or deed of trust to two or more trustees, appropriate and set apart all the net proceeds of the sales of the said granted lands, as a sinking fund, to be kept invested in the bonds of the United States, or other safe and more productive securities, for the purchase from time to time, and the redemption at maturity, of the first mortgage construction bonds of the company, on the road depots, stations, side tracks, and wood yards, not exceeding Thirty Thousand Dollars per mile of road, payable in gold coin not longer than thirty years from date, with interest payable semi-annually in coin not exceeding the rate of seven per centum per annum; and no part of the principal or interest of the said fund shall be applied to any other use until all the said bonds shall have been purchased or redeemed and cancelled; and each of the said first mortgage bonds shall bear the certificate of the trustees, setting forth the manner in which the same is secured and its payment provided for. And the District Court of the United States, concurrently with the State Courts, shall have original jurisdiction, subject to appeal and writ of error, to enforce the provisions of this section.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior its assent to this Act within one year from the time of its passage; and the foregoing grant is upon condition that said company shall complete a section of twenty or more miles of said railroad and telegraph within two years, and the entire railroad and telegraph within six years, from the same date."

By said words "Oregon Central Railroad Company," in said last mentioned Act of Congress, the Congress of the United States intended to, and did, refer to said West Side Company. The line of railroad prescribed in said last mentioned Act, extending from the city of Portland to McMinnville, by way of Forest Grove, is the identical line of railroad theretofore projected by said West Side Company, as aforesaid.

On or about the second day of July, A. D. 1870, said West Side Company, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in terms assenting to, and accepting, all of the aforesaid provisions of said last mentioned Act of Congress, and on or about the twentieth day of July, A. D. 1870, an authenticated copy of said last described resolution was, by said West Side Company, filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States.

On or about the fifteenth day of August, A. D. 1870, all of the so-called capital stock of said West Side Company was acquired by the then owners of the so-called capital stock of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and thereafter all of the so-called capital stock of both of said companies was held by a single interest, and the affairs of said two companies were conducted virtually as a single enterprise until the dissolution of said West Side Company, as hereinafter stated.

V.

All of the original capital stock of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and substantially all of the capital stock of said West Side Company, was issued without consideration, and, by reason of the premises, neither of said companies had any original capital or other funds for construction or other purposes, except such as was borrowed therefor.

By the issuance and negotiation or pledge of mortgage bonds and otherwise, approximately Eight Million Dollars was, during the year 1870, procured by said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and approximately One Million Dollars was, during the year 1871, procured by said West Side Company; and, with the funds thus provided, the work of constructing the aforesaid lines of railroad respectively, was prosecuted until on or about the month of January, A. D. 1873. During said period of construction, said East Side Line was constructed and extended from said city of Portland to a point near Roseburg, a distance of approximately one hundred and ninety-seven (197) miles, (including said first section of twenty miles theretofore constructed), and said West Side Line was constructed and completed from said city of Portland to said McMinnville, by way of said Forest Grove, a distance of approximately forty-seven (47) miles.

On or about the said month of January, A. D. 1873, said funds became exhausted and both of said companies became bankrupt and insolvent, and because thereof, the construction of both of said lines of railroad was abandoned; and, as to said East Side Line, was not resumed until the month of June, A. D. 1881, as hereinafter set forth; and, as to said West Side Line, was never resumed.

Because of the premises, on or about the twenty-fourth day of July, A. D. 1874, the direction and control of the financial affairs of said two companies were assumed and thereafter exercised by the then creditors thereof, organized under the name "Bondholders Committee." On or about the twenty-ninth day of February, A. D. 1876, all of the so-called capital stock of both of said companies was, for virtually a nominal consideration, acquired by said Bondholders Committee, and thereafter all of the affairs of said two companies were conducted by, and under the direction and control of, said Bondholders Committee.

On or about the sixth day October, A. D. 1880, for the purpose of merging said West Side Company into said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and under the direction and influence of said Bondholders Committee, said West Side Company did execute and deliver to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company a certain instrument, in writing, purporting to assign, transfer and convey to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company all of the property of said West Side Company, including the right, title and interest of said West Side Company in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress approved May fourth, A. D.

1870; a copy of which said instrument is hereto attached marked "Exhibit C" and made a part of this bill.

The purpose, intent and effect of said last described instrument was and is not to operate as a sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by said Act of Congress approved May fourth, A. D. 1870, but to constitute said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the successor of said West Side Company to construct, complete and equip the line of railroad aforesaid, and particularly that part thereof extending from Forest Grove to Astoria, and, in aid thereof, to receive and exercise the grants, franchises and other benefits in that behalf extended by Congress as aforesaid, and upon all of the terms and conditions aforesaid, and not otherwise.

On or about said sixth day of October A. D. 1880, said West Side Company, by action of its Board of Directors and its stockholders, became and was dissolved; and at all times thereafter said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, has assumed, and still assumes, to be the successor of said West Side Company, as aforesaid.

Substantially all transactions subsequent to said last mentioned date relate to and affect both of the aforesaid grants of land. Hereafter in this bill of complaint, for convenience, said grant of land created by said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid Acts amendatory thereof, will be described by the words "East Side Grant;" said grant of land created by said Act of Congress approved May fourth,

A. D. 1870, will be described by the words "West Side Grant;" and both of said grants will be described by the words "said land grants."

VI.

On or about the seventh day of May, A. D. 1881, the financial affairs of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were adjusted in manner following: All of its former capital stock was, by action of its Board of Directors and its stockholders, canceled, for the reasons hereinbefore set forth; the amount of its capital stock was then established, and at all times since has remained, and still is, in the total sum of Nineteen Million Dollars ($19,000,000), composed of Twelve Million Dollars so-called preferred stock and Seven Million Dollars so-called common stock; and in payment of its then existing indebtedness, with accrued interest thereon, all of said new capital stock was then issued, and ever since has been, and still is, outstanding. By the issuance of said new capital stock, and by the use of a part of the proceeds of a new bond issue hereinafter referred to all of its then existing indebtedness was fully paid and discharged, and the several mortgages and other instruments purporting to secure the same, were canceled and satisfied.

On or about the second day of June, A. D. 1881, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered to Henry Villard, Robert Davie Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees for the owners and holders of said preferred stock so-called, a certain instrument, in writing, purporting to convey to said Trustees all of the lands of both of said land grants, in trust to secure to the owners of said preferred stock so-called, some pretended right or interest in or to said lands, and for certain other purposes, as more particularly appears in said instrument, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit D" and made a part of this bill.

Said deed of trust last described purports to convey, and purports to authorize said Trustees and their successors to sell and convey, said lands to persons other than actual settlers, and in quantities greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, and for purposes other than those prescribed in and by said land grants respectively; and because thereof, and otherwise, said deed of trust was and is in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms, conditions and provisions of each of said land grants respectively.

On or about the twenty-eighth day of June, A. D. 1881, said deed of trust was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, in the State of Oregon, in Book 27 of Mortgages, at page 179; and thereafter, and at about the same time, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by either of said land grants.

Thereafter such proceedings were had and action taken under the terms of said deed of trust, and by and with the consent and co-operation of the defendant

Oregon and California Railroad Company, that the defendant Stephen T. Gage became, and he now is, the sole surviving Trustee thereunder; and said defendant Stephen T. Gage, individually, and as Trustee as aforesaid, and the defendant Southern Pacific Company as the present owner of all of said preferred stock so-called, claim and assert some right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon said lands or some part thereof, under and by virtue of said deed of trust; but because of the premises, neither of said defendants has any right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon any part of said lands.

By the issuance and negotiation of two separate issues of its corporate bonds, bearing date June first, A. D. 1881, and May twenty-sixth, A. D. 1883, respectively (known and described as "First Mortgage Bonds" and "Second Mortgage Bonds" respectively), the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company did provide further construction funds aggregating approximately Five Million Dollars, and on or about the month of June, A. D. 1881, the work of constructing said East Side Line was resumed, and thereafter was continued until on or about the month of January, A. D. 1884. During said last mentioned period of construction, said East Side Line was constructed and extended from said Roseburg to a point about one and one-quarter miles southerly from Ashland, in the State of Oregon, a total distance of approximately one hundred and forty-five (145) miles.

On or about the said month of January, A. D. 1884, said last mentioned construction funds became exhausted, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company again became bankrupt and insolvent, and the work of construction was again abandoned, and was not resumed until the month of April, A. D. 1887, as hereinafter set forth.

On or about the nineteenth day of January, A. D. 1885, said First and Second Mortgage Bonds being still outstanding, in a suit then instituted and pending in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon, wherein certain of the holders of said First Mortgage Bonds were plaintiffs, and said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and others were defendants, the railroad lines and other property of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were placed in the hands of a Receiver then and there appointed therefor by said Court.

On or about the twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, and during the pendency of said receivership, the defendant Southern Pacific Company acquired, and thereafter exercised ownership and control of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as hereinafter more specifically set forth; and, subsequently, under the direction and influence of said defendant Southern Pacific Company, certain breaches and violations of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively hereinafter complained of were committed.

And to the end that Your Honors may be further advised in the premises, and particularly concerning the nature and purpose of the several negotiations and transactions pertaining to, and resulting in, the absorption of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company by the defendant Southern Pacific Company (in paragraph VII hereof, set forth), your Orator says, that on and prior to said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, the general status of said land grants was as follows, to wit:

Under said East Side grant, during the years 1871 to 1877 inclusive, patents for approximately 323,000 acres of land (being lands contiguous to the first 125 miles of said East Side Line), were applied for by, and issued to, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company as the successor of said East Side Company; except as aforesaid, no patents under said East Side grant were issued until the year 1893.

Under said West Side grant, no patents were ever issued prior to the year 1895.

The total length of said East Side Line is approximately 367 miles; with the exception of the northerly 197 miles thereof, no part of said East Side Line was constructed within the times prescribed by the terms of said East Side grant; and on said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, the southerly portion thereof, extending from Ashland to the southern boundary line of the State of Oregon, still remained unconstructed. Of the West Side Line, that part thereof extending from Forest Grove to Astoria, was never constructed, and because of the premises, the aforesaid granted lands contiguous to said unconstructed portion, were, by Act of Congress approved January thirty-first, A. D. 1885, entitled, "An Act to declare forfeiture of certain lands granted to aid in the construction of a railroad in Oregon," forfeited to, and the ownership thereof resumed by, the United States of America.

Of the aforesaid granted lands, approximately 250,000 acres had been sold prior to said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887; and your Orator is informed and believes, and therefore states, that nearly all of the lands so disposed of were sold to actual settlers, and in small quantities, although in many instances in quantities and for prices slightly in excess of the aforesaid limitations prescribed by said land grants respectively.

VII.

On or about the month of January, A. D. 1885, a certain railroad syndicate known as the "Southern Pacific System," controlling substantially all railroad lines in the southwestern part of the United States, and particularly on the Pacific Coast south of the State of Oregon, including the Central Pacific Railroad Company (which had theretofore become the successor to the grants, franchises and other benefits in the State of California, under said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866), organized, under the general incorporation law of the State of Kentucky, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as a general holding company for said syndicate; and, on or about the month of March, A. D. 1885, said defendant Southern Pacific Company acquired, and ever since has exercised, a controlling interest in each of the corporations constituting said Southern Pacific System; and, at about the same time, became, and ever since has been, the lessee of each of said corporations, whereby it came into possession of, and at all times thereafter has operated, all of said railroad lines.

Several of the constituent companies of said Southern Pacific System held lands granted by the United States in aid of the construction of their respective lines of railroad, aggregating many millions of acres. Shortly after its organization, the defendant Southern Pacific Company established a general land department, with offices at the city of San Francisco, in the State of California, under the charge of a certain officer known as its land agent, and thereupon assumed, and thereafter exercised, through its said land agent, control over the handling and disposing of all of the lands of its constituent companies.

Shortly after the affairs of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were placed in the hands of a Receiver, as hereinbefore set forth, said defendant Southern Pacific Company, designing to extend its aforesaid railroad system and its aforesaid land holdings by acquiring ownership and control of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, in that behalf entered into negotiations with said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and the bondholders and stockholders thereof and certain other parties hereinafter named; and, for the purpose thereof, the stockholders of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company became and were organized under the name "Stockholders Committee," certain of the owners of the aforesaid mortgage bonds became and were organized under the name "Frankfort Bondholders Committee," and certain other of the owners of said bonds became and were organized under the name "London Bondholders Committee," said Bondholders Committees representing the owners of substantially all of the aforesaid First and Second Mortgage Bonds of said company.

On or about the twenty-eighth day of March, A. D. 1887, a certain contract in writing was entered into by and between said defendant Southern Pacific Company, said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, the defendant Union Trust Company, said Stockholders Committee, said London Bondholders Committee, said Frankfort Bondholders Committee, and the Pacific Improvement Company (a corporation organized as hereinafter set forth), a copy of all of the terms of which contract is hereto attached marked "Exhibit E" and made a part of this bill.

By virtue of said last described contract, all of the corporate securities of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were acquired by the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as hereinafter set forth; and the general purpose and effect of said contract were such that said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company (together with its said lines of railroad), was absorbed by, and merged into, said Southern Pacific System, and the independent corporate existence thereof virtually ceased. But it manifestly appears from the subsequent conduct of said defendant Southern Pacific

Company, and your Orator charges and states, that at the time of the negotiation and execution of said last described contract, it was the purpose and design of said defendant Southern Pacific Company to secure control of the aforesaid land grants, and to divert the same from the aforesaid lawful uses and purposes thereof, to the exclusive use, benefit and enrichment of said defendant Southern Pacific Company; and to that end, said last described contract was, by the parties thereto, so conditioned, and the conditions, options and provisions thereof were so exercised and performed, that said defendant Southern Pacific Company did thereafter maintain said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company a corporation in name and form only, as a mere instrumentality and device, to accomplish, and at the same time to conceal its aforesaid purpose and design, and in that behalf to obtain and dispose of said lands in the name of, and under the guise and pretense of the administration and exercise of the aforesaid land grants by, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company; and to that end, certain proceedings were had and transactions entered into, including that certain contract of lease and that certain mortgage deed hereinafter set forth.

Pursuant to the terms of said contract of March twenty-eighth, A. D. 1887, on or about the twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, all of the capital stock and all of said Second Mortgage Bonds of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were transferred, assigned and delivered to said Pacific Improvement Company; and all of said First Mortgage Bonds were transferred, assigned and delivered to the defendant Southern Pacific Company.

During all the times mentioned in this bill as to it, said Pacific Improvement Company was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, and wholly owned, controlled and directed by the owners of a majority of the capital stock of the defendant Southern Pacific Company. The defendant Southern Pacific Company was the actual purchaser of said capital stock and said Second Mortgage Bonds, and paid all the purchase price therefor, and said Pacific Improvement Company never had any beneficial interest therein; but, under the direction and influence of said defendant Southern Pacific Company, said Pacific Improvement Company was made a nominal party to said contract of March twenty-eighth, A. D. 1887, for the purpose of concealing the true facts in the premises.

Said Pacific Improvement Company held said capital stock of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company for the use and benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, until on or about the ninth day of April, A. D. 1901, and on or about said last mentioned date, all of said capital stock was transferred to the defendant Southern Pacific Company, which, at all times thereafter, has been, and still is, the owner and holder thereof. At all times since said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, the defendant Southern Pacific Company has controlled and directed the election of directors and officers of said defendant Oregon and Cali- fornia Railroad Company, and has directed and controlled the management and conduct and all of the corporate acts of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, including all transactions and proceedings in this bill set forth.

Pursuant to the terms of said contract of March twenty-eighth, A. D. 1887, on or about the third day of January, A. D. 1888, the defendant Southern Pacific Company and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company entered into a certain contract of lease in writing, bearing date the first day of July, A. D. 1887, whereby all of the railroad and telegraph lines and other property of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were leased to the defendant Southern Pacific Company for the term of forty years, upon certain terms and conditions, all of which more specifically appear in said instrument, a copy of all of the terms of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit F," and made a part of this bill; which said contract of lease remained in full force and effect until on or about the first day of August, A. D. 1893, upon which last named date the defendant Southern Pacific Company and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company entered into a further contract of lease in writing, bearing date the first day of August, A. D. 1893, whereby all of the railroad and telegraph lines and other property of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were leased to the defendant Southern Pacific Company for the term of thirty-four years, upon certain terms and conditions, all of which more specifically appear in said instrument, a copy of all of the terms of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit G," and made a part of this bill; which said last described contract of lease at all times since said first day of August, A. D. 1893, has been, and still is, in full force and effect. Pursuant to said contracts of lease, the defendant Southern Pacific Company did, on or about the sixth day of June, A. D. 1888, enter into possession of all of the property leased as aforesaid, and at all times thereafter has been, and still is, in full possession thereof, and engaged in the operation of said lines of railroad, and during all of said times has enjoyed, and still is enjoying, all of the benefits and profits thereof.

Pursuant to the terms of said contract of March twenty-eighth, A. D. 1887, and under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, on or about the third day of January, A. D. 1888, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered to the defendant Union Trust Company a certain instrument in writing, bearing date of July first, A. D. 1887, purporting to mortgage and convey in trust to the defendant Union Trust Company, certain of the property of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, for certain purposes, and upon certain terms and conditions therein expressed, and, among others, to secure the payment of certain bonds thereafter to be issued and negotiated in the name of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, a copy of which said instrument is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit H," and made a part of this

By that certain provision of said instrument last described, to wit:

"And all the property, real, personal or mixed, which on the twelfth day of May, 1887, was covered by the mortgage securing the then existing First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company," reference was had, and intended to be had, to a certain deed of trust, executed by said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees, bearing date June first, A. D. 1881, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit I," and made a part of this bill.

On or about the eighteenth day of January, A. D. 1888, said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, in the State of Oregon, in Book 63 of Mortgages, at page 437; and thereafter, and about the same time, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by either of said land grants.

Pursuant to the premises, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company did execute, and the defendants Southern Pacific Company and Union Trust Company did negotiate and deliver, certain of the bonds provided for by said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, said bonds bearing even date therewith, of which approximately Seventeen Million, Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($17,500,000) in amount are still outstanding, the exact amount whereof is to your Orator unknown. All of said bonds inured to the exclusive benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company and were used by the defendant Southern Pacific Company to purchase the securities of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as aforesaid, and to complete the construction of, and improve, the lines of railroad leased by it as aforesaid. By reason of the premises, said bonds in fact represent and constitute the indebtedness of the defendant Southern Pacific Company; and the payment of all of said bonds, both as to principal and interest, was and is, by endorsement thereon in writing, guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company.

In so far as said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, relates to any of said granted lands, if at all, it purports to convey, and purports to authorize the defendant Union Trust Company and its successors to sell and convey, said lands to persons other than actual settlers, and in quantities greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, and for purposes other than those prescribed in and by said land grants respectively; and because of the premises in this bill set forth, said mortgage deed was and is in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms, conditions and provisions of each of said land grants respectively.

The defendant Union Trust Company, individually, and as Trustee for the holders and owners of said bonds, claims some right, title, interest or lien, in, to or upon some of said granted lands, under and by virtue of said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887; but because of the premises, the defendant Union Trust Company has no right, title, interest or lien, in, to or upon any of said lands, either in its own behalf, or as Trustee as aforesaid.

In the meantime and during the year 1887 (commencing in the month of April and ending in the month of December), the last section of said East Side Line, extending from Ashland aforesaid to the southern boundary line of the State of Oregon, was constructed by said Pacific Improvement Company, under some form of contract with the defendant Southern Pacific Company, the particulars whereof are to your Orator unknown; but, in furtherance of its aforesaid purpose and design, on or about the sixth day of June, A. D. 1887, the defendant Southern Pacific Company did instigate and cause the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and said Pacific Improvement Company to enter into a certain contract, by the terms of which the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company agreed to pay for said work of construction in its said bonds thereafter to be issued and guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as hereinbefore set forth. And your Orator says that in truth and in fact, at the time of the execution of said contract of June sixth, A. D. 1887, a large part of said work of construction had been performed under some prior contract, as hereinbefore set forth.

On or about the sixth day of June, A. D. 1888, the aforesaid receivership proceedings were dismissed and said Receiver was discharged; all of said First Mortgage Bonds and said Second Mortgage Bonds (not including said issue of bonds dated July 1st, A. D. 1887), together with all mortgages and trust deeds securing the payment thereof, were canceled and discharged; and thereupon the defendant Southern Pacific Company entered into possession of all of the property of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company pursuant to the terms of said contract of lease, as hereinbefore set forth.

VIII.

Immediately after said sixth day of June, A. D. 1888, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, through its aforesaid land department, assumed, and at all times thereafter has exercised, absolute control over the disposition and sale of the aforesaid granted lands of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company; conducting all business, however, in the name of the latter company.

Until about the year 1893, there was no marked change in the manner of the disposition of said lands, but, in the meantime, and under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, preparations were made for the future exploitation of said land grants, to wit:

On or about the month of June, A. D. 1888, a large force of timber cruisers and land examiners was organized and thereafter was kept employed until all of said lands had been examined and appraised and prices fixed thereon without regard to the aforesaid limitations prescribed by said land grants; and your Orator says, that as to at least eighty per cent (80%) of all of said granted lands, the first sale price fixed thereon and the lowest price for which the same were ever offered for sale was greatly in excess of the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre.

During the years 1891 and 1892, anticipating and seeking to evade responsibility for the contemplated violations of the terms and conditions of said grants, and under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and the defendant Union Trust Company adopted quit-claim form of contracts and conveyances for use in making sales of said lands, and thereafter refused to contract for, or give, any other form of conveyance, except in cases where, by prior contracts, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company had obligated itself to do otherwise.

Commencing with about the year 1891, patents were rapidly applied for and obtained, the amount patented under said East Side grant, commencing with the year 1893, aggregating approximately 2,450,000 acres, and the amount patented under said West Side grant, commencing with about the year 1895, aggregating approximately 128,000 acres, being the only patents ever applied for or issued under said West Side grant. No patents have been issued since the year 1906, under either of said land grants, for reasons hereinafter explained.

In the meantime, the defendant Southern Pacific Company was engaged in developing a market and demand for said lands among wealthy land speculators and timber men, aided in that behalf by its well-equipped organization therefor, and by an extensive acquaintance previously established by said land department in the sale and disposition of its other land holdings hereinbefore mentioned. A sudden and rapidly increasing demand for said lands in large quantities and at rapidly increasing prices, was developed, commencing with about the year 1894.

Taking advantage of the opportunity to violate the terms and conditions of said land grants, promoted and developed as aforesaid, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, from about the year 1894 until about January first, A. D. 1903, sold and disposed of said granted lands in manner and upon terms in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, and with the sole object of securing the greatest possible financial benefit therefrom; and in that behalf a large quantity of said lands was sold to speculators and others than actual settlers, and for speculation and purposes other than actual settlement, and in quantities greatly in excess of one-quarter section to one purchaser, to wit: in quantities from one thousand to forty-five thousand acres to a single purchaser, and for prices greatly in excess of $2.50 per acre, to wit: for prices from $5 to

Of said granted lands the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company (in manner aforesaid) has heretofore made approximately 5,306 sales, aggregating approximately 820,000 acres, that is to say:

	Sales.	Acres.
Sales in quantities not exceeding one-quarter section	4930	296,000
Sales in quantities exceeding one-quarter section	376	524,000

Substantially all of said 524,000 acres sold in quantities exceeding a quarter section to one purchaser as aforesaid (and a considerable portion of said other lands sold as aforesaid), were sold to speculators and others than actual settlers and for the purpose of speculation and not for the purpose of settlement and for prices greatly in excess of two dollars and fifty cents per acre. And of said 524,000 acres sold in quantities exceeding one-quarter section to one purchaser as aforesaid, approximately 478,000 acres (or about 90 per cent thereof) were sold or conveyed since the year 1897; and of said 478,000 acres, approximately 370,000 acres were sold to 38 purchasers in quantities exceeding 2,000 acres to each purchaser.

Nearly all sales were made by contracts providing for payment of purchase price in from five to ten equal annual installments, and execution of conveyance upon final payment. And although sales were suspended on or about January first, A. D. 1903, as hereinafter stated, many contracts of sale were then pending, as to which the installments falling due have been collected and conveyances executed from time to time down to and including the present, and many of such contracts are still pending.

Of the total sales made as aforesaid, approximately 4,476 have been fully executed and conveyances given aggregating approximately 646,000 acres; and approximately 880 executory contracts are still pending, aggregating approximately 174,000 acres.

For the more specific information of Your Honors, your Orator has prepared a schedule setting forth all said conveyances heretofore made and all said pending contracts, stated separately as to each of said land grants, which schedule is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit J," and made a part of this bill. In said schedule, conveyances are appropriately classified by years, and also according to quantity of land conveyed and purchase price; pending contracts are classified according to quantity of land sold. Your Orator is not informed as to the exact time said pending contracts were negotiated or executed or as to the exact purchase price thereof; but your Orator is informed and believes and therefore states, that all of said pending contracts were negotiated and entered into since the first day of January, A. D. 1898, and prior to the first day of January, A. D. 1908, and that the average purchase price thereof is approximately Ten Dollars per acre. Said schedule (Exhibit J) was compiled on the first day of July, A. D. 1908, but no subsequent transactions affect the matters therein stated, except that a few of said pending contracts have since said compilation matured and merged into final conveyances.

As to the statements contained herein (including said Exhibit J) concerning the number of sales, quantity of land sold, and the purchase price thereof, transactions consisting of executory contracts of sale, which were rescinded or cancelled for any reason, and which therefore neither merged into deeds nor constitute pending contracts at the present time, are not included in any of said computations. Transactions relating to that part of said West Side grant which was forfeited to your Orator, as aforesaid, are not included in said computations.

Except as otherwise specifically stated, all statements in this bill concerning the manner of selling and disposing of said lands, apply to each of said land grants.

As between the parties thereto, said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, to the defendant Union Trust Company, has been treated as a lien upon all of said granted lands which remained unsold on the twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887. As to all lands of the last described class which have been sold since said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, the defendant Union Trust Company has received substantially all of the purchase price, and has joined in the execution of all conveyances. The exact amount thus received by the defendant Union Trust Company, and the specific application thereof, are to your Orator unknown; but your Orator says that the proceeds of all sales made since said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, have inured to the exclusive benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, by application in payment of the aforesaid bonds guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company, or otherwise.

IX.

In the month of October, A. D. 1901, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, with all of its constituent lines, became merged into that certain railroad system known as the "Harriman Lines," which said railroad system at all times thereafter has held a monopoly of railroad transportation affecting a large part of the United States, and particularly in the State of Oregon, south of Portland.

Thereupon a land department was organized and established at the city of San Francisco, to handle, exploit and manipulate all of the lands of the constituent companies of said Harriman Lines, including the aforesaid land grants of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company. All transactions concerning the last named land grants were conducted as before in the name of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company. Sales were continued as before until on or about January first, A. D. 1903.

On said first day of January, A. D. 1903, there remained unsold of said granted lands approximately 2,373,000 acres, consisting of approximately 2,080,000 acres which have been heretofore patented under said land grants, and approximately 293,000 acres of unpatented lands which are now claimed by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company under and by virtue of said land grants. Said lands remaining unsold as aforesaid will hereinafter be described by the words "said unsold lands."

Approximately 1,800,000 acres of said unsold lands are situated southerly from Eugene, and constitute nearly one-half, in alternate sections, of all lands within approximately forty miles of said line of railroad from Eugene to the southerly boundary line of the State of Oregon, only a small portion of said granted lands in that part of the East Side grant having ever been sold. The territory in which said unsold lands are situated was and is wholly dependent for railroad transportation on the railroad lines of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, now operated by the defendant Southern Pacific Company as one of the constituent companies of said Harriman Lines as aforesaid.

Since said first day of January, A. D. 1903, and particularly during the last preceding two years, certain persons exceeding one thousand in number have severally applied to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase certain of said unsold lands in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, or a quarter section to each one of them, said applicants to purchase intending and desiring to purchase said lands so applied for by them respectively for the purpose of actually settling thereupon and making a permanent home thereof, and several of said applicants to purchase having actually settled and established a permanent home upon the land so applied for by them respectively; and at the time of said applications to purchase each of said applicants did tender to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents for each acre of the lands so applied for as the purchase price thereof.

And in addition to the said applicants to purchase, a large number of persons are ready and willing to settle upon said lands, and to purchase the same for the purpose of actual settlement thereupon and of making a permanent home thereof, in quantities, for the price, and upon terms as prescribed by said land grants respectively, but are deterred therefrom by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as hereinafter stated.

Notwithstanding the premises, and in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company as one of the constituent companies of said Harriman Lines, on or about the first day of January, A. D. 1903, withdrew from sale all of said unsold lands, and at all times thereafter has refused, and still refuses, to sell any part thereof to actual settlers or for purposes of actual settlement, or in quantities or for prices as prescribed by the terms of said land grants respectively, or at all; and particularly has at all times refused, and still does refuse, to entertain any of the aforesaid applications to purchase, or to sell any of the lands applied for as aforesaid, to the persons aforesaid, upon the terms aforesaid, or upon any terms whatsoever. And ever since said first day of January, A. D. 1903, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has not only failed and neglected to encourage or promote the settlement of said lands, or the purchase thereof by actual settlers, or for the purpose of actual settlement, but by divers means and methods has at all times discouraged, obstructed, forbidden and prevented the settlement of said lands or any part thereof, and the purchase thereof or any part thereof, upon the terms prescribed by said land grants, or otherwise, by actual settlers or for the purpose of actual settlement.

Since said first day of January, A. D. 1903, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed, and now asserts, an absolute and unconditional estate in and to all of said unsold lands, and has attempted, and still does attempt, to convert its aforesaid conditional estate into an unconditional estate, in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants. And by reason of the aforesaid nominal corporate character of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and the further premises herein set forth, the unconditional estate so asserted in its name has inured to the benefit of, and has been exercised by, the defendant Southern Pacific Company as one of the constituent companies of said Harriman Lines. The practical effect of the premises is the same as if all of said unsold lands had been conveyed to the defendant Southern Pacific Company for the use and benefit of said railroad syndicate.

By reason of the premises, and in violation of the express terms and conditions as well as the plain intendment of said land grants respectively, all of said unsold lands, and the full value thereof, have been converted to the use and benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as one of the constituent companies of the said Harriman Lines; and a virtual land monopoly has been created, and ever since said first day of January, A. D. 1903, has been maintained, and hereafter will be maintained, for the selfish uses and purposes of the defendant Southern Pacific Company and said railroad syndicate, enabling said railroad syndicate, among other things, to control and restrict commercial and industrial development of the territory tributary to said line of railroad, and thereby prevent the construction and establishment of competing railroad lines, which would naturally be attracted by the increase in production that would attend a normal and unrestricted development of industrial and commercial resources, if said granted lands should be sold to actual settlers and for the purpose of actual settlement pursuant to the terms and conditions of said land grants.

And your Orator says, that because of the premises, the industrial and commercial development of those portions of the State of Oregon wherein are situated said unsold lands, has been, and will continue to be, seriously retarded if not completely checked.

Except as otherwise specifically stated, all statements herein contained concerning the withdrawal of said lands from sale, the circumstances, purposes and effects thereof, together with the subsequent opportunities to sell said lands to actual settlers and for the purpose of actual settlement, and the conduct of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company in relation thereto, apply to each of said land grants.

A schedule of all of said unsold lands which have heretofore been patented, described by governmental subdivision, tabulated by counties, and separately stated as to each of said land grants, is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit K," and made a part of this bill. Said schedule has been prepared from the annual return of said lands for purposes of taxation, made by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to the County Assessors of the several counties in which said lands are situated; said annual tax returns purport to contain all of said granted lands which have been heretofore patented and which remain unsold, and your Orator is informed and believes, and therefore states, that the same is correct, but concerning which a full discovery is desired herein. Your Orator is unable to set forth with particularity the unpatented lands claimed as aforesaid, as to which, therefore, a full discovery is desired.

None of said unsold lands have ever been reduced to possession, or in any way improved, unless it be by persons claiming to have settled thereupon, and seeking to purchase the same, as hereinbefore, and hereinafter stated. The reasonable present value of said unsold lands exceeds the sum of $40,000,000.

None of said unsold lands now are, or ever were, necessary to reserve for depots, stations, side tracks, wood sheds, standing ground, or any other needful uses in operating any of said railroad lines or any part thereof, and no part of said lands ever was reserved or used, or now is reserved or used, or is intended to be reserved or used, for any of said purposes.

In addition to the purchase price received from the aforesaid sales of said lands, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has received and enjoyed certain other benefits on account of said granted lands, to wit:

A large number of contracts of sale have been forfeited because of defaults in payment of the annual installments falling due thereon, and the installments previously paid have been retained. Your Orator is not advised as to the exact amount realized in this manner, but is informed and believes, and therefore states, that it exceeds the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000). A full discovery in the premises is hereby sought.

A considerable portion of said lands has, from time to time, been leased for certain rentals paid therefor to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company. Your Orator is not advised as to the amount realized in this manner and a full discovery in the premises is hereby sought.

The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has cut and used large quantities of timber growing upon said lands, and has also sold large quantities of said timber, receiving the consideration therefor. Your Orator is not advised as to the amount realized in this manner, but is informed and believes, and therefore states, that it exceeds the sum of Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($200,000). A full discovery in the premises is hereby sought.

And in divers other ways the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has received and enjoyed financial benefits on account of said granted lands, the particulars concerning which are unknown to your Orator, and a full discovery in the premises is hereby sought.

XI.

The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has repeatedly threatened, and still threatens to, and will, unless restrained therefrom, sell, contract for sale, convey, or in some manner encumber or impair the title of, said unsold lands or some part thereof, in violation of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively; and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has heretofore cut large quantities of the timber growing upon said unsold lands and has otherwise committed waste thereupon, and by contract and otherwise, has permitted and invited others so to do; and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company threatens to, and will, unless restrained therefrom by this Court, continue to commit waste upon said unsold lands and particularly as to the timber and other natural products thereof, and will continue to permit, contract for and invite others so to do, to the great and irreparable injury of your Orator in the premises.

XII.

Until the year 1894 there was substantially no demand for said granted lands, except for the purpose of settlement and by persons of limited means able to purchase said lands only in small quantities and at reasonable prices, and nearly all sales were of that character. During a large part of said period, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company maintained an immigration bureau, engaged in inducing immigration and settlement upon said lands, and ostensibly was not otherwise engaged in soliciting or promoting sales. By reason of the premises, the occasional violations of the terms and conditions of said land grants occurring during said period, were concealed and were generally unknown, until ascertained by your Orator as hereinafter stated.

As hereinbefore set forth, a sudden demand arose for said lands commencing about the year 1894, among wealthy speculators and timber men, promoted and developed as aforesaid; and the greater part of the substantial wrongs and violations herein complained of were committed subsequent to that time. But your Orator says that nearly all of the sales consummated after that time were made by executory contracts of sale, which were not placed of record, and which did not merge into deeds for many years thereafter, and a considerable portion of which are still pending. Many of the conveyances for excessive quantities of said lands were not placed of record until recently, and many are still unrecorded. In many instances of sales in excessive quantities, the lands were attempterd to be conveyed by several deeds, each of which was for a small quantity of land, whereby the true facts were concealed.

On or about the first day of January, A. D. 1903, all of said unsold lands were withdrawn from sale, and thereafter converted to certain wrongful and unlawful uses and purposes, as hereinbefore set forth. But, designing to conceal the premises from your Orator and the general public, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has, from time to time, falsely and deceitfully represented that said lands were withdrawn from sale for divers temporary reasons, and with the intention of resuming the sale thereof. An alleged confusion of the records of said land department, the alleged destruction of said records during the San Francisco fire, and other similar excuses were successively used to conceal the true character of said transaction.

By reason of the premises, the several wrongful and unlawful transactions in this bill complained of, were concealed from, and wholly unknown to, your Orator, until ascertained as hereinafter stated. On or about the 14th day of February, A. D. 1907, because of the great injury inflicted upon commercial and industrial conditions as aforesaid, and it having become manifest that the several aforesaid representations concerning the withdrawal of said lands from sale were false, the Legislature of the State of Oregon adopted and communicated to your Orator a certain memorial charging in general terms, the true facts in the premises (a copy of which memorial is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit L," and made a part of this bill); whereupon the further issuance of patents was suspended, and an investigation of the subject was instituted by your Orator, through its Attorney General, which investigation was concluded on or about the month of January, A. D. 1908. Thereupon the subject was presented to the Congress of the United States, and thereafter, by Joint Resolution, approved April thirtieth, A. D. 1908, Congress did provide as follows:

"That the Attorney General of the United States be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to institute and prosecute any and all suits in equity, actions at law, and other proceedings which he may deem adequate and appropriate to enforce any and all rights and remedies of the United States of America in any manner arising or growing out of or pertaining to either or any of the following described Acts of Congress, to wit: 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July twenty-fifth, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-Six, as amended by the Acts approved June twenty-fifth, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-Eight, and April tenth, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-Nine; * * * * *' Also 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon,' approved May fourth, Eighteen Hundred and Seventy, including all rights and remedies in any manner relating to the lands, or any part thereof, granted by either or any of said Acts; and in and by any and all such suits, actions or proceedings, the Attorney General shall, in such manner as he shall deem appropriate, assert all rights and remedies existing in favor of the United States, relating to the subject of such suits, actions and proceedings, including the claim on behalf of the United States that the lands granted by each of said Acts respectively, or any part thereof, have been and are forfeited to the United States by reason of any breaches or violations of any of the terms or conditions of either or any of said Acts which may be alleged and established in any such suits, actions or proceedings; it not being intended hereby to determine the right of the United States to any such forfeiture or forfeitures, but it being intended to fully authorize the Attorney General in and by such suits, actions or proceedings to assert on behalf of the United States and the court or courts before which such suits, actions or proceedings may be instituted or pending to entertain, consider, and adjudicate the claim and right of the United States to such forfeiture or forfeitures, and if found to enforce the same."

Pursuant to the provisions of said last mentioned Joint Resolution of Congress, this suit is instituted.

XIV.

By reason of the several aforesaid breaches and violations of the aforesaid terms, conditions and provisions of said land grants respectively, certain of said granted lands and certain estates in certain of said granted lands have been, and are, forfeited to your Orator, the United States of America, free from any and all right, title, interest, lien or claim of the defendants herein, or either or any of them or any one claiming by, through or under them or either or any of them. Among the lands and estates in lands so forfeited to your Orator, are to wit:

(1) All of said unsold lands;

(2) Any and all right, title and interest of any kind or nature whatsoever, vested, contingent or expectant, if any, of the defendants herein, or either or any of them, in, to or concerning any of the lands granted under, or by, either of said land grants respectively.

Pursuant to the authority and direction contained in said joint resolution of Congress approved April 30th, A. D. 1908, your Orator does hereby assert title to, and does hereby resume the title of, all of said lands and estates in lands forfeited to your Orator as aforesaid.

In addition to the lands and estates in lands above specified, certain of said granted lands which have been heretofore sold in violation of the terms and conditions of said land grants, and certain estates therein, likewise have been and are forfeited to your Orator, but are not included in this suit, for reasons following, to wit:

The lands disposed of in violation of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, as aforesaid, were sold, contracted for sale, or conveyed to a large number of purchasers. Including alleged rights of succession by purchase, conveyance, mortgage, descent, devise and otherwise, more than three thousand (3,000) persons, firms and corporations residing in divers parts of the United States and other parts of the world, now assert some right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon the lands sold, contracted for sale and conveyed in violation of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, as aforesaid. The names and places of residence of only a few of said persons, firms and corporations are as yet known to your Orator, and because of the multiplicity and complexity of said transactions, your Orator will be unable to ascertain them in time to include said parties in this suit. Said lands were sold and purchased as aforesaid, and alleged subsequent rights have been acquired therein, under greatly varying circumstances and conditions, and because of the premises, it would be inequitable to attempt to secure an adjudication of the rights of all of said parties by making only a few of them parties defendant as representatives of all thereof. To require the making of all of said persons, firms and corporations parties to this suit, or to otherwise require an adjudication herein of their respective rights in the premises, would indefinitely postpone and ultimately defeat the rights, equities and remedies of your Orator pertaining to said unsold lands, as to which the public interests require a speedy and complete adjudication and enforcement.

Therefore, to the end that justice and equity may be suitably administered in the premises, your Orator institutes this suit for the purpose of obtaining without unnecessary delay, an adjudication and enforcement of the rights, equities and remedies of your Orator against the defendants herein, pertaining to said unsold lands, and otherwise, as more specifically appears in the prayer of this bill; and hereafter, and as soon as your Orator shall be sufficiently advised in the premises, separate and further suits will be instituted for the purpose of asserting and enforcing the rights, equities and remedies now or at any time hereafter existing in favor of your Orator (and not adjudicated or enforced herein) pertaining to any of said granted lands sold or conveyed as aforesaid, or any part thereof, or in any manner arising or growing out of any and all sales and conveyances of said granted lands in violation of any of the terms or conditions of said land grants respectively.

XV.

The property described in said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887 (not including any of said granted lands), is of a value largely in excess of the amount of all of said bonded indebtedness purported to be secured by said mortgage deed, and is ample security therefor; your Orator, however, expressly denies that any of said granted lands are included in the property described in said mortgage deed, or that the defendant Union Trust Company, as trustee or otherwise, or any other person, firm, association or corporation has any right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon any of said lands by virtue of said mortgage deed.

XVI.

Pursuant to the rules and regulations of the Department of the Interior in that behalf duly adopted and in force, all of the aforesaid patents were issued and based upon applications in writing therefor, from time to time filed in the appropriate land office of the United States by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as the successor of said East Side Company and said West Side Company respectively, which said applications contained descriptive lists of the lands so claimed and for which patents were so applied for; and each of which said applications was accompanied and supported by a certain affidavit in writing signed and sworn to by a certain agent of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company thereto duly authorized, to the effect, among other things, that all of the lands so claimed and for which patents were so applied for, were of the character contemplated by the grant under which they were claimed and for which patents were applied for as aforesaid; and believing and relying upon the statements contained in said applications and said affidavits, your Orator issued said patents.

XVII.

In making sales of said lands as aforesaid, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has, in and by its contracts and conveyances relating thereto, and particularly prior to the sixth day of June, A. D. 1898, made certain valuable reservations unto itself, as follows:

"Reserving, however, a strip of land one hundred feet wide, to be used by the Oregon & California Railroad Company for right of way and other purposes, when the railroad of said Oregon & California Railroad Company, or any of its branches, is or shall be located upon the premises; and the right to take all water needed for the operating of said railroad, and also reserving and excepting from said described premises, so much and such parts thereof as may be mineral lands, other than coal and iron."

All of which said reservations, being in effect the creation of permanent estates in its own favor in and to a large part of said granted lands in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, were and are null and void. But, notwithstanding the premises, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and each of the other defendants herein, claims some inchoate right, title or interest, in and to the lands sold as last aforesaid, under and by virtue of said reservations, concerning which a full discovery is hereby sought; and such right, title and interest, if any (which is denied), were and are subject to the right of forfeiture and to the several other rights, equities and remedies of your Orator in the premises, asserted herein.

XVIII.

In addition to the several claims of the defendants in this bill specifically mentioned, the defendants and each of them claim some right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon some or all of said granted lands, the particulars whereof are to your Orator unknown, concerning which a full discovery is hereby sought; and any and all such rights, titles, interests or liens, if any, were and are subject to the right of forfeiture and to the several other rights, equities and remedies of your Orator in the premises, asserted herein.

XIX.

A schedule, accurately setting forth all maps of survey and location filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States pursuant to the provisions of said land grants respectively, separately stated as to each of said land grants, is hereto attached marked "Exhibit M" and made a part of this bill.

A schedule, accurately setting forth the time of the construction and completion of the several sections of said railroad and telegraph lines, together with the examination, approval and acceptance thereof, separately stated as to each of said railroad and telegraph lines, is hereto attached marked "Exhibit N," and made a part of this bill.

A schedule, accurately setting forth the quantity of lands patented from time to time under each of said land grants, compiled by years, and separately stated as to each of said land grants, is hereto attached marked "Exhibit O" and made a part of this bill. All of said patents were applied for by and issued to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as the successor of said East Side Company and said West Side Company respectively.

XX.

Each of the defendants (other than the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage and Union Trust Company) asserts some right, title, or interest in or to certain of said unsold lands; the general nature and basis of the claims of said last described defendants are identical, and are as follows, to wit:

Each of said last described defendants alleges to have in good faith actually settled upon certain of said unsold lands, not exceeding one-quarter section or 160 acres in quantity, with the intention of making a permanent home thereof, and to have applied to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase the lands alleged to have been settled upon as aforesaid, and to have tendered to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the sum of $2.50 for each acre applied for as aforesaid, as the purchase price thereof, and that the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has at all times refused, and still refuses, to entertain said applications to purchase, or to sell or convey to said last described defendants respectively the lands so applied for by them respectively, upon the aforesaid terms, or otherwise.

And by reason of the premises alleged by said last described defendants respectively as aforesaid (the truth whereof is to your Orator unknown) said last described defendants severally assert some right, title or interest in or to the lands so applied for by them respectively as aforesaid; and each of said last described defendants has instituted a suit in equity against the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Stephen T. Gage, and Union Trust Company, the general purpose and nature of which is to compel a sale and conveyance of the lands so applied for to said parties applying to purchase the same respectively, as aforesaid; all of which said suits are still pending, and none of which have proceeded to any issue other than exceptions to certain portions of the several bills in said suits.

The said suit instituted by the defendant Roy W. Minkler is pending in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of the State of Washington; all of the other of said suits are pending in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon.

A schedule accurately setting forth, as to each of said suits, the court number thereof, the names of the parties thereto, the date of the institution thereof, and a description of the land involved therein, separately stated as to each of said land grants, is hereto attached marked "Exhibit P" and made a part of this bill.

Your Orator leaves said defendants to more specifically set forth herein their respective alleged rights in the premises, as they may be advised.

Unless enjoined therefrom as hereinafter prayed, said defendants instituting said suits as aforesaid will proceed, or attempt to proceed, therein to some form of final judgment or decree. Each of said suits relates to and materially affects the rights and equities of your Orator in the premises. The rights and equities of your Orator in this bill set forth, and the relief hereinafter prayed for, relate to and affect all of the aforesaid alleged rights of said defendants respectively. If said suits shall proceed further, the rights and remedies of your Orator in the premises will be hindered, obstructed and delayed, if not substantially prejudiced. And because of the multiplicity of said suits, your Orator has made said persons parties defendant in this suit, to the end that further proceedings in each of said suits instituted and pending as aforesaid may be enjoined, and, if the Court shall so order, said parties be permitted to set forth herein their respective claims, for adjudication.

Wherefore your Orator prays the judgment and decree of this Court,

FIRST.

(1) Adjudging and decreeing that those certain lands, to wit: all of said lands granted by said Act of Congress approved July 25, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid acts amendatory thereof, and all of said lands granted by said Act of Congress approved May 4, A. D. 1870, whether patented or unpatented, now remaining unsold as aforesaid, said lands being hereinbefore described as "said unsold lands," together with those certain lands and estates in lands, to wit: any and all right, title and interest, of any kind or nature whatsoever, vested, contingent or expectant, of the defendants herein, or either or any of them, in, to or concerning any of the lands granted under, or by, either or any of said Acts of Congress, have been and are forfeited to, and the title of all of said lands and estates in lands has been and is reverted to and reinvested in, and all of said lands and estates in lands now are the property of, your Orator, the United States of America; and quieting and confirming the title of your Orator in and to all of said lands and estates in lands, and particularly against any claim of any right, title, interest or lien, in, to or upon the same or any part thereof, by or on behalf of the defendants herein or either or any of them, or any person claiming or to claim under them or either or any of them, and requiring said defendants and each and all of them to forthwith surrender to your Orator, the United States of America, full possession and control of said lands and estates in lands, and every part thereof;

Or, if the foregoing relief shall be denied,

(2) Adjudging and decreeing that all of said lands hereinbefore described as "said unsold lands" are subject to purchase by, and sale and conveyance to, actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, or one quarter section to any one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, pursuant to the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants respectively; and that in that behalf a receiver or receivers be appointed, and be invested with the title and possession of all of said unsold lands, and be authorized and directed, by such method as the Court shall prescribe, to offer for sale, and sell and convey, said lands, to persons of the character, in the quantities, and for the price, as aforesaid, until all of said lands shall have been sold and disposed of in manner aforesaid; and providing that during the continuance of said receivership, said receiver or receivers be authorized and directed, out of any moneys derived from the sale of any of said lands as aforesaid, to pay any and all proper costs, charges and expenses necessary for the care and protection of said lands, and the sale and disposition thereof as aforesaid, including any and all taxes and assessments, if any, which from time to time are properly chargeable against any of said unsold lands which may from time to time remain unsold and undisposed of; and providing for accountings from time to time, in such manner as the Court shall prescribe, and the application and disposition of all moneys and funds which may come into the hands of said receiver or receivers from the sale or disposition of said lands as aforesaid, after the payment of all costs, charges and expenses incurred in the premises as aforesaid, rendering final accounting and final application and disposition of said moneys and funds in such manner, and to such parties, as the Court shall direct;

Or, if the foregoing relief shall be denied,

(3) That a mandatory injunction shall issue out of and under the seal of this Court, commanding and requiring the said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to offer for sale, and sell and convey, said unsold lands to any bona fide actual settler who may apply to purchase the same in good faith, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, or one quarter section, for the price of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, under such restrictions, in such manner and by such method as the Court shall deem adequate and expedient; and providing that any and all persons who may be in any way aggrieved by the refusal or neglect of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to sell or convey said lands to him or them in conformity with the terms hereof, or who may be in any other manner aggrieved in the premises, may hereafter apply to the Court, at the foot of said judgment and decree, for the enforcement thereof in his or their behalf.

SECOND.

That (unless, and except in so far as, said judgment and decree shall otherwise provide), each and all of the defendants herein, their officers and agents, be,

Forever enjoined and restrained from in any manner claiming or asserting any right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon the aforesaid lands and estates in lands, or any part thereof;

And forever enjoined and restrained from in any manner selling, or offering for sale, or conveying, or in any other manner disposing of, any of said lands or estates in lands, or from negotiating, executing or recording any document or instrument, or doing any other act or thing, which shall in any manner affect the use or the title of any of said lands or estates in lands;

And forever enjoined and restrained from going upon any of said lands, and from cutting, removing, or in any other manner using any of the timber, trees or other natural products thereof, and from in any other manner committing waste thereupon, and from in any manner using or interfering with any of said lands or estates in lands, or any part thereof.

THIRD.

That the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Union Trust Company, and any other of the defendants who may have received the same, or any part thereof, do forthwith account for and pay over to your Orator, the United States of America, any and all sums of money which they or either of them may have realized or in any manner received or obtained from or by virtue of the sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by either or any of said acts of Congress, or of any interest in any of said lands, to others than actual settlers, or in quantities exceeding one hundred and sixty acres or one quarter section to any one purchaser, or for a price exceeding the sum of two dollars and fifty cents per acre, together with lawful interest thereon from the time of the receipt thereof; that said last named defendants do forthwith account for and pay over to your Orator any and all sums of money and profits of every name and nature whatsoever, which they or any of them may have realized or obtained from cutting down or in any other manner using the trees, timber or other natural products of any of said lands granted by either or any of said Acts of Congress, or in any other manner from the use, occupation, rents, issues, profits, accretions or increments of said lands, or any part thereof, and growing out of or from the possession thereof, or any interest or use therein, together with interest thereon from the time of the receipt thereof.

FOURTH.

That during the pendency of this suit, each of the defendants John L. Snyder, Julius F. Frahl, Albert E. Thompson, James Barr, Fred Witte, W. A. Anderson, W. H. Anderson, O. M. Anderson, F. E. Williams, Paul Birkenfeld, J. H. Lewis, Francis S. Wiser, W. E. Anderson, Albert Arms, Joseph A. Maxwell, Isaac McKay, J. R. Peterson, D. MacLafferty, Edgar MacLafferty, V. V. McAboy, George C. Moan, Joseph D. Hadley, Henry C. Ott, Fred L. Freebing, William Cain, R. T. Aldrich, James C. O'Neill, Alexander Fauske, Francis Wiest, Cordelia Michael, John B. Wiest, Cyrus Wiest, John Wiest, Thomas Manley Hill, Otto Nelson, Jasper L. Hewitt, B. L. Porter, Frank Wells, C. P. Wells, I. H. Ingram, L. G. Reeves, W. W. Wells, F. M. Rhoades, Marvin Martin, and Roy W. Minkler, and their respective attorneys, be enjoined and restrained from in any manner proceeding further in the suits instituted by them respectively as aforesaid, and particularly described in Exhibit P (which is hereby made a part of this prayer the same as if set forth in full herein) and that upon the final judgment and decree herein said last named defendants and each of them, and their attorneys, be permanently enjoined and restrained as aforesaid.

FIFTH.

That during the pendency of this suit, each of the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage and Union Trust Company, their officers and agents, and all persons, firms and corporations claiming or to claim by, through or under said last named defendants, or either or any of them, be enjoined and restrained from using, occupying, leasing, or in any manner exercising dominion, use, ownership or occupation of, or in any manner whatsoever interfering with, any of said unsold lands, or any part thereof;

And be further enjoined and restrained from cutting, removing, selling, or in any manner whatsoever using, interfering with, or impairing the value of, any of the trees or timber upon, or any other natural products of, said unsold lands, or any part thereof, and from in any manner committing waste upon any of said unsold lands, and particularly as to the timber and other natural products thereof;

And be further enjoined and restrained from selling, conveying, or offering for sale, and from leasing, or offering to lease, or in any other manner disposing of, any of said lands or estates in lands herein alleged to be forfeited to your Orator as aforesaid, or from negotiating, executing or recording any document or instrument, or doing any other act or thing, which shall in any manner affect the use or the title of any of said lands or estates in lands;

And be further enjoined and restrained from contracting with, inviting, inducing, or in any manner whatsoever permitting others to do any of the things aforesaid.

SIXTH.

That your Orator have such other and further relief as the equity of this case may require and to your Honors may seem meet and proper, together with the costs of this suit.

SEVENTH.

And your Orator prays that the defendants, and each of them, be required to make full disclosure and discovery of all the matters aforesaid; and according to the utmost and best of their knowledge, information and belief, full, true, direct and perfect answer make (but not under oath, an answer under oath being hereby waived) to the matters and things hereinbefore stated and charged.

May it please Your Honors to grant unto your Orator a writ of subpoena directed to the said defendants, Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Exhibit A Articles of Incorporation of the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Know All Men by These Presents, That we, the undersigned corporators, Ben Holladay of New York, and Cicero H. Lewis, I. R. Moores, J. C. Hawthorne, and Medorem Crawford, of the State of Oregon, do, by these presents, associate ourselves together as a corporation and body politic, under and by virtue of the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon, approved October 14, A. D. 1862, and amendments thereto, and for such purpose we do, jointly and severally, hereby agree to and with each other to the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

The name assumed by this corporation, and by which it shall be known, is the "Oregon and California Railroad Company."

ARTICLE II.

The duration of this corporation shall be ninety-nine (99) years.

ARTICLE III.

The enterprise, business, pursuit and occupation in which this corporation proposes to engage is to construct a railroad and telegraph line, with all the necessary branches, sidetracks, fixtures, buildings, depots, stations and appurtenances, from Portland, in the State of Oregon, and running thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys to the California line on the southern boundary line of Oregon to connect with the railroad and telegraph line now being constructed northerly through the State of California by the California and Oregon Railroad Company toward the southern boundary of Oregon; and to purchase, own, construct, hold, equip, operate and use all necessary ferries on the line of such road over the Willamette and other rivers, and over any river or rivers on either side of the line of such railroad which may be necessary or proper in crossing freight and passengers to and from the said railroad; to maintain the said railroad and telegraph line in good order, condition and repair, and to operate the said railroad and employ the same and the said telegraph line in the business of transporting passengers and freight and the United States mails, and for the purposes aforesaid, to purchase, take and receive of and from the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, incorporated April 22, A. D. 1867, that portion of its railroad and telegraph line now completed, together with all the property, real, personal and mixed, and the right-of-way of such last named corporation of whatsoever name and nature, and all its rights and franchises of every name and nature, both legal and equitable, which the said last named corporation now has or owned, or to which it is in any way or manner entitled, or hereafter may be entitled to—whether the same is absolute or contingent, and particularly and especially all the right, title, interest, franchise, claim and demand which the said Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon, aforesaid, now has or is entitled to, and to which it may hereafter be entitled under and by virtue of an Act of Congress entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon," approved July 25, 1866, and of all amendments thereto. The purpose of this incorporation being to make such portion of the railroad and telegraph line of said "Oregon Central Railroad Company" which is now completed, a part of the line of railroad and telegraph which this corporation proposes to construct, as aforesaid, from Portland, Oregon, to the California line, and to construct and establish the whole thereof from Portland, in Oregon, to said California line in all respects in accordance with the Act of Congress hereinbefore referred to, and the amendments thereto, and for the purpose of receiving all the benefits of such Act of Congress and amendments thereto, and intended to be conferred thereby on the Oregon Company, and for the purpose of complying with all the provisions of such Act.

ARTICLE IV.

The principal office for the transaction of the business of this corporation shall be kept at the city of Portland, Multnomah County, State of Oregon.

ARTICLE V.

The amount of the capital stock of this corporation is hereby fixed at Twenty Million ($20,000,000) Dollars.

ARTICLE VI.

The amount of each share of such capital stock is hereby placed at One Hundred ($100) Dollars.

In Testimony Whereof, And of our adoption of the foregoing articles of incorporation, we, the undersigned corporators, have hereunto set our hands and seals this 16th day of March, A. D. 1870, in triplicate.

Exhibit B

This indenture, made and entered into at Salem, in the County of Marion, and State of Oregon, this twenty-ninth (29th) day of March, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy (1870), between the Oregon Central Railroad Company, a body corporate incorporated and organized at the city of Salem, in the County of Marion and State of Oregon, on the twenty-second (22d) day of April, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Seven (1867), under and by virtue of the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon, approved October, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Two, entitled, "An Act providing for private incorporation, and the appropriation of private property therefor," and amendments thereto, party of the first part, and the "Oregon and California Railroad Company" a body corporate incorporated and organized at the city of Portland in the County of Multnomah, and State of Oregon, on the seventeenth (17th) day of March, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy (1870), under and by virtue of the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon aforesaid, and amendments aforesaid, party of the second part, witnesseth:

Whereas, The "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, was on the 20th day of October, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight (1868), duly designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, by a joint resolution thereof, as the corporation to take, manage and receive the benefits of an Act of Congress making a grant of lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, in Oregon, to the Central Pacific Railroad in California, entitled, "An Act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon," approved July 25th, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Six (1866), and

Whereas, the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, did afterwards and in pursuance of the Act of Congress aforesaid, and of Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, duly file its assent in writing to the said Act of Congress, and all the provisions thereof, in the office of and with the Secretary of the Interior of the United States of America, at Washington City, District of Columbia; and the said corporation, "Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, party of the first part herein, was recognized by the Department of the Interior as the corporation in Oregon entitled to take and manage the congressional grant hereinbefore referred to, and receive the benefits thereof; and whereas, the said Orgon Central Railroad Company, party of the first part herein, did afterwards proceed to locate the line of said railroad and did locate the same for a long distance, and did prepare and file its maps in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, in strict accordance with all requirements of said Act of Congress of July 25th, 1866, and amendments thereto aforesaid, making such grant of lands and did, prior to the twenty-fifth (25th) day of December, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Nine (1869), fully and in all respects, as required by said Act of Congress and Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, complete the construction of twenty miles of its railroad and telegraph, to-wit:

Commencing at East Portland, in Multnomah County, in the State of Oregon, and running thence in a southerly direction twenty miles and over, and did stock and equip the same in all respects as required by said Act of Congress; and

Whereas, subsequently to December 24th, A. D. 1869, the Commissioners appointed by the President of the United States, under the power vested in him by said Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, aforesaid, to examine and report upon the railroad and telegraph line aforesaid, being built by said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, namely, E. R. Geary, Thos. A. Savier and James H. Fisk, did examine the said twenty miles of railroad and telegraph line, and did make their report thereon to the Government of the United States, as required by said Act of Congress aforesaid, approved July 25th, 1866, making such land grant, and the Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, which report was favorable, and the same was received and accepted by the Government of the United States; and the said twenty miles of railroad and telegraph line so completed and equipped, as aforesaid, were accepted by the Secretary of the Interior of the United States, and the lands granted by the Acts aforesaid, and to which the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, was entitled by virtue of the Acts of Congress aforesaid, and the completion and acceptance of twenty miles of its road, were by an order of the Secretary of the Interior withdrawn from sale and private entry, and for the benefit of said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, its successors and assigns, as in and by said Acts of Congress aforesaid is provided; and

Whereas, said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," of the first part herein, have done large amounts of work toward the construction of its said road, and in addition to said twenty miles so completed, as aforesaid, in locating and grading the track of the same, and has acquired divers personal property, rights-of-way, franchises, privileges, credits and interests, real, personal and mixed, both legal and equitable, absolute and contingent, and

Whereas, the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, was incorporated and organized solely with a view of becoming the assignee of all the property, rights and franchises and privileges of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," for reasons appearing in the subsequent recitals of this conveyance, and for the purpose of carrying out to successful completion the railroad and telegraph line commenced and partly completed as aforesaid, which "Oregon and California Railroad Company" is incorporated and organized in strict accordance with, and with special reference to, a full and complete compliance with said Act of Congress aforesaid, approved July 25th,

1866, and Acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, as will more fully appear, reference being had to the articles of incorporation of such "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon on the seventeenth (17th) day of March, A. D. 1870, and there remaining of record, and made a part of this conveyance, and

Whereas, the Board of Directors of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, did on the 28th day of March, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy, (1870), at their office in the city of Salem, State of Oregon, at a meeting of such Board duly and legally called, unanimously adopt the following resolution, that is to say:

"Whereas, the following communication has this day been received by this company from the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," a corporation incorporated and organized at Portland, Oregon, March 17, 1870, for the purpose of constructing a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, Oregon, southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys, to the south boundary of Oregon, in accordance with an act of Congress approved July 25th, A. D. 1866, granting land for such purpose, and amendments thereto, to-wit:

" 'Office of Oregon and California Railroad Company, Portland, Oregon, March 28th, 1970, to the President and Board of Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon,

" 'Gentlemen: I respectfully beg leave to submit for your consideration the following proposition from the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," which I do in the form of the following resolution of the Board of Directors of that corporation passed March 26th, A. D. 1870, at the office of their company in Portland, to-wit:

" 'Resolved, That the President of this company be and he is hereby authorized and instructed to enter into negotiations with the "Oregon Central Railroad Company" of Salem, Oregon, incorporated April 22nd, 1867, for the purchase by this company of the railroad of such corporation now partly completed, and in progress of construction, including all the rolling stock and other property connected therewith, and including also all the property, real, personal and mixed, now owned by such "Oregon Central Railroad Company," or to which it may in anywise be entitled, and including also all franchises of the said corporation which it now owns or to which it is or may be entitled, by virtue of any act or resolution of Congress, or of the Legislature of the state of Oregon, or in any way or manner; and for such purpose the President of this company is further authorized to agree in writing in the name of this corporation, and under its seal for such purchase by and transfer to, this Company of all such property, rights and franchises upon the following terms, to-wit:

" 'That in consideration of such conveyance, transfer and delivery to this company, it shall agree to and with its directors and stockholders to assume and shall assume and agree to pay all the debts and liabilities of such "Oregon Central Railroad Company" as the same mature and become due and payable, of whatever name and nature, and this company shall indemnify and forever keep harmless the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," from any and all such payments, and from all liabilities whatever of every name and nature, for which said "Oregon Central Railroad Company" may be liable at the date of the acceptance of these propositions. To the propositions contained in the foregoing resolution, an early answer is desired.

" 'Very respectfully,

" 'BEN HOLLADAY,

" 'President of Oregon and California Railroad Company.'

And Whereas, this Company is today indebted in a large amount, to-wit: in a sum not less than Eight Hundred Thousand ($800,000) Dollars, nor more than One Million ($1,000,000) Dollars in gold coin of the United States, and which former sum is equivalent in value under existing circumstances to that of all the property and franchises owned or possessed by this Company, or to which it is in any wise entitled;

"And whereas, there has heretofore existed divers controversies in the courts and there is one suit still pending of a similar nature, wherein the right of this company to use its corporate name, has been and is questioned by another company, and by reason whereof the securities of this company have been weakened and rendered comparatively valueless; and which have prevented this company and its contractors from negotiating the same;

and from proceeding with the construction of its railroad, and which have resulted in this company being driven to a cancellation of its contracts for the construction thereof;

"Therefore, Resolved, that it is the judgment of this Board that it is for the best interest of this company, and all its stockholders, to accept the proposition embodied in the foregoing communication.

"Resolved, that this company do, (subject, however, to approval by a majority vote of the stock of this corporation) accept the foregoing proposition of the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company.'

"Resolved, that the President and Secretary of this company be and they are hereby authorized and directed to enter into an agreement in writing in the name of this company, with said 'Oregon and California Railroad Company,' for a sale of all the property and franchises of this corporation upon the terms embodied in the foregoing proposition, which agreement shall, however, be subject to the approval, or disapproval of a vote of a majority of the stock in this company at a stockholders meeting hereafter to be held."

And Whereas, in pursuance of such last named resolution of the Board of Directors of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company, party of the first part herein, an agreement in writing was entered into between the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, and the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, which agreement bears date March 28th, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy, (1870), and of which the following is a literal copy, to-wit:

"Articles of Agreement made and entered into this 28th day of March, A. D. 1870, between the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' a corporation incorporated at Salem, on the 22nd day of April, A. D. 1867, under the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon, and amendments thereto, party of the first part, and the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company,' a corporation incorporated at Portland, Oregon, on the 17th day of March, A. D. 1870, under the laws of Oregon aforesaid, party of the second part,

"Whereas, the party of the first part herein is the owner of the 'Oregon Central Railroad,' partly completed and in course of construction, and rolling stock and other valuable property and franchises, including all the rights, privileges, benefits, franchises and immunities granted and conferred on the Oregon Company by an Act approved July 25th, 1866, entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland in Oregon,' approved July 25th, A. D. 1866, and amendments thereto, and,

"Whereas, said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' party of the first part herein, is largely indebted to divers persons but principally to Ben Holladay and company in an amount not less than Eight Hundred Thousand ($800,000) Dollars, nor more than One Million ($1,000,- 000) Dollars, the exact amount of which is to be hereafter ascertained, and,

"Whereas, it has been agreed, as will more fully appear by the following communication and propositions presented to the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' party of the first part herein, by the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company,' party of the second part herein and the resolution of the Board of Directors of the said Oregon Central Railroad Company, party of the first part, in answer thereto, that the said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' party of the first part, shall sell and convey unto said 'Oregon and California Railroad Company,' party of the second part, all of the railroad and other property, both real and personal, and all the rights, franchises, privileges and property whatsoever of every name, nature and character, in consideration of an agreement upon the part of the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company' to assume and pay, as they may mature and become due, all the debts and liabilities of every name and nature of the said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' and the further agreement to forever save, indemnify and keep harmless the said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company' and its stockholders and directors from all such debts and liabilities; which communication and proposition so made, as aforesaid, are as follows:

" 'Office of Oregon and California Railroad Company, Portland, Oregon, March 28th, 1870. To the President and Board of Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon.

" 'Gentlemen: I respectfully beg leave to submit for your consideration the following proposition from the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company,' which I do in the form of the following resolution of the Board of Directors of that corporation passed March 26th, A. D. 1870, at the office of their company in Portland, Oregon, to-wit:

" 'Resolved, that the President of this Company be and he is hereby authorized and instructed to enter into negotiations with the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, incorporated April 22nd, 1867, for the purchase by this company of the railroad of such corporation, now partly completed and in progress of construction, including all its rolling stock and other property connected therewith and including also all the property, real, personal and mixed, now owned by such "Oregon Central Railroad Company," or to which it may in anywise be entitled and including also all franchises of the said corporation, which it now owns or to which it is or may be entitled by virtue of any act or resolution of Congress or of the Legislature of the State of Oregon; or in any other way or manner; and for such purpose the President of this company is further authorized to agree in writing in the name of this corporation and under its seal for such purchase by and transfer to this company of all such property, rights and franchises upon the following terms, to-wit:

" 'That in consideration of such conveyance, transfer and delivery to this company, it shall agree to with said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," and to and with its directors and stockholders, to assume and agree to pay all the debts and liabilities of such "Oregon Central Railroad Company," as the same mature and become due and payable, of whatsoever name and nature, and this company shall also indemnify, save and keep harmless the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," from any and all such payments and from all liabilities whatever, of every name and nature, for which said "Oregon Central Railroad Company" may be liable at the date of the acceptance of these propositions'; and

"Whereas, in response to the foregoing communication the said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company' did, on the 28th day of March, A. D. 1870, by the Board of Directors, adopt the following resolution, to-wit:

" 'Whereas, the following communication has this day been received by this company from the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," a corporation incorporated and organized at Portland, Oregon, March 17th, 1870, for the purpose of constructing a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, Oregon, southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys to the south boundary of Oregon, in accordance with an Act of Congress approved July 25th, A. D. 1866, granting lands for such purpose and amendments thereto, to-wit:

" 'Office of Oregon and California Railroad Company, Portland, Oregon, March 28th, 1870. To the President and Board of Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company—Gentlemen: I respectfully beg leave to submit to your consideration the following proposition from the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," which I do in the form of the following resolution of the Board of Directors of that corporation, passed March 26th, A. D. 1870, at the office of their company in Portland, to-wit:

" 'Resolved, that the President of this company be and he is hereby authorized and instructed to enter into negotiations with the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, incorporated April 22nd, 1867, for the purchase by this company of the railroad of such corporation now partly completed and in progress of construction, including all the rolling stock and other property connected therewith and including also all the property, real, personal and mixed, now owned by such "Oregon Central Railroad Company," or to which it may in any wise be entitled, and including also all franchises of said corporation which it now owns or to which it is or may be entitled by virtue of any Act or Resolution of Congress or of the Legislature of the State of Oregon, or in any way or manner; and for such purpose the President of this company is further authorized to agree in writing in the name of this corporation and under its seal for such purchase by and transfer to this company of all such property, rights and franchises, upon the following terms, to-wit:

" 'That in consideration of such conveyance, transfer and delivery to this company, it shall agree to and with said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," and with its directors and stockholders to assume and shall assume and agree to pay all the debts and liabilities of such "Oregon Central Railroad Company" as they mature and become due and payable, of whatever name and nature, and this company shall also indemnify and forever keep harmless the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company" from any and all such payments, and from all liabilities whatever of every name and nature, for which said "Oregon Central Railroad Company" may be liable at the date of the acceptance of these propositions. To the proposition contained in the foregoing resolution, an early answer is desired. Very respectfully, (Signed) Ben Holladay, President of Oregon and California Railroad Company; and

" 'Whereas, this company is today indebted in a large amount, to-wit: a sum not less than Eight Hundred Thousand ($800,000) Dollars, nor more than One Million ($1,000,000) Dollars in gold coin of the United States, and which former sum is equivalent in value under existing circumstances to that of all the property and franchises owned or possessed by this company, or to which it is anywise entitled; and

" 'Whereas, there has heretofore existed divers controversies in the courts, and there is one suit still pending of a similar nature wherein the right of this company to use its corporate name has been and is questioned by another company, and by reason whereof the securities of this company have been weakened and rendered comparatively valueless, and which have prevented this company and its contractors from negotiating the same and from proceeding with the construction of its railroad, and which have resulted in this company being driven to a cancelation of its contracts for the construction thereof;

" 'Therefore, Resolved, that it is the judgment of this Board that it is for the best interest of this company and all of its stockholders to accept the proposition embodied in the foregoing communication.

" 'Resolved, that this company do (subject, however, to approval by a majority vote of the stock of this corporation) accept the foregoing proposition of the "Oregon and California Railroad Company."

" 'Resolved, that the President and Secretary of this company be and they are hereby authorized and directed to enter into an agreement in writing in the name of this company with said "Oregon and California Railroad Company" for a sale of all the property and franchises of this corporation upon the terms embodied in the foregoing propositions, which agreement shall, however, be subject to the approval or disapproval of a vote of a majority of the stock in this company at a stockholders' meeting hereafter to be held.'

"Therefore, in consideration of the premises and of the valuable considerations moving from one to the other, as hereinbefore stated, the said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' party of the first part, does hereby sell and agree to convey within one week from this date, to the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company,' party of the second part herein, the whole of the Oregon Central Railroad and telegraph line and all the rolling stock of such road, and also all property both real, personal and mixed, now owned by the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' of whatever name and nature, and all the rights of way, privileges, franchises and interests whatever, both legal and equitable, which the said corporation, party of the first part herein, now has or owns, and especially all the lands, rights, franchises, privileges, emoluments and benefits whatever which the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' party of the first part herein, now has or owns, or to which it is or may be entitled either legally or equitably, by virtue of the Acts of Congress aforesaid, or either or any of them, or of any other acts of Congress, or of any act or resolution of the Legislature of the State of Oregon, or of the decision of any of the federal or state departments, or of the federal or state courts.

"In consideration whereof, the said 'Oregon and California Railroad Company' party of the second part herein, hereby covenants and agrees to and with said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' party of the first part, to assume and agree to pay, and it does hereby assume and agree to pay to whomsoever owing, or may hereafter be due or owing, whenever the same becomes due and payable, all of the debts, obligations and liabilities whatsoever of the said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' of whatsoever name, nature or amount, and in the gold coin of the United States, and the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company' does further hereby covenant and agree to and with the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' party of the first part, to indemnify and forever save and keep harmless the said 'Oregon Central Railroad Company' against the payment at any time hereafter of any claims, demand or demands that now exist, or which may at any time hereafter arise or come against such last named corporation, and against all loss, expenses, costs, disbursements and damages whatsoever which the party of the first part may at any time hereafter be called upon to incur or pay by reason of any such claim or demand.

"In Testimony Whereof, the parties hereto, the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' party of the first part, by and through its President, I. R. Moores, and George E. Cole, its Secretary, and the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company,' party of the second part, by and through its President, Ben Holladay, and its Secretary, A. G. Cunningham, all of such officers being hereunto duly authorized and empowered as aforesaid, have each caused their names, together with the signatures of the said officers respectively, to be hereto subscribed and their corporate seals attached, this 28th day of March, A. D. 1870.

"Oregon Central Railroad Company,
"(Sd.) by I. R. Moores, President.

(Seal) "Oregon Central Railroad Company,

"Secretary."

And, Whereas, in pursuance of such resolution aforesaid, of the Board of Directors of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, and of the said contract and agreement aforesaid entered into between the said Oregon Central Railroad Company, party of the first part herein, and the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, and in affirmance of such resolution and such contract, the stockholders of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, did by a vote of over two-thirds of the whole capital stock of such corporation, at a meeting of such stockholders, duly and legally called for such purpose, and held at the office of such company in Salem, State of Oregon, on Monday, March 28th, A. D. 1870, at 7 o'clock P. M., unanimously adopt the following resolutions, to-wit:

"Whereas, the directors of this corporation did, at a meeting of their Board, regularly called for such purpose, and held at the office of the company in Salem, Oregon, on the 14th day of March, A. D. 1870, by a unanimous vote adopt the following resolutions:

"Resolved that a meeting of the stockholders of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, Oregon, be and the same is hereby called to be held at the office of the company in Salem, Oregon, on Monday, the 28th day of March A. D. 1870, at seven (7) o'clock P. M., for the purpose of considering the propriety of, and authorizing the dissolution of such corporation, the settling of its business, disposing of its property, and the division of its capital stock;

"Resolved, that the Secretary of this company be and he is hereby authorized and directed to give notice of such meeting and of the purpose thereof by publication of the same ten days in the following daily newspapers, to-wit: the Daily Oregonian and the daily Herald, published at Portland, Oregon, and the Daily Statesman, published at Salem, Oregon;"

And, Whereas, in pursuance of such order of the Board of Directors, the following notice was duly published as prescribed by such Board of Directors by the Secretary of this corporation for the period of ten days, in each of the following named newspapers, to-wit: the Daily Oregonian and the daily Herald of Portland, Oregon, and the daily Statesman, of Salem, Oregon:

"Notice to the Stockholders of the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company' of Salem, Oregon:

"At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company' of Salem, Oregon, on the 14th day of March, A. D. 1870, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, to-wit:

"Resolved, that a meeting of the stockholders of the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company' of Salem, Oregon, be, and the same is hereby called to be held at the office of the company in Salem, Oregon, on Monday, the 28th day of March, A. D. 1870, at seven (7) o'clock P. M., for the purpose of determining the propriety of and authorizing the dissolution of such corporation, the settling of its business, disposing of its property, and the division of its capital stock.

"Therefore, all stockholders in the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company' of Salem, Oregon, are hereby notified and requested to appear at the office of such company in Salem, Oregon, on Monday, the 28th day of March, A. D. 1870, at seven (7) o'clock P. M., for the purpose of attending to the transaction of the business specified in the foregoing resolution. By order of the Board of Directors.

"(Signed) I. R. Moores, President, O. C. R. R. Co.

"George E. Cole, Secretary, O. C. R. R. Co."

And, Whereas, in pursuance of such call of the Board of Directors and such notice, there are now here present the following named stockholders in this corporation, each holding, owning and representing the number of shares of stock in this corporation, as hereinafter specified, and constituting in all more than two-thirds of the whole capital stock of this corporation, to-wit: Ben Holladay and company, the owners and holders of sixty-four thousand six hundred and sixty-one (64,661) shares of such stock—that is to say, fourteen thousand five hundred (14,500) shares of the preferred interest bearing stock and 50,161 shares of the common; and J. H. Dothitt, the owner and holder of one share, and each of the following named stockholders, each of whom owns and represents one share; that is to say: J. H. Moores, I. R. Moores, E. N. Cooke, A. L. Lovejoy, Geo. L. Woods, John F. Miller, Geo. W. Weidler, A. Bush, J. C. Hawthorne, George S. Cole, Jacob Conser, J. H. Foster.

And, Whereas, a corporation has been duly incorporated and organized under the general incorporation law of this State, and the amendments thereto, for the purpose of constructing and operating a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, Oregon, southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys, to the California line on the southern boundary of Oregon; which corporation has been organized by stockholders herein, representing and controlling over two-thirds of the whole capital stock hereof, and for the sole purpose of carrying out to successful completion the enterprise for which this corporation was originally formed; the reason for the formation of such new corporation being to avoid the embarrassments and impediments constantly being thrown in the way of this enterprise by certain persons who claim falsely to be a corporation under the laws of Oregon under the name of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, and who have heretofore disputed, and still are disputing the right of this corporation to the use of such name; and although such claim upon the part of such alleged corporation is and ever has been illegal, inequitable, unjust and based upon a gross fraud; and although such alleged corporation has heretofore uniformly failed in its attempts in court to restrain by legal process our use of such name, and while we believe that all future attempts will be met by like results, yet we are conscious of the fact that such persons who claim to be such corporation have not only the disposition, but the power, by vexatious actions and suits in divers courts, wherein the right to use our corporate name may be questioned, to annoy and harrass this corporation and embarrass its operations, impede the construction of its enterprise, weaken and cloud its securities, and injure its credit;

And, Whereas, in consideration of the premises, it is deemed advisable by the stockholders hereinbefore mentioned, and all now present, to dissolve this corporation and settle up its business, and sell, dispose of, assign, transfer and convey unto the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," such being the name of the corporation so formed, as aforesaid, all the property, real, personal and mixed, and all the franchises, rights credits, privileges and emoluments of whatsoever name and nature, owned by or in anywise belonging to this corporation, as per terms of a written agreement between the two corporations for such purchase, dated the 28th day of March, A. D. 1870. Therefore:

Resolved, That the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, incorporated April 22nd, 1867, be and the same is hereby dissolved, to take effect upon the settlement of its business and the sale, transfer and conveyance of its property and franchises as hereinafter specified.

Resolved, That the President and Secretary of this corporation be and they are hereby authorized, empowered and directed to immediately, and as soon as practicable, settle all the business of this corporation, and

Whereas, this corporation has, in and for the consideration of the written covenants and agreements upon the part of the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," to pay all the debts, demands and liabilities of this company, of every name and nature, as the same mature or become due, and in and for the further consideration of the covenants of such corporation to forever save, indemnify and keep harmless this company from all claims and demands whatsoever, bargained and sold to such "Oregon and California Railroad Company," all the property, real and personal, rights and franchises, credits and interests, legal and equitable, determined, absolute and contingent, of every name and nature, now owned by or belonging to this corporation; therefore,

Resolved, Further, That the written contract heretofore entered into between this company and the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," for the sale and transfer of all the property of this company to such corporation, be and the same is hereby ratified and confirmed; and that I. R. Moores, present President of this corporation, and George E. Cole, present Secretary thereof, in consideration of the covenants and agreements aforesaid on the part of said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," to pay all the debts and liabilities of this company of every name and nature, be and they are hereby authorized, empowered and directed for this corporation and in its corporate name, and as its President and Secretary, and under its corporate seal, and for the use and benefit of its stockholders, to sell, assign, transfer, set over, convey and deliver to the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," of Portland, Oregon, all the property, real, personal and mixed, of whatever name and nature, both legal and equitable, absolute and contingent, and all donations, rights, credits, accounts and interests whatever, now owned by or in any wise belonging to this corporation, and all franchises and interests whatever by it possessed or owned; and especially to sell, assign, transfer, set over and convey, in the name of this corporation, to-wit: "Oregon Central Railroad Company," and under its corporate seal, unto the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," of Portland, Oregon, its successors and assigns, all the lands, rights, titles, franchises, interests, claims, property and demand whatsoever, both legal, equitable, present and prospective, absolute and contingent, which this corporation, the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, now has, owns or possesses or to which it is now of right entitled, either legally or equitably, or to which it may at any time hereafter become entitled, in and to the franchise and grant of lands made by the Congress of the United States to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon, by an Act entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon," approved July 25th, A. D. 1866, and amendments thereto; this corporation having been duly designated by the Legislature of Oregon, in pursuance of the requirements of such Act of Congress, with full power and authority to include in such sale, assignment, transfer and conveyance all right, title and interest of every name and nature, which this corporation now has, or to which it is either legally or equitably entitled, or at any time hereafter may be, either in whole or in part, to the ownership, management and control of the lands, franchises and benefits granted or conferred by such act of Congress and amendments thereto; and

Whereas, the present indebtedness of this company exceeds the sum of Eight Hundred Thousand ($800,000) Dollars in U. S. gold coin, the whole of which amount said "Oregon and California Railroad Company" have assumed and agreed to pay, and to forever save, indemnify and keep harmless this company against all liability and damages by reason thereof, in consideration of this transfer and sale to said corporation, of all the property and corporate franchises of this corporation, and

Whereas, it is the judgment of this meeting that the assumption of such indebtedness is a full, complete and adequate consideration for all the property and corporate rights and franchises of this company hereby directed to be transferred and conveyed, and that the best interests of all the stockholders herein are subserved by the cancellation of the said indebtedness; and

Whereas, there being no money or property to apportion among the several stockholders of this company after the disposal of its property and the payment of its liabilities, as aforesaid, and the business of this company being about to suspend; therefore,

Resolved, That the whole capital stock of this corporation, both preferred interest bearing and common stock, be and the same is hereby canceled, and the holders thereof are hereby directed to surrender the certificate thereof to the Secrtary of this corporation; and such Secretary is hereby directed to cancel each certificate by writing in red ink across the face of each thereof these words: "Surrendered and cancelled by order of a resolution of the stockholders;" adding thereto the date and his name and title of his office; and

Resolved, That from and after the date of the delivery of such conveyance, assignment and transfer to the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," this corporation, to-wit, the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, shall be dissolved; and

Whereas, the Board of Directors of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part, did, at a meeting of such Board, legally called at their office in Salem, Oregon, on the 29th day of March, A. D. 1870, unanimously adopt the following resolution:

"Resolved, that I. R. Moores, President, and Geo. E. Cole, Secretary of this company, be and they are hereby authorized and directed to make, execute and deliver to the 'Oregon and California Railroad Company' of Portland, Oregon, in the name of this corporation and under its corporate seal and under their signatures as such President and Secretary, a good and sufficient deed of conveyance of all the property and franchises of this company, of whatever name and nature, real, personal and mixed, and of all its rights, credits and interests whatsoever, in accordance with the contract heretofore entered into with such corporation for such sale, assignment, transfer and conveyance, and in accordance with the resolution of the stockholders of this corporation adopted this 28th day of March, A. D. 1870, affirming such sale and directing such conveyance."

Therefore, in consideration of the premises and of the assumption on the part of the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, of all the debts and liabilities of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, of whatsoever name or nature, and of the covenant and agreement upon the part of such "Oregon and California Railroad Company," to pay all debts, liabilities, claims, damages and demands whatsoever, of every name and nature, for which the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, is now or at any time hereafter may be made liable; and the further covenant to forever save, indemnify and hold harmless the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, and its directors and stockholders, against all loss, damages, costs, expenses and disbursements by reason of any such claim, liabilities or demands, all which agreements and covenants are, by the acceptance of this deed of conveyance by said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, by such corporation recognized and agreed, and in and for the further consideration of the mutual covenants and agreements of the parties hereto, as aforesaid; and of the further consideration of the sum of One Dollar in hand paid by the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, to the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part, and the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, by I. R. Moores, its President, and George E. Cole, its Secretary, both being thereto duly authorized and empowered, as aforesaid, for itself, the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," corporation aforesaid, and party of the first part herein, and for its successors, has granted, bargained, sold, aliened, assigned, transferred, set over, enfeoffed, conveyed, delivered and confirmed, and by these presents it does hereby grant, bargain, sell, alien, assign, transfer, set over, enfeoff, convey, deliver and confirm to the "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, and to its successors and assigns, all and singular, the railroad and telegraph line of the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, now constructed from a point in the town of East Portland, in Multnomah County, State of Oregon, opposite the city of Portland, a distance of over twenty miles, running southerly to a point in Clackamas County, State of Oregon, together with all and singular the extensions of such railroad of the said party of the first part, now in progress of construction north and south from the termini of the said twenty miles completed, as aforesaid, to-wit: The whole line of the said railroad and right and franchises of the said party of the first part to construct a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, in Oregon, southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys to the southern boundary of Oregon on the California line; together with all its lands, tenements and hereditaments acquired and appropriated, whether acquired by purchase, gift, by voluntary conveyance, or the judgment or decree of any court, or which shall hereafter be acquired or appropriated for the purpose of right-of-way for a single or double track railroad, and all the appurtenances thereunto belonging; and also all its lands acquired, or which hereafter shall be acquired, for depots, engine houses, machine shops, superstructures, erections and fixtures, and also all and singular the whole of the property of every name and nature, real, personal and mixed, now owned by the party of the first part herein, or to which it has any right, either legal or equitable, absolute or contingent; and also all and singular the franchises, rights and privileges now owned, possessed or acquired, or to which the said party of the first part has any right or title, either legal or equitable, absolute or contingent; and also all the rails, bridges, ways, piers, depots, engine houses, car houses, station houses, warehouse, machine shops, work shops, mills, machinery, engines, tackle, tools, erections, superstructures, fixtures, privileges, franchises and rights of said party of the first part, and all the lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate wheresoever and whatsoever now owned by said party of the first part, or to which it has any right, legal or equitable, absolute or contingent, and all and singular the locomotives, passenger cars, freight cars, and all other cars, carriages, tools, machinery and equipments for said railroad, and now owned by said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein; and also all goods and chattels, horses, mules, carts, drays, oxen, all live stock, and all implements of every name and nature, heretofore or now used in and about the construction of such railroad and telegraph line, and all rolling stock of every kind and description now owned by said party of the first part, together with all rents, issues, income, profits, money, rights, benefits and advantages derived or to be derived, had or received, therefrom by said party of the first part; also all donations and agreements to give, pay or transfer to the party of the first part, any moneys, lands, tenements or other property with full power and authority to enforce the collection and transfer of the same. And also and especially all the lands, rights, title, franchise, interest, claim, property and demand whatsoever, both legal and equitable, present and prospective, absolute and contingent, which the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, now has, owns or possesses, or to which it is now of right entitled legally or equitably, or to which it may at any time hereafter become entitled, in and to the franchise and grant of lands made by the Congress of the United States to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon, by an Act entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon," approved July 25, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-six (1866) and amendments thereto; and also all the lands included in such grant and all the right, title and interest which the party of the first part now has to the same, hereby giving, granting and assigning unto said party of the second part all the right, title, interest and claim which the party of the first part now has in or to the lands, franchises, property, benefits and emoluments granted or intended to be granted by virtue of the Act of Congress aforesaid, and the acts amendatory thereof, or supplemental thereto; also all the right, title and franchise which the party of the first part has for any purpose whatever by virtue of any act or resolution of the Legislature of the State of Oregon, or the judgment or decree of any court, either state or federal.

To have and to hold the said premises, franchises and property, and every part thereof, unto the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company," party of the second part herein, its successors and assigns forever.

In Witness Whereof the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," party of the first part herein, has caused its corporate seal to be affixed to these presents, and the same to be signed by its President and Secretary by resolution of the Board of Directors thereof, and also by resolution of the stockholders thereof at Salem, Marion County, state of Oregon, this twenty-ninth (29th) day of March in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy (1870).

Oregon Central Railroad Company,
By Geo. E. Cole, Secretary.

(Seal, O. C. R. R. Co.)

STATE OF OREGON }
County of Marion, } ss.

Be it remembered that on this twenty-ninth (29th) day of March, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy (1870), before me, M. N. Chapman, a Notary Public in and for the State of Oregon for the County of Marion, duly commissioned and qualified, personally appeared the above named I. R. Moores, President of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," and Geo. E. Cole, Secretary of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," named in the foregoing indenture, and whose names are subscribed to the foregoing instrument, both personally known to me to be the individuals described in and who executed the said instrument, and they severally acknowledged to me that he, the said I. R. Moores, as President of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," and he, the said Geo. E. Cole, as Secretary of the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," executed the foregoing conveyance as and for the act and deed of the said "Oregon Central Railroad Company," freely and voluntarily and for the uses and purposes therein mentioned. And the said Geo. E. Cole, being duly sworn, did depose and say, that he is the Secretary of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," and resides at Portland, Oregon; that he is acquainted with the corporate seal of said company; that the said seal affixed to the foregoing conveyance is such genuine corporate seal; that he affixed the same as Secretary of said company on the twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1870, by order of the Board of Directors of said company, ratified, and affirmed by an order of the stockholders thereof, and that he signed his name as Secretary to said conveyance by like orders.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my Notarial Seal the day and year first above written.

(Notarial Seal.) MEMORY N. CHAPMAN, Notary Public.

(U. S. R. S. 5c canceled M. N. C., March 29, 1870.)

Exhibit C

This indenture made and entered into this sixth day of October, in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty, between the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Portland, Oregon, a corporation duly incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Oregon, party of the first part, and the Oregon and California Railroad Company, of Portland, Oregon, a like corporation duly incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Oregon, party of the second part,

Witnesseth, That said party of the first part, the said Oregon Central Railroad Company, under, pursuant to and by virtue of the power and authority conferred upon it and invested in it by the laws of the State of Oregon, and pursuant to and by authority of resolutions duly passed at a meeting of its stockholders duly called and held at its offices in Portland, Oregon, on the 6th day of October, A. D. 1880, and of resolution of its Board of Directors duly passed at a meeting of said Board, duly held at the office of said Company, the 6th day of October, A. D. 1880, among other things authorizing the sale and conveyance of the property hereinafter described to the party of the second part,

And in consideration of the covenants and agreements of the party of the second part, hereinafter contained, and the sum of Ten Dollars in U. S. gold coin to it in hand paid by the party of the second part at and before the ensealing and delivering of these presents, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, hath granted, bargained, sold, assigned, transferred, set over, enfeoffed, conveyed and confirmed, and doth hereby grant, bargain, sell, assign, transfer, set over, enfeoff, convey and confirm unto the party of the second part and its successors and assigns forever, all the railroad of the said party of the first part heretofore constructed, extending from Portland, Oregon, to St. Joseph, in Yamhill County, in the State of Oregon, a distance of forty-eight miles, together with all its lands, tenements, and hereditaments acquired and appropriated for the purpose of a right-of-way for its railroad and for stations, depots, turntables and other railroad purposes, and all the appurtenances thereunto belonging.

And also all its lands not heretofore conveyed, by it acquired and which it shall hereafter acquire or to which it is entitled under and pursuant to the provisions of the Act of Congress of the United States of America entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon," approved May fourth, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy.

And also all its depots, engine houses, car houses, station houses, warehouses, machine shops, work shops, superstructures, erections and fixtures.

And also all and singular the franchises, rights and privileges now owned or possessed by it the party of the first part.

And all lands, tenements and hereditaments acquired, appropriated or now owned by the party of the first part, wheresoever situated.

And also all and singular the locomotives, tenders, passenger cars, freight cars, and all other cars, carriages, tools, machinery and equipments for said railroad now owned by the party of the first part.

And also all goods and chattels, materials and supplies, now owned by the party of the first part, whether in any way relating or pertaining or belonging to or connected with said railroad, or running or operating the same, or otherwise, together with all rents, issues, incomes, profits, moneys, rights, benefits and advantages derived or to be derived, had or received therefrom by said party of the first part in any way whatever.

And all the premises, rights, franchises, and property, real, personal or mixed, whether hereinbefore described, specified, or enumerated, or not, now owned by the said party of the first part, or to which it has any right, title or interest, legal or equitable, absolute or contingent.

To Have and to Hold all and singular the premises, rights, franchises and property, real, personal and mixed, hereby conveyed or intended to be conveyed, and every part and parcel thereof, with all the appurtenances unto the same belonging, or in any wise appertaining, unto the said party of the second part, its successors and assigns forever, and said party of the first part for itself, its successors and assigns, covenants and agrees to and with said party of the second part, its successors and assigns, that it, the said party of the first part, and its successors and assigns, will and shall upon the reasonable request and at the cost of said party of the second part, its successors and assigns, make, execute, or cause to be done and executed, all and every such further and other lawful acts, conveyances and assurances in law for the better and more effectual vesting and conferring the premises, rights and franchises, hereby granted, or so intended to be, in and to the said party of the second part, its successors and assigns forever, as by the said party of the second part, its successors and assigns, or its or their counsel learned in the law shall be reasonably advised or deemed necessary.

And this Indenture Further Witnesseth, That the said party of the second part, the said Oregon and California Railroad Company, in consideration of the grant and conveyance aforesaid, hereby covenants and agrees to and with said party of the first part, said Oregon Central Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, that it, said Oregon and California Railroad Company, and its successors and assigns, will and shall pay and discharge, or cause to be paid and discharged, all the lawful indebtedness of the said Oregon Central Railroad Company, and will forever indemnify and save and keep harmless said Oregon Central Railroad Company, its directors and stockholders against said indebtedness and from all costs, expenses and damages on account thereof.

In Witness Whereof, Said party of the first part by virtue of said resolution of said meetings of its stockholders and Board of Directors, and said party of the second part, by virtue of resolutions of its Board of Directors, duly passed, have caused this indenture to be signed by their respective Presidents and Secretaries, and their respective corporate seals to be affixed the day and year above written.

I. R. MOORES,

(Notarial Seal.) Notary Public in and for Oregon.

Exhibit D

This indenture, made the second day of June, in the year One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-One. Between the Oregon and California Railroad Company (a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Oregon, and hereinafter called the Company), of the first part, and Henry Villard, of the City and State of New York, Robert Davie Pebbles, of London, in England, and Charles Edward Bretherton, of the City and State of New York, (hereinafter called the Trustees), of the second part.

Whereas, by an Act of Congress, entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon," and approved July 25th, 1866, it was, amongst other things, enacted as follows: "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the 'California and Oregon Railroad Company,' organized under an Act of the State of California, to protect certain parties in and to a railroad survey "to connect Portland, in Oregon, with Marysville, in California," approved April 6th, 1863, and such Company, organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said State shall hereafter designate, be and they are hereby authorized and empowered to lay out, locate, construct, finish and maintain a railroad and telegraph line between the city of Portland, in Oregon, and the Central Pacific Railroad in California, in the manner following, to-wit: The said California and Oregon Railroad Company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph within the State of California, beginning at some point (to be selected by said Company) on the Central Pacific Railroad in the Sacramento valley, in the State of California and running thence northerly, through the Sacramento and Shasta valleys, to the northern boundary of the State of California; and the said Oregon Company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph line within the State of Oregon, beginning at the city of Portland, in Oregon, and running thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys to the southern boundary of Oregon, where the same shall connect with the part aforesaid to be made by the first named Company, Provided, that the Company completing its respective part of the said railroad and telegraph line from either of the termini herein named to the line between California and Oregon before the other Company shall have likewise arrived at the same line shall have the right, and the said Company is hereby authorized to continue in constructing the same beyond the line aforesaid, with the consent of the State in which the unfinished part may lie, upon the terms mentioned in this Act, until the said parts shall meet and connect and the whole line of the said railroad and telegraph shall be completed.

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, that there be and hereby is, granted to the said Companies, their successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores over the line of said railroad, every alternate section of public land not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile (ten on each side) of said railroad line; and when any of said alternate sections or parts of sections shall be found to have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands designated as aforesaid shall be selected by said Companies in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections, designated by odd numbers as aforesaid nearest to, and not more than ten miles beyond the limits of the said first named alternate sections; and as soon as the said Companies, or either of them shall file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior a map of the survey of said railroad or any portion thereof not less than sixty continuous miles from either terminus, the Secretary of the Interior shall withdraw from sale public lands herein granted on each side of said railroad, so far as located and within the limits before specified. The lands herein granted shall be applied to the building of said road within the States respectively wherein they are situated. And the sections and parts of sections of land which shall remain in the United States within the limits of the aforesaid grant, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold, Provided, That bona fide and actual settlers under the pre-emption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the price fixed for said lands at the date of such settlement, improvement and occupation. And provided, also, That settlers under the provision of the Homestead Act, who comply with the terms and requirements of said Act, shall be entitled, within the limits of said grant, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres of the land so reserved by the United States, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding."

"Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the right-of-way through the public lands be and the same is hereby granted to said companies for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power and authority are hereby given to said Companies to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, water and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right-of-way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of the said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, work shops, depots, machine shops, switches, sidetracks, turntables, water stations, or any other structures required in the construction and operating of said road."

And Whereas, by another Act of Congress, entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon," and approved May 4, 1870, it was, amongst other things, enacted as follows: "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria, and from a suitable point of junction near Forest Grove to the Yamhill River, near McMinnville, in the State of Oregon, there is hereby granted to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, now engaged in constructing the said road, and to their successors and assigns, the right-of-way through the public lands of the width of one hundred feet on each side of said road and the right to take from the adjacent public lands materials for constructing said road, and also the necessary lands for depots, stations, side-tracks, and other needful uses in operating the road, not exceeding forty acres at any one place; and, also, each alternate section of the public lands not mineral, excepting coal or iron lands, designated by odd numbers, nearest to the said road, to the amount of ten such alternate sections per mile, on each side thereof, not otherwise disposed of or reserved, or held by valid pre-emption or homestead right at the time of the passage of this Act, and in case the quantity of ten full sections per mile cannot be found on each side of said road within the said limits of twenty miles, other lands designated as aforesaid shall be selected under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior on either side of any part of said road nearest to and not more than twenty-five miles from the track of said road to make up such deficiency."

And, Whereas, said Oregon and California Railroad

Company has succeeded to and become invested with and is now possessed of and entitled to all the grants, rights, franchises and privileges conferred upon the Oregon Company referred to in the first hereinbefore entitled Act of Congress, and of the Oregon Central Railroad Company mentioned in the secondly hereinbefore recited Act of Congress, and there has been already accepted and approved by the United States, as duly constructed under the provisions of the said firstly recited Act, the part of the railroad of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, situated between East Portland and Roseburg, 198 miles in length, and as duly constructed under the provisions of the said secondly recited Act, the part of the railroad of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, situate between Portland and St. Joseph, 47 miles in length, and the Company has resolved to and is about to proceed with the completion of the remaining lines of railroad and telegraph authorized by and specified in said Acts of Congress.

And, Whereas, said Oregon and California Railroad Company, by an indenture dated the fifteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy, mortgaged to Faxon D. Atherton and Milton S. Latham, all its railroad from Portland to the boundary line of the State of Oregon and California then constructed and thereafter to be constructed, with its equipments and appurtenances, and all its property except its Congressional land grant, upon the terms and conditions therein mentioned, to secure an issue of eighteen thousand four hundred and fifty mortgage bonds of the said Company, amounting to the sum of Ten Millions Nine Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars and interest thereon as evidenced by interest warrants or coupons thereto annexed, all which bonds were duly negotiated and issued.

And, Whereas, by another indenture also dated the fifteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy, said Company granted and conveyed to the said Milton S. Latham, Faxon D. Atherton and William Norris all the lands granted, and to be granted by the United States, to aid in the construction of said railroad upon trusts as therein provided for the sale of such lands, and for the creation with the proceeds of such sale of a sinking fund for the payment at maturity of said issue of Ten Millions Nine Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars, in amount of the first mortgage bonds of said Company.

And Whereas, said Company having made default in payment of the interest upon said bonds, the holders thereof formed and organized themselves into an association called the "Association of Holders of the Oregon and California Railroad Seven Per Cent First Mortgage Bonds," having its office and legal domicile at Frankfort-on-the-Main, in Germany, and such association became the holder of all of said bonds.

And, Whereas, by a plan of reorganization of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, adopted by an extraordinary general meeting of said association on the 5th day of May, 1881, and adopted and ratified by a special meeting of the stockholders of said Company on the 7th day of May, 1881, it was resolved and agreed that the holders of said bonds should receive payment thereof in a new issue of preferred stock of said Company of the amount and of the character and under and subject to the conditions hereinafter specified, and that the performance of the conditions upon which said preferred stock should be subscribed and issued should be secured by a deed of trust or security to said Henry Villard, Robert Davie Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, in the manner provided and effected by these presents.

And, Whereas, in pursuance of further provisions of said plan of reorganization by a deed of mortgage and trust dated the first day of June, 1881, the Company mortgaged its railroads, lands, and all other property, present and future, to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton to secure an immediate issue of 6,000 first mortgage bonds, for the aggregate amount of Six Million Dollars in gold coin, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable half yearly, on the first days of January and July, and redeemable at 110 per cent of the par value thereof, in manner in said bonds and mortgage specified, all of which 6,000 bonds have been issued and are now outstanding, and also to secure such further issues of first mortgage bonds not exceeding in whole the rate of $20,000 for each mile of road now or hereafter constructed by said Company as should be thereafter made under the provisions and on the security of said deed of mortgage and trust.

And, Whereas, the said Company in pursuance of its articles of incorporation and by-laws and of said plan of reorganization of the Company approved and ratified by the special meeting of its stockholders held on the 7th day of May, 1881, has made an isue of preferred stock, Twelve Million Dollars in amount in twelve thousand shares of One Hundred Dollars each, all of which stock has been subscribed, and issued upon the following conditions, namely:

I. The preferred stock is entitled to a preferential dividend, not cumulative, of seven per cent per annum, payable out of the net earnings of the Company, and, after the first mortgage bonds hereinafter specified have been paid off out of the gross proceeds of the land grants.

II. Net earnings mean the surplus of the gross earnings of the railroad, after the deduction only of all operating and management expenses, repairs, necessary increase of rolling stock and equipment, taxes and the interest and sinking fund payments upon the first mortgage bonds secured by, and now or hereafter issued under the provisions of the deed of mortgage and trust, dated June 1st, 1881, and made by the Company to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton.

III. In addition to the preferential dividend above mentioned, the preferred stock shall rank equally with the common stock for additional dividends in each year, after the common stock has received seven per cent in such year.

IV. The entire gross proceeds of the lands, remaining after payment of the first mortgage bonds above specified, shall be distributed exclusively among the preferred stockholders.

V. The dividend on the preferred stock, realized from the proceeds of the lands as above defined, shall diminish, pro tanto, the preferential right of the preferred stock to dividends out of the net earnings of the road, as against the common stock, but in no case shall any part of the land proceeds, as above defined, be distributed among the common stock.

VI. The computation of earnings and land proceeds for the purpose of adjusting the amount of the preferential dividend shall be made annually on the 31st of December, and the dividend shall be declared at or before the annual meeting in the following April.

VII. On any dissolution of the Company, the preferred stock shall be refunded in full, before anything is refunded to the common stock.

VIII. No sale, disposition, incumbrance or lease of the railroad or any part of it, nor any mortgage or issue of bonds, except the first mortgage bonds at the rate of $20,000 a mile hereinbefore specified, nor any operating traffic or running contract in the nature of a lease, or which shall transfer the management or operation of the road, or any part of it, to another company, nor any consolidation with another company, nor any lease of the railroad of another company, nor any guarantee or assumption of the liabilities of any other company for bonds, coupons, dividends, or otherwise, nor any supplementary articles of incorporation of the Company, nor any increase of the preferred or common stock, shall be made, or be valid without the consent of an absolute majority in amount of all the preferred stock actually issued and outstanding, nor shall the Pacific Extension be undertaken without such consent.

IX. The dividends on the preferred stock for the years 1881 and 1882, not exceeding eight per cent in all may be paid in scrip, convertible into preferred stock instead of cash.

And Whereas, in further pursuance of said plan of reorganization, it has been resolved and agreed between the said Company and the said Trustees, that the ownership of all the shares of said preferred stock so issued and entitled to the security of these presents, shall be evidenced by certificates issued by said Company, and referring to these presents and upon which certificates the conditions upon which said preferred stock is subscribed and issued as hereinbefore set forth shall be endorsed, and otherwise in such form as said Company and said Trustees shall from time to time determine, but which certificates shall only be valid when countersigned by, and registered with some respectable bank or trust company in New York, London and Frankfort-on-the-Main, from time to time agreed upon and appointed in writing by said Trustees and said Company, as Registrars of said preferred stock.

And, Whereas, the Farmers Loan and Trust Company in New York, the London and San Francisco Bank, limited, in London, and the Deutsche Vereinsbank, in Frankfort-on-the-Main, have been so agreed upon and appointed as Registrars of said preferred stock.

Now, this Indenture Witnesseth, That in pursuance of said resolution and agreements and of said plan of reorganization, and to secure the performance of the conditions upon which said preferred stock has been subscribed and issued, as aforesaid, said Oregon and California Railroad Company, doth hereby grant, bargain, sell, assign, transfer and convey unto said Henry Villard, Robert Davie Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, their heirs, assigns and legal successors, as Trustees of these presents, all and singular the railroad lines of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, now constructed and in operation, between East Portland and Roseburg, and between Portland and Corvallis, and Albany and Lebanon, in the State of Oregon, including the railroads heretofore known as the Oregon Central Railroad, the Western Oregon Railroad and the Albany and Lebanon railroad, in all about three hundred and six and one-half (306½) miles in length running through the Counties of Multnomah, Clackamas, Marion, Linn, Lane, Douglas, Washington, Yamhill, Polk and Benton in said State of Oregon together with the ferry, ferry-boats and landings connecting said railroads at Portland and East Portland, and also all the railroads of said Oregon and California Railroad Company to be hereafter constructed, that is to say the Pacific Extension thereof, from Forest Grove to Astoria, in accordance with the act of Congress of May 4, 1870, hereinbefore recited, and the line from Corvallis to Junction and the Southern Extension thereof from Roseburg to California, to a junction with the Central Pacific Railroad in accordance with the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, hereinbefore recited, and also all land rights of way, easement and premises now acquired or appropriated for the purpose of the right of way of said railroads, or for grounds, side tracks, depots, warehouses, tanks, round houses, stock yards, or any other railroad purposes and also all lands granted by the United States in aid of the construction of the said railroads already completed between the termini aforesaid and not yet sold, estimated to be in amount about one million nine hundred thousand acres, and all other lands now or which may be hereafter granted to said company by the United States, and which lands are intended to be more particularly identified as the same are patented by the United States in manner hereinafter provided and also together with all rails, spikes, ties, timber, iron, switches, frogs, depots, warehouses, round houses, machine shops, bridges, trestle work, and all other buildings or structures now or hereafter belonging to, or used for, the maintenance or operation of said railroads respectively, including all the offices, docks and warehouses of the company, in Portland and East Portland, or elsewhere, and all locomotives, cars and other rolling stock, railroad supplies, fuel, tools and machinery now used, or which may hereafter be used in, or provided for the maintenance or operation of said railroads and all telegraph lines and other appurtenances of said railroads and the franchise to operate same, and all the income, earnings, and profits of said railroads, lands and premises and all other present and future property of every description, of said Oregon and California Railroad Company.

To have and to hold the said railroads, lands, rolling stock, equipment, premises and property unto the use of said Henry Villard, Robert Davie Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, their heirs, assigns and legal successors as trustees of these presents as joint tenant, and not as tenants in common free from all prior liens and encumbrances whatever (except the prior lien created by the said deed of mortgage and trust to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, in favor of the first mortgage bonds now issued or which may be hereafter issued, upon security of said deed of Mortgage and Trust as hereinbefore specified), in trust nevertheless for the equal benefit and security, pro rata, of every holder of the preferred stock of said company duly registered as aforesaid, with one of the registrars of said preferred stock and now issued, or which may be hereafter issued, in pursuance of the provisions of these presents, and intended to be secured hereby, without any priority of any holder over another, by reason of earlier issue, or otherwise, and for the uses and purposes, and with the rights and powers and subject to the provisions, agreements, covenants and stipulations contained in the following articles, that is to say:

Article 1. The said Oregon and California Railroad

Company hereby covenants with the said Trustees that it will forever duly and faithfully perform each and all the conditions upon which said preferred stock has been subscribed and issued as hereinbefore recited.

Article 2. And further, that if any such condition shall be violated or broken and such breach or violation shall continue for six calendar months then said Trustees shall by notice in writing left at the office of the company in Portland, cancel the subscription of all the preferred stock, and thereupon the said company shall and will forthwith pay, on demand, at the office of the company in Portland, to every holder of preferred stock, upon presentation of this certificate, the sum of one hundred dollars for each share held by him.

Article 3. Until the breach of some condition hereby covenanted to be performed as aforesaid, said company shall freely possess the said railroads, lands and premises and the income, earnings and profits thereof, and may contract to sell and sell and dispose of the lands granted by the United States and of all other lands owned by the company not required for the maintenance and operation of its railroads; but when and after all said first mortgage bonds hereinbefore referred to shall have been paid off, no such sale, nor any conveyance or release of said lands, or any of them shall be valid and effectual unless such sale be at a price approved by said trustees and received by them, and such conveyance or release shall be executed by said trustees, or one of them, or by their attorney or attorneys in fact thereunto lawfully authorized. And for the purpose of facilitating such sales, when and after all said first mortgage bonds hereinbefore referred to shall have been paid off, said trustees may from time to time, either concur with said company in appointing an agent to make such sales and execute such releases and conveyances as their attorney in fact, join in such sales, and to execute such releases and conveyances as their attorney in fact, and they may delegate to any such agent all their powers and duties in respect to the sale of lands, except the custody of the proceeds thereof.

Article 4. Said trustees shall hold the said proceeds of all lands sold, after all such first mortgage bonds hereinbefore referred to shall have been paid off, upon trust, to distribute the same as dividend upon the preferred stock in conformity with the conditions thereof.

Article 5. In case said company shall fail to perform and keep any condition upon which said preferred stock is subscribed and issued, as hereinbefore set forth, it shall be lawful for said trustees to take possesison personally or by their agent or agents, of said railroad, rolling stock and equipment, and the lands and other premises, hereby conveyed or which may be then subject to the lien of these presents and to operate the said railroads and manage the same, and collect and receive the income earnings and tolls thereof, and the proceeds of lands contracted to be sold; and said company covenants and agrees that it will, on demand surrender such possession and permit said trustees to use and possess said railroads, rolling stocks, lands and premises, without interruption or disturbance, and will permit and suffer said trustees to collect and get in all freight moneys, ticket balances or other earnings, and the purchase moneys of all lands sold, either then due or thereafter becoming due, and in case it may be necessary, or may be deemed advisable by said trustee, to take legal proceedings for dissolution of said company or for cancellation of the subscription of the preferred stock, or enforcement of the covenants, stipulations or trusts of these presents or to obtain possession of said premises in pursuance of the provisions of this article, they shall be entitled to the appointment, by the court in which such legal proceedings are instituted, of a Receiver or Receivers to be nominated by them or to be themselves nominated and appointed Receivers as they may think most expedient.

Article 6. Said trustees, when in possession of said railroads, lands and premises shall have the right as irrevocable attorney or attorneys of said company to bring or defend in the name of the said company any action for the collection of income, freight moneys, ticket balances or other earnings or unpaid purchase money for lands sold, or for obtaining or defending the possession of any property subject to the lien or trustes of these presents or for the condemnation of lands required for the maintenance or operation of said railroads, or in any manner affecting the maintenance thereof.

Article 7. Said trustees are hereby authorized, in their discretion to accept possession of said railroads, with the rolling stock, lands and appurtenances herein comprised although no such default as aforesaid shall have been made if said company shall offer to give up possession to them and thereupon to manage and operate the same, and collect the income and earnings thereof, as hereinbefore provided.

Article 8. It shall be the duty of said trustees to take possession of said railroads, lands and premises, after any such breach as aforesaid upon written requisition made to them for such purpose by the holders of not less than one quarter in amount of said preferred stock.

Article 9. Said trustees shall have full power, from time to time for the purpose of enforcing and administering the trusts and powers of these presents, and for operating and managing or keeing in good order and repair the said railroads, rolling stock, lands and premises, to hire and employ such managers, officers, clerks, agents, attorneys and assistants as they shall deem necessary or useful, and to defray all expenses of such employment and of otherwise executing the trusts of these presents, and to pay any taxes assessed upon the trust premises or any part thereof or any other prior charges thereon, out of any moneys coming to their hands, and in case said trustees shall have no funds in their hands, and shall make any payments either for such purposes or in any other manner for the protection or preservation of the trust premises (whether said trustee shall be in possession of the same or not), the amount so paid, together with interest thereon at the rate of ten (10) per centum per annum, shall be a first charge on the trust premises, and the earnings, income and proceeds thereof; and in case said company shall fail, on demand to repay said trustees any amount paid by them as aforesaid, with interest at the rate aforesaid they may enter upon and take possession of said railroads, lands and premises, and retain possession and receive the income, earnings and proceeds thereof until they shall have recouped themselves the amount so paid, with interest as aforesaid.

Article 10. In case the company shall, after cancellation of the subscription of the preferred stock in manner provided in Article 2 of these presents, make default in payment to any holder of preferred stock of the sum payable to him under the provisions of said article, it shall be the duty of said trustees to forthwith proceed to enforce this security, and to sell said railroads, rolling stock, equipment and appurtenances, and the land and premises comprised herein, or then subject to the lien of these presents, in one lot, or in more than one lot or parcel, and at one time, or at different times, and for cash, or on reasonable credit, payment therefor being secured on the property sold, and otherwise, upon such terms and in such manner as said trustees may in their discretion, think best.

Article 11. Such sale or sales may be made either without suit by said trustees, or their duly authorized agent by public auction, at the door of the Court House of Multnomah County in Oregon, after notice of such sale shall have been published at least once a week for four consecutive weeks in the New York Herald, or in case said paper shall not be then published, then in some other daily paper of general circulation published in New York and selected by said trustees; and in case said sale shall be adjourned, the like four weeks' notice shall be given of the adjourned sale; or at the option of said trustees such sale may be made judicially by action or suit brought by said trustees for the enforcement of the lien and powers of sale hereby created and granted, or the enforcement, performance or administration of the covenants, powers, stipulations and trusts of these presents, as said trustees may deem most expedient.

Article 12. The moneys received from the net earnings of said railroads or the purchase moneys received on any such sale thereof, as hereinbefore provided, or the purchase moneys received for lands sold, when in possession of said trustees, shall be applied in the following order: In the first place in the payment of the cost and expenses of the execution of the trusts of these presents, and the management and operation of said railroad, and in the protection and preservation of the trust premises, including a reasonable compensation to said trustees (in addition to the ordinary compensation herein provided for) and the fees of counsel and attorneys; and, in the next place, in payment of debts and liabilities incurred by said company otherwise than by or in or through the breach of any of the conditions upon which said preferred stock is subscribed and issued as hereinbefore set forth; and lastly in payment to every holder of said preferred stock of the sum of one hundred dollars for each share of preferred stock held by him, or a proportionate part thereof in case such moneys shall be insufficient to pay the full amount; and the surplus, if any, of such moneys shall be refunded to said company.

Article 13. On any sale by virtue of these presents the receipt of the said trustees shall be a sufficient discharge to any purchaser for all purchase money paid by him, and any conveyance or assignment made by said trustees shall vest in said purchaser all the title and interest of said company as fully and effectually as if the company were party thereto.

Article 14. The company hereby covenants and agrees with the said trustees on behalf and for the benefit of the holders of said preferred stock that it will, from time to time, and at all times hereafter upon reasonable request, make, execute, acknowledge and deliver all such further acts, deeds, conveyances and assurances in the law for the better assuring unto the said trustees and their legal successors, from time to time as trustee of these presents upon the trusts and for the purposes herein expressed, the said railroads, rolling stocks, equipment, lands and premises herein comprised, free from all prior liens and encumbrances except as herein specified and all other present and future property of said company of every kind and description as by the said trustees or their counsel learned in the law shall be reasonably devised, advised or required, and will, from time to time, as the said lands now or hereafter granted by the United States are patented to said company, execute proper deeds of further assurance thereof to said trustees so as to fully identify the lands intended to be comprised in or subjected to the lien of these presents.

Article 15. All rights or powers by these presents given to, or covenants, stipulations or agreements made with said Henry Villard, Robert Davie Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton shall survive and enure to the benefit of the trustee or trustees for the time being of these presents, in the same manner as if said trustee or trustees had been named herein.

Article 16. In these presents the word "trustees" shall be held to mean the said Henry Villard, Robert Davie Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton while continuing to be trustees hereof, and the trustees for the time being of these presents, whether all or any be original trustees or new trustees.

Article 17. No trustee shall be in any manner responsible for any act, default or misconduct of his co-trustee, nor for that of any agent, bank, banker, broker, or other persons employed by him or by his co-trustee, unless he shall be chargeable with culpable negligence in their selection or in the continuance of their employment; nor otherwise except for his own willful default, misconduct or gross negligence. But except as herein specially authorized, no trustee shall have power to delegate his powers or authority to his co-trustees or co-trustee, or to any other person whatever.

Article 18. The trustees may pay such reasonable compensation as they shall deem proper to all agents, land agents, engineers, officers, attorneys and servants whom they may reasonably employ in the management of their trust, and said trustees shall be paid by said company or, in default out of the trust money, the sum of five hundred dollars per annum each, and in addition a further reasonable compensation for such services as they may be called upon to render in taking possession of and managing the premises or selling the same, or bringing suit for the enforcement of the liens or trusts hereby credited or the collection of the moneys secured or to be secured by or becoming payable by virtue of these presents.

Article 19. The case of the death, resignation or refusal or incapacity to act of any Trustee the surviving or continuing Trustees or Trustee shall by deed appoint a suitable person as Trustee, in the place or stead of the Trustee so dying, resigning, refusing or becoming incapable; and in case there shall be no surviving or continuing Trustees or Trustee, or such surviving or continuing Trustees or Trustee shall fail for three calendar months after the death, resignation, refusal or incapacity of their or his previous co-Trustee to appoint a new Trustee, the said company, or any holder of said preferred stock, may apply to any Judge in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon, to make such appointment and any such Judge may appoint a new Trustee by instrument under his hand and seal, without suit or other legal proceedings therefor; but in no case shall a citizen of the State of Oregon be appointed, or be capable of acting as a Trustee of these presents. And it is hereby declared to be the duty of said Trustees to bring all actions or suits in any way relating to the trusts of these presents in the courts of the United States whenever such courts shall have jurisdiction of such action or suit, and not in the Courts of the State.

Article 20. A majority in amount of the holders of the said preferred stock shall have full power at any time without suit, and whether there be any vacancy or not to remove all or any of the then existing Trustees and to appoint other Trustees, or another Trustee, in their or his place and to increase or diminish the number of Trustees or to appoint a corporation duly authorized to execute trusts in the State of Oregon, as one of the Trustees or as sole Trustee; and any such act of the majority in the amount of the holders of preferred stock shall be deemed to be sufficiently made, executed, evidenced and proved by a written instrument or instruments purporting to be signed by the actual holders of the certificates for such preferred stock, whether they shall be registered in the names of such persons on the books of the company or not, provided that each such certificate shall be either in the name of such holder or transferable by him as attorney of the holder named in the certificate, and stating the identifying numbers of the certificates of the shares of such stock and the amount of such shares held by each signatary, and the respective signatures to which, and the production to a Notary Public at the time of signature of the certificates specified, shall be acknowledged before and certified by such Notary Public and his certificate attached and authenticated by his Notarial Seal. No proof shall be necessary of the qualications of any such Notary so purporting to act in the United States, the British Dominions, Holland, France or the German Empire.

Article 21. Any appointment of a new Trustee made by the surviving or continuing Trustees or Trustee, or the majority of the holders of preferred stock, or a Judge, as hereinbefore provided, shall be effectual to vest in the new Trustees or new Trustee all estates, rights, trusts, powers and duties as fully as if they or he were Trustees or a Trustee party to these presents without any new deed or conveyance; but nevertheless the said company hereby covenants in any and every such case to make, upon request of the new Trustees or Trustee, all such deeds, conveyances and assurances as may be appropriate for more fully and certainly vesting in and confirming to such new Trustees or Trustee such estates, rights, powers, trusts and duties and every resigning Trustee shall, on like request, make and execute such deeds, conveyances and assurances to his successors or successor.

Article 22. A majority in amount of the holders of the preferred stock at any time secured by these presents may, by written instrument, to be executed and proved as provided in Article 28, at any time before the cancellation of the subscription for the preferred stock, as hereinbefore provided waive any breach of any condition upon which said preferred stock is subscribed and issued, but such waiver shall be of no effect unless such breach shall have consisted in some act or omission which a majority in amount of the holders of said preferred stock might have previously authorized, or unless such breach shall have consisted in the non-payment of any dividend, and the Company shall, together with such instrument or instruments of waiver, hand to the Trustees a sum of money sufficient to pay all such dividend then in arrear, and in the case last mentioned said Trustee shall proceed to pay said dividend as nearly as possible in the manner provided by these presents.

Article 23. The said company, for itself, its successors and assigns doth hereby absolutely and irrevocably waive the benefit or advantage of any and all valuation, stay, appraisement or redemption laws, or laws requiring liens or deeds of trust to be foreclosed or enforced by action or suit, and of all other laws now existing, or hereafter passed, which, but for this provision would prevent the absolute and unconditional sale of the premises hereby conveyed by a Court or by a Trustee without suit; and on any such sale said company, for itself, its successors and assigns, covenants to join in and confirm the conveyance to the purchaser.

Article 24. In case of any sale of said premises, whether by the Trustees or by a Court, any purchasers shall be entitled to deliver, in part payment of the purchase money, any of the certificates for preferred stock secured by these presents; and such certificates shall be reckoned as equivalent to the sum which would be their proportion of the net proceeds of the sale after the deduction of all expenses. The payment to be made in cash to cover such expenses shall be fixed previously by the Trustees or the Court as the case may be and announced in the advertisement of sale.

Article 25. The Trustees shall, whenever requested by the company, release from the lien of these presents any land, rolling stock, or other property become useless for the purposes of the railroads by alteration of route, changes in machinery or equipment or otherwise.

Article 26. On any sale, whether by the Trustees or a Court, of the property hereby conveyed, or any part thereof, the Trustees shall have the right to buy in the same, and a majority in amount of the holders of the preferred stock shall have the right, by written instrument, evidenced and proved as hereinbefore provided by Article 28, to fix a sum which it shall be the duty of the Trustees to bid for the property to be sold, on behalf and for the benefit of such holders of preferred stock, but only on condition that due provision is made by such majority to the satisfaction of the Trustees or the Court as the case may be for the payment in cash of all expenses incurred in the execution of the trusts of these presents, and of the proportion of such sum payable to the holders of preferred stock not concurring in such request.

Article 27. On any such purchase the Trustees shall hold the property so purchased upon trust for the equal benefit of the holders of preferred stock, who had required the Trustees to buy in the property on their behalf, as the absolute property of said holders of preferred stock, without any right of redemption or resale in favor of said Company or any other holders of preferred stock.

Article 28. The Trustees shall deposit all trust funds which may from time to time come to their hands in their joint names, in the London and San Francisco Bank Limited, or such other respectable bank or banks, trust company or trust companies, in London, New York, Frankfort, San Francisco or Portland, as they may, from time to time agree upon, and may from time to time invest the same, until required, in the purchase of United States stocks or bonds at their market value, or in the first mortgage bonds of the company at any price not exceeding the par value thereof or on loans secured on such stocks or bonds.

Article 29. In computing the majority in amount of the holders of preferred stock hereinbefore referred to, only the stock actually issued and outstanding shall count, and not any stock belonging to the company, or reserved for the conversion of the issue of income bonds in said plans of reorganization mentioned.

Article 30. And, Whereas, by reason of distance, lapse of time, or other accident, the dates of the actual execution of this Indenture of Trust, by the various parties thereto, may be previous or subsequent to the day of which it bears date. Now it is hereby expressly agreed and declared that this Indenture of Trust shall be dated the second day of June, 1881, and shall be valid and effectual as if executed on the day and date thereof, and that this Indenture of Trust is the indenture referred to in the certificates for preferred stock hereinbefore mentioned, and is made and executed by and between the parties hereto as and for the Indenture or Deed of Trust securing and intended to secure, the performance of the conditions on which said preferred stock is subscribed and issued.

In Witness Whereof, the said Oregon and California Railroad Company, pursuant to a resolution of its Board of Directors duly authorizing the same, has caused these presents and nineteen duplicates hereof to be sealed with the corporate seal, signed by its President, and attested by its Assistant Secretary, and the said Trustees respectively have hereunto and unto the said nineteen duplicates hereof set their hands and seals the day and year above written.

Exhibit E

This Agreement made and entered into this ——— day of ——— One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Seven, by and between George Henry Hopkinson, Robert Davie Peebles, Patrick Buchan and Charles Edward Bretherton, the Stockholders' Reconstruction Committee of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and who are hereinafter called the Stockholders' Committee, of the first part, the Pacific Improvement Company, a corporation created, organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, of the second part, Lawrence Harrison, Andrew Haes, Henry Hopkinson, George Henry Kearton and Lawrence James Baker, a Committee sitting in London, England, and representing the British holders of the First Mortgage Bonds of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, hereinafter called the London Bondholders' Committee, of the third part, Heinrich Hohenemser, Hermann Koehler, Karl Pollitz, Adolph Otto, Phillip Bonn, Heinrich Oswalt, Siegmund Lion and Emil Kalb, a Committee sitting in Frankfort, Germany, and representing the German holders of the First Mortgage Bonds of said Company, hereinafter called the Frankfort Bondholders' Committee, of the fourth part, the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation created, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Kentucky, of the fifth part, the said Oregon and California Railroad Company, of the sixth part, and the Union Trust Company of New York, a corporation created, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, party of the seventh part, witnesseth as follows:

First: The Stockholders' Committee agrees to sell to the Pacific Improvement Company, One Hundred and Seventeen Thousand, Two Hundred and Ninety (117,290) shares of the Preferred Capital Stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, out of the total issue of One Hundred and Twenty Thousand (120,000) shares thereof, and Sixty-Seven Thousand, Seven Hundred and Eighty-Five (67,785) shares of the Common Capital Stock of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, out of the total issue of Seventy Thousand (70,000) shares thereof, and Second Mortgage Bonds of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, to the amount at their part value of Two Millions, Six Hundred and Ten Thousand Dollars ($2,610,000), being the total issue of such Second Mortgage Bonds, and will deliver the same to the said Pacific Improvement Company, in the City of New York, on or before the first day of April, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Seven; and the said Pacific Improvement Company, in consideration thereof, and in payment therefor, will, simultaneously with such delivery and with the deposit with the Union Trust Company of New York, by the London and Frankfort Bondholders' Committees, of bonds to the amount of at least Eight Millions, Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($8,400,000), par value, as hereinafter provided, deliver in the City of New York, to the Stockholders' Committee or its nominee in said city, one share of the Capital Stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company (out of a total Capital Stock thereof not exceeding six hundred and eighty thousand [680,000] shares) against every two shares of Oregon and California Preferred Stock sold and delivered as aforesaid, and one share of Central Pacific Stock against every four shares of Oregon and California Common Stock sold and delivered as aforesaid, and will also pay the sum of Four Shillings sterling for every share of Oregon and California Preferred Stock, and of Three Shillings sterling for every share of Oregon and California Common Stock so sold and delivered. Such payments to be made by first-class bankers' sight draft on London.

The Pacific Improvement Company also agrees to pay the cost of transportation and insurance of said stock and bonds to the City of New York, and of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad, to be received in payment therefor, from the City of New York to the City of London. It also agrees to pay to the nominee, in the City of New York, of the Stockholders' Committee, the sum of Two Thousand, Five Hundred Dollars as a remuneration for such nominee's services in the premises, and that the Central Pacific Railroad Company, upon the surrender to it of the certificate or certificates representing the stock so to be delivered by the Pacific Improvement Company, shall issue ten-share certificates for said stock in the name or names of such parties as may be designated by the Stockholders' Committee or its nominee in New York.

Second: In case the Stockholders' Committee, shall on or before the first day of April, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Seven, acquire the ownership or control of any additional amount of the Preferred or Common Stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, beyond and in excess of the amount mentioned and described in the foregoing article hereof, then and in that event the Stockholders' Committee agrees to sell and deliver the same to the Pacific Improvement Company, in the City of New York, on or before the said first day of April, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Seven, and the Pacific Improvement Company shall pay for the same in cash and stock, at the respective rates and in the manner specified in the previous article.

Third: The Bondholders' Committees have agreed to sell to and exchange with the Southern Pacific Company, upon the terms hereinafter stated, and upon compliance with the same by the Southern Pacific Company and the Oregon and California Railroad Company or its successors, First Mortgage Bonds of said Oregon and California Railroad Company (out of the total amount outstanding of Eight Millions, Six Hundred and Six Thousand Dollars [$8,606,000] par value) issued under and secured by the mortgage of said Company to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, as trustee, dated first day of June, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-One, but of which the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New York is now sole Trustee to the amount at their par value of Eight Million, Four Hundred Thousand Dollars, ($8,400,000), bearing all unpaid coupons appertaining thereto. For that purpose they are to deposit the said Eight Million, Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($8,400,000) bonds, within forty days after the execution of this agreement, with the Union Trust Company of New York. The Southern Pacific Company, in consideration thereof, and in payment and exchange therefor, is to deliver to the said Trust Company, to be delivered by it to the Bondholders' Committees, or their nominee in the City of New York, Nine Million, Two Hundred and Forty Thousand Dollars ($9,240,000) par value of new bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company or its successors (being at the rate of One Hundred and Ten (110) per cent new bonds upon the amount of old bonds exchanged as aforesaid) carrying interest at the rate of five per centum per annum from the first day of July, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Six (except so far as such interest may have been theretofore paid in cash as hereafter provided) and guaranteed, both principal and interest, by the Southern Pacific Company, and secured as hereinafter stated; and also to pay the sum in cash of Four Pounds (£4) sterling for each now existing bond of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) received in exchange as aforesaid; such new bonds so to be delivered by the Southern Pacific Company in payment and exchange as aforesaid shall be payable, principal and interest, in gold, forty years after date, and bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, payable half-yearly, and shall be guaraneeed, both as to principal and interest by the Southern Pacific Company, and shall be secured by a mortgage to be made by the said Railroad Company or its successors to the Union Trust Company of New York (or such other company as shall be agreed upon by the parties) upon all the property which, at the time of such deposit of existing bonds, shall be covered by the mortgage securing such First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, except the amounts due for lands sold previous to the date of such deposit, and except the cash in the hands of the mortgage Trustee, and upon all extensions thereof and future acquired property in Oregon of the company making such new bonds. The net proceeds of lands sold subsequent to the date of such deposit, and of the lands included in such mortgage securing such new bonds, shall be applied to the redemption and cancellation of the new bonds by annual drawings at par, unless purchasable at a lower price, as prescribed in the mortgage. Such new mortgage is to be equivalent, in point of lien and priority, to the aforesaid existing mortgage securing the said First Mortgage Bonds, except as to such of the latter as are not now or hereafter may not be deposited by the London and Frankfort Bondholders' Committee under this agreement. The amount of the bonds to be issued under such new mortgage shall be as follows: Thirty Thousand Dollars ($30,000) per mile for every mile of standard gauge road now or hereafter constructed or acquired and comprised in the mortgage, and Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) for every mile of narrow gauge road now or at any time hereafter constructed or acquired and comprised in the mortgage. The mortgage deed shall provide for the immediate issue and delivery by the mortgage Trustee to the Mortgagor Company of Ten Million, Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($10,500,000) of the new bonds in nominal amount; and that thereafter the Trustee of the mortgage shall further issue One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000) par value of such bonds for each mile of road constructed between the present terminus, near Ashland, and the California State line, and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000) par value of such bonds for each ten miles of steel rails laid down on the present lines of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, after such deposit of existing bonds, and on the completion of a rail connection between the present line of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the line of the Central Pacific Railroad Company any unissued bonds for which the mileage shall then be constructed shall be delivered.

Provided, however, that such aggregate issue, including the amount to be delivered to the Bondholders' Committee hereunder, shall not exceed the limits of Thirty Thousand Dollars ($30,000) and Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) for each constructed mile of standard and narrow gauge line respectively, nor Twenty Million Dollars ($20,000,000) in all. For any additional mileage constructed or acquired either between Junction and Corvallis or elsewhere in Oregon, the Mortgage Trustee shall deliver the sum of Thirty Thousand Dollars ($30,- 000) par value for each mile of standard gauge road, and the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000) par value for each mile of narrow gauge road; the mortgage Trustee, however, not to be compelled to accept less than ten miles of road at any one time, except in case of terminal sections. Deliveries of bonds under such mortgage are to be made by the Trustee from time to time upon presentation to it of affidavits, of the President and Chief Engineer of the Railway Company making such mortgage, to the facts authorizing delivery of such bonds under this Article, and without other evidence or proof thereof. In no event, however, is the total issue of bonds secured by said new mortgage, to exceed for all the purposes in this Article mentioned, the aggregate of the sum of Twenty Million Dollars ($20,000,000). The form of such new bond, which is to be of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) denomination, and of the mortgage securing the same, and of the guaranty, are to be approved by the counsel of the Bondholders' Committees.

Fourth: Notwithstanding the provisions to be inserted in the mortgage deed restricting the future issue of bonds to the mileage rates above specified, the mortgage deed shall permit the Railway Company making the mortgage to require the Trustee, at any one time, or from time to time, to issue and permit the sale of such amount or amounts of bonds as the Railway Company may think fit, Provided, however, that the proceeds of such bonds shall be received by the mortgage

Trustee, and not by the Railway Company or its appointees, and shall be disbursed by the mortgage Trustee to the Railway Company or its appointees, only pro rata, as and when the Railway Company would have been entitled to receive such bonds thereunder, under the foregoing Articles hereof.

Fifth: In case, on or before the first day of April, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Seven, the Bondholders' Committee shall acquire the ownership or control of any additional amount of the said First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, beyond and in excess of those mentioned in the third Article hereof, then and in that event said Bondholders' Committees agree to sell and exchange the same with the Southern Pacific Company, upon the like terms and in consideration thereof, and in payment and exchange therefor, the Southern Pacific Company shall deliver and pay to the Bondholders' Committees, Eleven Hundred Dollars of bonds guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company, of the character hereinabove described, and the sum of Four Pounds (£4) sterling in cash for every One Thousand Dollars of such additional now existing First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, above mentioned, with all unpaid coupons appertaining thereto, so delivered to it for exchange, due adjustment of fractions to be made by issue of fractional certificates therefor.

Sixth: Within three months from the deposit of the bonds now belonging to or controlled by the Bondholders' Committees, with the Union Trust Company, as hereinbefore provided, the Southern Pacific Company, by notice in writing to the Union Trust Company of New York, shall declare its election, either to cause to be created new bonds by act of the present Oregon and California Railroad Company, without foreclosure, or to require the Union Trust Company, as holders of the present mortgage bonds, to obtain a decree in the pending foreclosure suit or to foreclose the mortgage in some other suit caused to be brought by it, and to purchase the property or cause it to be purchased, by its nominee or nominees, at the foreclosure sale. In case said Southern Pacific Company shall give notice of its election to cause to be created new bonds of the present Oregon and California Railroad Company, then such new bonds, duly guaranteed by the said Southern Pacific Company, shall be delivered to the said Union Trust Company, of New York, within six months from the date of such notice, to be by said Trust Company forthwith delivered to the Bondholders' Committees or their nominees in New York. If within said period of three months from the deposit of the bonds by the Bondholders' Committees as aforesaid, the Southern Pacific Company shall fail to signify its election as aforesaid, or if within said period of six months from signifying an election to cause to be created new bonds of the present Oregon and California Railroad Company, it shall fail to deliver such new bonds, so guaranteed as aforesaid to the Union Trust Company of New York, then and in either of such events this agreement shall become void and determined, and the said Trust Company shall forthwith return to the Bondholders' Committees or their nominees, the bonds deposited by them respectively, and all payments as aforesaid, made by the Southern Pacific Company to the Bondholders' Committees, shall be forfeited and be retained absolutely by the said Bondholders' Committees.

Seventh: Simultaneously with such deposit of bonds to the amount of at least Eight Million Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($8,400,000) the Southern Pacific Company agrees to pay to the Bondholders' Committees or their nominees in New York, by first-class bankers' sight draft on London, the sum of Thirty-Three Thousand Six Hundred Pounds (£33,600) sterling, being at the rate of Four Pounds (£4) per bond in respect of the bonds so to be deposited. If the Southern Pacific Company shall not elect, as hereinbefore mentioned, to have the existing first mortgage foreclosed, then upon the delivery to the said Union Trust Company, of New York, of the new bonds of the character hereinbefore described, to the amount at their par or face value of Nine Million Two Hundred and Forty Thousand Dollars ($9,240,000), the Union Trust Company, of New York, shall deliver to the Trustee of the new mortgage the Eight Million Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($8,400,000) par value of now existing First Mortgage Bonds, so deposited with it, together with all coupons deposited therewith. In case the Southern Pacific Company shall elect to have such now existing first mortgage foreclosed, the Union Trust Company, of New York, shall under and pursuant to the directions of the Southern Pacific Company, use such deposited bonds and coupons to bring about such foreclosure, and for the purchase of the property by the said Union Trust Company, of New York, or its nominee or nominees, at any sale or sales thereunder, and the said Union Trust Company of New York, shall retain control of the property acquired therewith, until such new bonds to be delivered in exchange therefor under the third Article hereof, shall be prepared by the corporation issuing the same, duly guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company, and shall have been deposited with the said Union Trust Company of New York; and thereupon the property acquired shall be conveyed and turned over to the corporation issuing the new bonds, which corporation the Southern Pacific Company agrees to cause to be formed. In case of such foreclosure proceedings, the Southern Pacific Company is to cause a decree to be obtained, and a sale thereunder had and confirmed, within twelve months from the date of the execution and delivery of this instrument, or within such further time as may be fixed upon as reasonable by the counsel of the Bondholders' Committees, and of the Southern Pacific Company, or in case of their disagreement, by Benjamin H. Bristow, Esq., whose decision shall be final. In case the Southern Pacific Company fails to obtain a decree of foreclosure, and to purchase the said property within the times aforesaid, or, in case of such purchase, it fails within six months thereafter to deliver such new bonds by such new corporation, duly guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company, to the said Union Trust Company, of the City of New York, then, and in either of such events, the said Union Trust Company, of the City of New York, shall hold said property upon trust for the Bondholders' Committees without any claim thereupon or interest therein, by the Southern Pacific Company, under or by virtue of this agreement, or otherwise, and shall, when thereunto required by the Bondholders' Committees, convey such property to such persons or corporation as said Bondholders' Committees may in writing direct, and all payments by the Southern Pacific Company to the Bondholders' Committees, in pursuance of any of the Articles of this agreement, shall be forfeited and be retained absolutely by the said Bondholders' Committees. At any time after April first, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Seven, any additional amounts of such First Mortgage Bonds acquired by the Bondholders' Committees, or either of them, shall be forthwith deposited by them in like manner with the said Union Trust Company of New York, subject to the like provisions in respect of their exchange and use in the meantime, as hereinbefore provided, in respect to the Eight Million Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($8,400,000) bonds deposited as aforesaid, and simultaneously with each and every such additional deposit of any amount of bonds, the Southern Pacific Company will pay to the Bondholders' Committees making the deposit, the sum of Four Pounds (£4) sterling in respect of each One Thousand Dollars ($1,000) of such additional bonds.

Eighth: On the deposit of such Eight Million Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($8,400,000) of now existing First Mortgage Bonds, and on the first day of July, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Seven, and each six months thereafter, until the delivery to said Union Trust Company, of the new bonds hereinbefore referred to, the said Southern Pacific Company shall pay in London to the said Bondholders' Committees, interest at the rate of Two and One-Half (2½) per cent upon an amount equal to One Hundred and Ten (110) per cent upon the now existing First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, which shall have been theretofore deposited (with all now unpaid coupons appertaining thereto) with the said Union Trust Company, under the terms of this agreement, and the new bonds to be delivered by the Southern Pacific Company, as hereinbefore prescribed, shall bear interest at the rate of Five (5) per cent per annum, only from the last date at which the Southern Pacific Company shall have made such payment.

Ninth: It is understood and agreed that there shall not at any time between the execution of this agreement and the delivery to the Pacific Improvement Company and the Southern Pacific Company respectively of the stocks and securities to be delivered to them as hereinabove provided, be any increase of the amount of the outstanding bonds or capital stock or indebtedness of the said Oregon and California Railroad Company, or any issue of Receivers' Certificates affecting its property, or increase of the Receivers' indebtedness, or dividend, or other distribution or diminution of assets, except so far as the same may necessarily result from the operation of the road or maintenance of the offices of the corporation.

Tenth: The Pacific Improvement Company and the Southern Pacific Company will pay to the Stockholders' and Bondholders' Committees respectively, and as part of the consideration for the sales of shares and bonds hereinbefore specified, such stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and such sums in cash as may be necessary to pay and provide for the fees, remuneration and liabilities of said Committees, including counsel fees and office expenses incurred by said Committees, and the services of the employees of said committees, but not exceeding in the aggregate Two Thousand Five Hundred (2,500) shares of such stock and the sum of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($150,000) in cash. The audit of the London Bondholders' Committee of such accounts shall be necessary, and shall be final and conclusive as against the Southern Pacific Company and the Pacific Improvement Company. Such Twenty-Five Hundred shares are to be delivered to the Bondholders' Committees simultaneously with the deposit of bonds and exchange of stock as hereinbefore provided, and the cash payment of One Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars ($150,000), or so much thereof as may be required as aforesaid, shall be made simultaneously with the declaration in writing by the Southern Pacific Company of its election or non-election to cause the existing first mortgage to be foreclosed.

Eleventh: When this agreement shall have been fully performed by the Pacific Improvement Company and the Southern Pacific Company respectively, then all sums of money and assets remaining in the hands of the said Committees, or any of them, out of the proceeds of assessments or derived from other sources, excepting from the aforesaid payment of Four Pounds (£4) per bond and Four (4) Shillings and Three (3) Shillings in respect of preferred and common stock respectively, shall be paid over to the Pacific Improvement Company.

Twelfth: The Southern Pacific Company further agrees to and with the Bondholders' Committees to pay all Receivers' indebtedness, as well as all costs and counsel fees, in the now pending foreclosure suit or in any foreclosure suit which it may hereafter elect to or cause to be instituted. It also agrees to pay all the charges and expenses of every description of the Union Trust Company of New York, or of its nominee or nominees for any matter or service to be done or performed by it under and in pursuance of any or either of the Articles of this Contract.

Thirteenth: The Southern Pacific Company further agrees with the Bondholders' Committee to pay the cost of transportation and insurance on the aforementioned bonds both from London to New York and from New York to London, and in addition thereto, one-half of a commission of Fifteen Thousand Dollars ($15,000) which the Bondholders' Committees are to pay to their agents in New York for receiving and delivering the said bonds to the Union Trust Company of New York, and for receiving in return therefor from the said Trust Company the new bonds so to be issued as aforesaid.

Fourteenth: The Southern Pacific Company further agrees to and with the Bondholders' Committees to cause to be stamped the certificates heretofore issued by either of such Committees, with a statement that the holder of such certificates is entitled to the benefit of this agreement, and has assented thereto. The Southern Pacific Company further agrees to designate a person in London and a person in Frankfort, who shall be authorized to so stamp such certificates, as and when they are presented by the holders thereof, without expense to such holders.

Fifteenth: The Southern Pacific Company agrees to execute a lease of the railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company or of its successors, for a period of at least forty years from the date of issue of the new bonds, and such railroad company agrees to execute such lease, and such lease is to form part of the consideration of the guaranty by the Southern Pacific Company of the new bonds as aforesaid. Any infirmity or invalidity of or in said lease shall not be deemed a breach of this agreement by the Southern Pacific Company or the Oregon and California Railroad Company or its successors, nor shall it in any wise affect the validity, legality or sufficiency of the guaranty of such new bonds by the Southern Pacific Company.

Sixteenth: The Pacific Improvement Company and the Southern Pacific Company further agree that, upon issue of the new bonds, hereinbefore provided, the Second Mortgage Bonds of the said Oregon and California Railroad Company, which shall have heretofore been delivered by the Stockholders' Committee to the Pacific Improvement Company, as hereinbefore prescribed, shall be canceled, and thereupon, unless the counsel of the Southern Pacific Company and the Bondholders' Committees should otherwise determine, the First Mortgage Bonds, which shall have been deposited by the Bondholders' Committees hereunder, shall also be canceled. Upon the cancellation of such Second Mortgage Bonds, the Pacific Improvement Company shall thereupon take all proper proceedings to have the mortgage securing the same, satisfied of record. As soon as all outstanding bonds not deposited by the Bondholders' Committees with the Union Trust Company, as hereinbefore provided, shall have been paid, or otherwise satisfied, all proper proceedings shall be taken to have the mortgage securing such now existing First Mortgage Bonds of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, satisfied of record, unless, in the joint judgment of the counsel for the Southern Pacific Company and the Bondholders' Committees, it should be deemed more expedient not then to have said mortgage so satisfied.

Seventeenth: The Union Trust Company of New York, has executed this agreement as evidence of its acceptance of the trusts thereby assumed and undertaken by it, and the Oregon and California Railroad Company has executed this agreement as an evidence of its acquiescence and approval of the same, and of its obligation to assist in carrying out the provisions thereof.

In Witness Whereof, the parties of the first, third and fourth parts have hereunto set their hands and seals, and the parties of the second, fifth and sixth, and seventh parts have caused their corporate names to be hereunto subscribed, and their corporate seals to be hereunto affixed by their Presidents or Vice-Presidents respectively, the day and year first above written.

Exhibit F

This Agreement, Made this first day of July, 1887, between the Oregon and California Railroad Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Oregon, and the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of Kentucky.

Witnesseth, That the said Oregon and California Railroad Company hereby leases to the Southern Pacific Company for the term of forty (40) years from the date hereof all of its railroad situated in the State of Oregon known as the Oregon and California Railroad, with all its branches, together with the rolling stock, telegraph lines, tools and property of every kind and nature whatsoever in use upon or in connection with the said railroad, and together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain and operate the said property and to receive the rents, issues and profits thereof.

In consideration thereof the Southern Pacific Company agrees to and with the said Oregon and California Railroad Company that during the continuance of this lease it will keep the said leased property in good order, condition and repair, operate, maintain, add to and better the same at its own expense, pay all taxes legally assessed against the same, or levied thereon, and pay the interest as it shall mature, on such First Mortgage Bonds of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, secured by indenture or Deed of Trust to the Union Trust Company of New York, dated July 1st, 1887, as may be issued in respect of its now existing lines or the extension now under construction of its main line to the boundary between Oregon and California as may be hereafter guaranteed by said Southern Pacific Company, and that it will on the first day of May in each year during the continuance of this lease, pay to the said Oregon and California Railroad Company such balance, if any, of the net earnings or income received by said Southern Pacific Company from the said leased premises with the appurtenances for the year ending on the thirty-first day of December then next preceding as shall remain in its hands after all charges and expenses incurred by it and all the payment for taxes and interest hereinbefore provided or agreed or directed to be made and all current fixed charges of the said Oregon and California Railroad Company and all indebtedness of said Railroad Company to said Southern Pacific Company, are paid. Provided, that if such balance of net earnings or income received by the Southern Pacific Company from the said leased premises with the appurtenances for any year, which by the foregoing provisions hereof would be and become payable by said Southern Pacific Company to said Oregon and California Railroad Company, shall exceed the amount of seven (7) per centum upon the par value of the then existing Preferred Stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and six (6) per centum per annum upon the then existing Common Stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, said Southern Pacific Company shall be entitled to and shall retain to itself for its own use any and all excess of such balance of net earnings and income over and above the amounts of seven (7) per centum per annum upon the par value of the Preferred Stock and six (6) per centum per annum upon the par value of the Common Stock of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, and said Southern Pacific Company further agrees to and with the said Oregon and California Railroad Company that it will upon the termination of this lease, return the said premises to the said Oregon and California Railroad Company or its successors, with its additions and betterments, in as good condition and repair as the same were at the date thereof; and in further consideration of this lease it has agreed to execute and will execute a guaranty of the payment of the principal and interest of each of the bonds of the issue above mentioned as may be issued in respect of its now existing lines or the extension now under construction of its main line to the boundary between Oregon and California, and of such further bonds of said issue as the said Oregon and California Railroad Company may during the existence of this lease, request it to guarantee.

It is understood and agreed that the mortgage from the Oregon and California Railroad Company to the Union Trust Company of New York, bearing date July 1, 1887, and the bonds issued thereunder, have and shall have priority of the lien upon the mortgaged property over the lien and claim of the Southern Pacific Company as lessee hereunder.

In Testimony Whereof, the parties hereto have caused these presents to be signed by their respective Presidents and their respective corporate seals affixed and attested by their respective Secretaries the day and year first above written.

Exhibit G

This Indenture, Made and entered into this first day of August, Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-Three, by and between the Oregon and California Railroad Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Oregon, party of the first part, and the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation, existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky, party of the second part, Witnesseth:

First: The party of the first part hereby leases to the party of the second part, for the period of thirty-four years, from and including the date hereof, the railroads of the party of the first part in the State of Oregon, and also the equipments and appurtenances of every kind and nature whatsoever thereto respectively belonging or appertaining.

Second: The party of the second part will pay to the party of the first part a yearly rental for the premises so leased, amounting to the sum of Five Thousand Dollars per annum, which rental shall be paid in four installments of Twelve Hundred and Fifty Dollars each on the first days of February, May, August and November of each year during the pendency of this lease, (commencing on the first day of November, Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-Three), it being understood and agreed that the amount of such rental, so far as requisite, shall be appropriated and applied by the party of the first part to the expense of maintaining and keeping up its corporate organization under the laws of the State of Oregon.

Third: The party of the second part is to operate the said leased railroads belonging to the party of the first part and shall, in the first place, out of the earnings and income derived therefrom, pay the cost of operating such railroads and the incidental expenses connected therewith, and likewise pay the taxes and assessments on the said demised premises, the cost of insurance thereof if and so far as effected, such amounts as it may become necessary to pay for damages to persons and property incurred in the course of operating the said leased railroads, or on account of land purchases heretofore made by or on behalf of said party of the first part, and the expense of repairing, maintaining, improving, adding to and keeping up the said leased railroads, with all their appurtenances, and of maintaining, providing and keeping up in suitable condition and repair rolling stock and equipment for carrying on as economically and profitably as may be the transportation business of said leased railroads, and, so far as the same shall not be paid from the rentals or income or proceeds of sale of lands, the expenses of and connected with the lands of said party of the first part, and perfecting the title thereto, and payment of taxes and assessments thereon, and the expenses of and connected with its land department; and after the payments and deductions aforesaid, the said lessee shall apply the residue of the amount of the net income and earnings of said railroads, to such extent as shall be required for the purpose, to the payment of the interest and any sinking fund contributions from time to time becoming due and payable during the existence of this lease upon the now existing bonded indebtedness of the party of the first part and such other bonded indebtedness of said party of the first part as may be created by said party of the first part with the assent of the party of the second part hereto.

And it is Further Provided and Agreed, by and between the parties hereto, that on the first day of May in each year during the continuance of this lease, the party of the second part shall pay to the party of the first part such balance, if any, of the net earnings or income received by the party of the second part from the said leased premises, with the appurtenances, for the year ending on the 31st day of December then next preceding, as shall remain in its hands after all the payments, expenses, deductions and advances and all the payments for interest and sinking fund contributions heretofore provided for or agreed or directed to be made, are paid. Provided However, that if at the time, viz: such 1st day of May when such balance of such income or rental is provided to be paid to the party of the first part, there shall be any sum due or owing from the party of the first part to the party of the second part, for or in respect of advances or payments theretofore made by the party of the second part, or for new additions or improvements to the demised premises, or any part thereof, or for expenses of keeping up the corporate organization of the party of the first part, or maintaining agencies for the transfer of its stock and bonds, or for any expense of its business affairs, or for or in respect of any other sums which may have been lawfully advanced or paid by the lessee to or for the party of the first part, the party of the second part shall be entitled to retain and pay to itself whatever may be owing to it from the party of the first part for or in respect of any of the causes or matters or considerations aforesaid, including any interest which may be due or owing from the party of the first part to the party of the second part thereon. And Provided further, that if such balance of net earnings or income received by the party of the second part from the leased premises, with the appurtenances, for any year, and which by the foregoing provisions hereof would be and become payable by said party of the second part to said party of the first part, shall exceed the amount of seven per cent per annum upon the par value of the then existing preferred stock of the party of the first part and six per cent upon the par value of the then existing common stock of said party of the first part, then and in that event the said party of the second part shall be entitled to and shall retain to itself for its own use any and all excess of such balance of net earnings and income over and above the amount of seven per cent per annum upon the par value of the then existing preferred stock, and six per cent per annum upon the par value of such then existing common stock of the party of the first part.

tween the parties hereto that at the time when this lease shall go into operation, the party of the second part shall receive and be entitled to use and apply in the operations of the said demised premises, all fuel, rails, and materials and supplies which shall then be on hand belonging to the party of the first part; and likewise to collect and receive all sums which may be at that time due and owing to the party of the first part for freights and passage money, including all sums in the hands of agents or employees, or due from connecting roads, and likewise that the sums that may at such time be due or owing by the party of the first part for back wages of employees, and for fuel, rails and other materials and supplies for the business of said demised premises, or to connecting roads, or damages to persons or property in the operation of the road, or for other incidental expenses of the party of the first part, shall be paid by the party of the second part, and all the receipts and payments for and on account of such back freights and passage money and moneys in the hands of agents, employees or connecting roads and for such back wages and debts for fuel, rails and other materials and supplies, and to connecting roads, and for damage to persons and property, and incidental expenses as aforesaid, shall be brought into and form part of the accounts of the party of the first part with the party of the second part hereunder for the year ending December 31st, 1898, in like manner and with like effect in all respects as if the same had accrued during that year.

Fifth: In case the amount of net earnings or income of the said demised premises applicable under the preceding provisions hereof to the payment of the current interest upon the bonded indebtedness of the party of the first part shall be insufficient in any year to pay in full such current interest for the year, it shall be optional with the party of the second part whether or not to advance or pay for account of the party of the first part the amount of such deficiency, and if the party of the second part shall advance or pay for account of the party of the first part such deficiency, or any part thereof, it shall be entitled to interest at the rate of six per cent per annum upon such advances or payments until reimbursed therefor, and shall be entitled to repay itself for such advances or payments and interest at any time, or from time to time, out of the subsequent earnings or income of said demised premises in the manner provided by the third article hereof in that behalf, and shall have a lien therefor upon the demised premises, and the income thereof, until such advances, or payments, with interest thereon, shall be reimbursed; and in case the party of the second part shall at any time, or from time to time, make any advances to or for the party of the first part, for new additions or improvements of the demised premises, or any part thereof, or for the necessary expenses of keeping up the corporate organization of the party of the first part, or maintaining agencies for transfer of its stock and bonds, or for other incidental expenses not paid by the party of the second part under the lease, or for any other object or purpose, the party of the second part shall be entitled to receive interest upon all such advances at the rate of six per cent per annum from the making until the reimbursement thereof, and the party of the second part shall have a lien for such advances, and the interest thereon, upon the said demised premises and the income thereof until such advances are reimbursed, with interest, and the party of the second part shall be entitled at any time, and from time to time, to refund to itself such advances and interest out of any earnings or income of the demised premises which may be in its hands unless it shall have been expressly agreed between the parties hereto to the contrary in writing at or before the making of such advances.

Sixth: The party of the second part will, when thereunto requested so to do by the party of the first part, guarantee the payment of the principal and interest of all bonds of the party of the first part which may have been or may hereafter be issued under mortgage from the party of the first part to the Union Trust Company of New York, dated July 1, 1887, such guaranty to be substantially in the form following, viz:

"For value received the Southern Pacific Company hereby guarantees the punctual payment of the principal of and interest upon this bond as therein provided, and agrees that the mortgage given to secure its payment shall have priority of lien upon the mortgaged property over its lien and claims thereon as lessee of the Oregon and California Railroad.

In Witness Whereof, the corporate seal of the said Southern Pacific Company is hereunto affixed and attested by its treasurer by order of the Board of Directors this thirty-first day of December, 1887.

Attest: Treasurer."

Seventh: This indenture may be at any time modified in any of its terms or provisions or cancelled by agreement of the parties hereto.

Exhibit H

An Indenture made the first day of July, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty Seven, by and between the Oregon and California Railroad Company, a corporation created, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Oregon, party of the first part, and the Union Trust Company of New York, a corporation created, organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, party of the second part.

Whereas the party of the first part is the owner of lines of railway already constructed from East Portland to Ashland, from Albany Junction to Lebanon, and from Portland to Corvallis, all in the State of Oregon, and of lands granted under the acts of Congress respectively entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon," approved July 25, 1866, and "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville in the State of Oregon" approved May 4, 1870, and is about extending to the California State line such railway now constructed from East Portland to Ashland; and

Whereas, the party of the first part and its successors are about to execute and issue from time to time (but with the limitations hereinafter prescribed in respect to the aggregate amount thereof which may at any time be outstanding, which amount is not in any case to exceed, at the par or face value of such bonds, the sum of Twenty Million Dollars,) first mortgage bonds for One Thousand Dollars each of the general form and tenor following, to-wit:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Oregon and California Railroad Company.

No. First Mortgage Gold Bond. No.

The Oregon and California Railroad Company, for value received, promises (unless this bond should be sooner redeemed as hereinafter provided) to pay to the bearer hereof, or, if registered, to the registered holder hereof, the sum of One Thousand Dollars forty years after date, and, on presentation and surrender at or after maturity of the respective interest warrants hereunto annexed, to pay to the person presenting the same, or if this bond is registered and the interest warrants appertaining thereto cancelled, to pay to the registered holder hereof, interest on such principal sum at the rate of five per centum per annum, semi-annually, on the first day of January and July in each year, such payments of principal and interest to be made at the office or agency of said Company in the City of New York in United States gold coin. This is one of the first mortgage bonds of said Railroad Company, the total issue of which is limited to twenty million dollars par value, secured by a deed of trust to the Union Trust Company of New York, Trustee, dated July 1, 1887. The net proceeds of lands sold subsequently to May 12, 1887, and of the lands included in said deed of trust securing such first mortgage bonds, are to be applied to the redemption and cancellation of such bonds by annual drawings at par, unless purchasable at a lower price, as prescribed in said deed of trust. The principal of this bond may, by reason of one year's default in the payment of any interest, become and be due and payable as provided in said deed of trust. None of said Bonds are to be in any wise binding or obligatory unless authenticated by the certificate endorsed thereon, signed by said Trustee or its successor or successors in said trust. This bond may at any time, upon production thereof to said Railroad Company and proper endorsement being made thereon and either with or without the surrender to said Railroad Company for cancellation of all unpaid interest warrants appertaining thereto, be registered upon the books of the Company in the name of the holder thereof and thereupon its transferability by delivery will cease, and thereafter it can be transferred only by the registered holder or his attorney by transfer duly made upon such books.

In Witness Whereof, the said Railroad Company has caused these presents to be signed by its President and its corporate seal to be affixed thereto and attested by its Secretary, this first day of July, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty Seven.

Oregon and California Railroad Company,

(Seal) By . President.

Attest: Secretary.

And Whereas, the General form of the several interest warrants to be annexed to such bonds (each of which interest warrants is to bear the engraved signature of the Treasurer of the Railroad Company) is to be as follows, viz:

(Form of Interest Warrant)

Interest warrant for twenty-five dollars gold, being for semi-annual interest maturing on the first day of .....upon the Oregon and California Railroad Company's first mortgage bond No.
$25. (not due if bond previously redeemed)

Treasurer.

And Whereas, the form of the certificate to be endorsed on the bonds, and signed by said Trustee, is to be as follows, viz:

(Form of Trustee's Certificate.)

The Union Trust Company of New York hereby certifies that the within bond is one of the bonds described in the deed of trust within mentioned and secured thereby.

Trustee.

And Whereas, all of the said bonds are to be equally secured by this mortgage and hypothecation of the railways and railway lines of the party of the first part, and its successors constructed and to be constructed or acquired and of all their appurtenances and the franchises relating or pertaining thereto;

And Whereas, such issue of bonds, and the execution of this mortgage or deed of trust to secure the same, has been assented to by the holders of upwards of a majority of the preferred stock and by the holders of upwards of a majority of the common stock of the party of the first part.

Now, Therefore, This Indenture Witnesseth: That the party of the first part, in consideration of the premises, and of one dollar to it paid by the party of the second part, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged and for the purpose of securing the payment of such bonds, with the interest to accrue thereon, according to the true intent and meaning thereof, hath granted, bargained, sold, aliened, remised, released, conveyed and confirmed and by these presents doth grant, bargain, sell, alien, remise, release, convey and confirm unto the said party of the second part and its successors and assigns forever. All the railways and railway lines of the party of the first part, and its successors, whether constructed or to be constructed or acquired and all their appurtenances, including therein all rights of way, superstructure, rails, tracks, side tracks or sidings, bridges, buildings, fences, depots, station houses, shops, warehouses, offices, docks, ferries, ferry boats and landings, telegraph lines, car houses, engine houses, machine shops, repair shops, buildings, erections and structures necessary to the operation of said railways or said railway lines, and all and singular the locomotives, rolling stock, equipment and machinery appertaining thereto, whether now owned or hereafter to be acquired; and also all the rents, issues, tolls, incomes, earnings and profits of such railways and railway lines; and also all the rights, privileges, immunities and franchises relating or pertaining to such railways or railway lines which the said party of the first part now possesses, owns or is entitled unto, or it or its successors may hereafter become possessed of or entitled unto, and all the property real, personal or mixed, which on the 12th day of May, 1887, was covered by the mortgage securing the then existing first mortgage bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company except the amounts due for lands sold previous to such last mentioned date, and except the cash in the hands of the trustee under the mortgage last referred to, and all extensions thereof and future acquired property in the State of Oregon, of the said party of the first part; and also all the estate, right, title, interest, property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity, of the said party of the first part, and its successors, of, in and to the premises and every part and parcel thereof, with the appurtenances.

To Have and to Hold all and singular the above mentioned and described premises, together with the appurtenances, unto the said party of the second part, and its successors and assigns forever, in trust, nevertheless, for the securing and benefit of all and every the persons or bodies corporate who or which shall be or at any time become the holder or holders of any such bonds or the interest warrants appertaining thereto, without preference to the holder of any of the said bonds or interest warrant over any of the others, by reason of priority, in the date thereof or the time of the issuing or negotiating of the same. Provided, Always, and these presents are upon the express condition, that if the party of the first part, or its successors or assigns, shall well and truly pay or cause to be paid to the holders of the said bonds and interest warrants, when and as the same shall become due and payable, the principal and interest moneys secured hereby according to the terms, provisions and conditions, tenor and effect of the said bonds, then these presents and the estate hereby granted shall cease, determine and be null and void. And it is covenated and agreed by and between the parties hereto that until default shall be made by the said party of the first part, its successors and assigns in the payment of the principal or interest of the said bonds or some of them or some part thereof, the said party of the first part, its successors and assigns, shall be suffered and permitted to possess and enjoy the said premises, with their appurtenances, and all and singular the rights and franchises hereinbefore described, and to receive, take and use the tolls, income, earnings and profits thereof, and the trustee or trustees hereunder shall have full power, in its or their discretion upon written request of the party of the first part, its successors or assigns, assented to in writing by the Southern Pacific Company, the guarantor of both the principal and interest of bonds secured by this deed of trust, to convey, by way of release or otherwise, and fully release from the lien of this mortgage, any property of any description (except lands granted by the United States) which in its or their judgment shall not be necessary for or for use in connection with said railways and to consent to such changes in the location of tracks, depots and other buildings as in its or their judgment may be expedient, and to make and deliver the releases and conveyances necessary to carry the same into effect, but any property which may be acquired for permanent use in substitution for any so released or conveyed shall thereupon become subject to the lien of this mortgage, and upon request of the trustee or trustees hereunder shall be conveyed to it or them by the party of the first part, its successors or assigns, upon the trusts of these presents. But if default shall be made in the payment of the principal or interest moneys mentioned in the said bonds, or any or either of them, or any part thereof, according to the tenor and effect of said bonds, or either of them, and if such default shall continue for the period of one year, then, and in that case, the party of the second part or its successors in the trust are hereby authorized and empowered and at the written request of the holders of one fourth part of the said bonds then outstanding in respect of which such default shall have been made, it shall be it and their duty to enter into and upon, and take and hold possession of, all and singular the premises, estates, franchises, rights, privileges and property hereby granted and conveyed or intended so to be and in person or by one or more agents, to operate the said railways, to make from time to time all such repairs and replacements as it or they may deem judicious, and all such useful alterations, additions and improvements as the income coming into its or their hands shall be adequate to pay for, and to take, collect and receive all fares, freights, tolls, earnings, issues, profits and income of said railways and apply such fares, freights, tolls, earnings, issues, profits and income to the proper expenses of holding, operating and managing the said railways and other premises, and conducting the business thereof, to the payment of and for all taxes and assessments which shall be levied or assessed thereon, and all necesary and proper repairs, replacements, alterations, additions, and improvements upon said property, and all expenses, costs, charges and counsel fees in the premises of said party of the second part, or its successors in the trust and a reasonable compensation for its or their services, and next to the payment of the interest and principal of the said bonds, according to the tenor and effect thereof, as the same may be or become due and payable, and in case the principal moneys secured by such bonds shall not have become due, the moneys applicable to the payment of interest shall be applied upon the interest warrants remaining in default in the order of their maturity; in case the said principal moneys shall have become due, the moneys applicable to the payment of the principal and interest on such bonds shall be applied to such principal and interest pro rata without any preference or priority whatsoever. And further, if default shall be made in the payment of the principal or interest moneys mentioned in the said bonds, or any or either of them, or any part thereof, and if such default in the payment of such interest moneys shall continue for a period of one year; then and in either of such cases the said party of the second part or its successors in the said trust, may, and in the later case at the written request of holders of one-fourth of the said bonds then outstanding in respect of which such default shall have been made, must, and it and they are hereby authorized and empowered and directed to cause the whole of the said premises, estates, franchises, rights, privileges and property hereby granted and conveyed or intended so to be, with their appurtenances, and all benefit and equity of redemption of the said party of the first part, and its successors and assigns therein or thereto, to be sold at public auction in the City of New York, in the State of New York, or the City of Portland, in the State of Oregon, giving at least three months' previous notice of the time and place of such sale by publishing the same at least once in each week during such period of three months, in two newspapers published in said City of New York, and two newspapers published in said City of Portland, and one newspaper published in the City of London, England, and one newspaper published in the City of Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, and giving such other notice of such sale as may be required by law, if any other notice be so required. And it shall be lawful for the said party of the second part or its successors making such sale, and it and they are hereby authorized and empowered as the attorney or attorneys of the party of the first part, and its successors by these presents duly constituted and appointed for that purpose, to make, execute and deliver to the purchaser or purchasers on such sale, all such deeds and conveyances as shall be necessary or proper to convey, and assure to, and vest in, him or them, the said premises, estates, franchises, rights, privileges and property and every part and parcel thereof and all of the estate, right, title and interest of the said party of the first part, and its successors and assigns therein or thereto, and such sale and the deeds and conveyances so to be thereupon executed, shall be valid and effectual forever, and shall be a perpetual bar both in law and equity, against the said party of the first part and its successors and assigns and against all persons claiming or to claim by, from or under it or them, or any of them. And it is further declared and agreed that the receipt of the Trustee or Trustees who shall make the sale hereinbefore authorized shall be a sufficient discharge to the purchaser or purchasers at such sale for his or their purchase money, and that such purchaser or purchasers, his or their heirs or assigns or personal representatives shall not, after paying such purchase money and receiving such receipt of such Trustee or Trustees therefor, be obliged to see to the application of such purchase money, upon or for the trusts or purposes of these presents, or be in any wise answerable for any loss, misapplication or non-application of such purchase money by the Trustee or Trustees. And it is hereby declared and agreed, that the said party of the second part, or its successors in the said trust, shall out of the proceeds of such sale, or of any sale which shall, under judicial proceedings or otherwise, be made of the said premises in enforcement of the security afforded by these presents, in the first place, pay and retain the costs and expenses attending such sale, and all counsel fees and other expenses incurred by it or them in reference to the same, and a reasonable compensation for its or their own services in the premises; and also any balance which may be due to it or them on account of any disbursements or expenses paid or incurred in or about the care and management of the said premises subsequent to the taking possession thereof by it or them, including the reasonable compensation of any agent or agents who may be employed in or about such care and management and shall apply the residue of the proceeds of such sale, or so much thereof as may be necessary to the payment of the whole amount of principal and interest which shall then be owing and unpaid upon the bonds secured hereby or any of them, whether the said principal by the tenor of the said bonds be then due or yet to become due. And in case of a deficiency of such proceeds to pay in full the whole amount of principal and interest owing or unpaid upon the said bonds, they shall be paid ratably in proportion to the amounts owing and unpaid upon them respectively and without discrimination as between principal and interest and without preference of the holder of any one bond or interest warrant over any of the others, and any surplus which may remain after the full payment of the principal and interest of all of the said bonds shall be paid over to the said party of the first part, or its successors or assigns, upon lawful demand being made therefor. And it is hereby further provided, covenanted, declared and agreed that if default shall be made in the payment of the interest moneys mentioned in the said bonds or any or either of them or any part thereof, and if such default shall continue for the period of one year, then and in that event the party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, may, and upon the written request of the holders of one-fourth part of the said bonds then outstanding in respect of which such default shall have been made, must declare the entire principal of all of said outstanding bonds to be immediately due and payable; and thereupon the said entire principal shall become and be immediately due and payable, anything contained in said bonds to the contrary thereof notwithstanding. And it is hereby further provided, covenanted, declared and agreed that a majority in amount of the holders of the outstanding bonds at any time secured by these presents, may by written instrument at any time before the actual sale of the premises, waive any default in payment of interest, but so far only that the principal of the bonds shall cease to be payable forthwith, in case the said principal shall have become so payable by reason of such default; but such waiver shall be of no effect, unless assented to in writing by the Southern Pacific Company, the guarantors of both the principal and interest of the bonds secured by this deed of trust and unless the party of the first part, its successors or assigns shall, together with said waiver and assent hand to the said party of the second part or its successors in the trust, a sum of money to pay all the interest then in arrear, and the said party of the second part or its successors in the trust, shall then proceed to pay said interest. And it is hereby further provided, declared, granted and agreed that upon the happening of such event or events as is or are hereinbefore declared, agreed or provided to authorize or direct the said party of the second part, or its successors, to sell the said premises, estates, franchises, rights, privileges and property, or to take the requisite proceedings to that end, the said party of the second part, or its successors, shall be entitled in its or their discretion instead of taking proceedings for and making sale of said premises, estates, franchises, rights, privileges and property under and in virtue of the power of sale hereinbefore contained, to proceed by bill in equity or other appropriate proceedings in any court or courts of competent jurisdiction, to foreclose this mortgage or enforce the rights, liens and securities of the Trustee or Trustees and the bondholders thereunder, and in such suit or proceedings to obtain the appointment of a receiver or receivers to be nominated by it or its successors in the trust, and thereupon said Trustee or Trustees shall be entitled to have the said premises, estates, franchises, rights, privileges and property hereby granted or conveyed or intended so to be, sold by judicial sale under the order or decree of such court or courts, for or towards the satisfaction of the principal and interest due or owing upon the then outstanding bonds issued under or entitled to the benefit of the security of this mortgage and for the enforcement of the rights, liens and securities of the Trustee or Trustees and the bond holders and in case of such judicial sale, the net proceeds thereof shall be applicable and distributable in like manner as hereinbefore provided in respect of the net proceeds of sale of such mortgagd premises and properties, rights and franchises under and in virtue of the power of sale hereinbefore contained; and all the stipulations and provisions in this indenture contained with reference to or consequent upon a sale of such mortgaged premises and properties, rights, immunities and franchises when or if sold under said power of sale, shall be applicable and applied as far and as nearly as may be, in case of such judicial sale being made under the order or decree of the courts. And it is hereby further provided, covenanted, declared and agreed that on any sale, whether by the said party of the second part, its successors in the trust, or a court, of the property hereby conveyed, or any part thereof, the said party of the second part or its successors in the trust, shall have the right to buy in the same and a majority in amount of the holders of the outstanding bonds shall have the right by written instrument to fix a sum which it shall be the duty of the said party of the second part, or its successors in the trust to bid for the property to be sold on behalf and for the benefit of such bond holders, but only on condition that due provision is made by such majority to the satisfaction of the said party of the second part, or its successors in the trust or the Court as the case may be, for the payment in cash of all expenses incurred in the execution of the trusts of these presents and of the proportion of such sum payable to the bondholders not concurring in such request. And on any such purchase the said party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, shall hold the property so purchased for the equal benefit of the bond holders who had required the said party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, to buy in the property on their behalf, as the absolute property of said bond holders, without any right of redemption or resale in favor of the party of the first part, its successors and assigns. And it is hereby further provided, declared and agreed that in case of such sale as is hereinbefore authorized being made by the party of the second part or its successors in said trust, or in case of any judicial sale being made of the said premises, properties, rights and franchises hereby mortgaged, or any part thereof in enforcement of the mortgage lien hereby created, the purchaser or purchasers at such sale shall be entitled in making settlement for and payment of the purchase money bidden at such sale, to turn in or use towards the payment of such purchase money the bonds held by such purchaser or purchasers to or towards the payment whereof the net proceeds of such sale shall be legally applicable reckoning such bonds, or the amount so turned in or used of the same, for such purpose, at such sum as would be payable out of the net proceeds of such sale to such purchaser or purchasers as holder or holders of such bonds, for his or their just share or proportion of such net proceeds of sale, upon due apportionment of and concerning such net proceeds. And it is hereby further provided, covenanted, agreed and declared that any request or instrument by these presents authorized to be executed by any number of bond holders shall prima facie be deemed to be sufficiently made, executed, evidenced and proved by a written instrument or instruments purporting to be signed by such bond holders and stating the identifying numbers and the amount of the bonds held by each signatary and the respective signatures to which, and the production to a notary public at the time of signature of the bonds specified, shall be acknowledged before and certified to by such notary public, and his certificate attached and authenticated, by his notarial seal. No proof shall be necessary of the qualifications or identity of any such notary, so purporting to act in the United States, the British Dominions, Holland, France or the German Empire. And the said party of the first part, for itself, its successors and assigns, doth hereby covenant, grant and agree to and with the said party of the second part, and its successors in the trust and to and with the respective persons and corporations who or which shall at any time become holders of the said bonds hereby secured, or any of them, that the said party of the first part, its successors and assigns shall and will at any time and from time to time hereafter, upon request make, do, execute, and deliver all such further and other acts, deeds and things as shall be reasonably advised, devised or required to effectuate the intention of these presents, and to assure and confirm to the said party of the second part, or its successors, all and singular the property and estate, real and personal, hereinbefore described, and hereby intended to be granted, and so as to render the same, and especially such portions thereof as shall be hereafter acquired by the said party of the first part, or its successors available for the security and satisfaction of the said bonds according to the intent and purposes herein expressed. And it is hereby further provided, covenanted, declared and agreed that the party of the first part, its successors and assigns, will and hereby doth absolutely and irrevocably waive the benefit or advantage of any and all valuation stay appraisement or redemption laws, or laws requiring liens on mortgages to be foreclosed by action or suit and of all other laws now existing or hereafter passed, which, but for this provision, would prevent the absolute and unconditional sale of the premises hereby conveyed by a court or by a trustee without suit and on any such sale the party of the first part, for itself, its successors and assigns, covenants to join in and confirm the conveyance to the purchaser. And it is hereby further provided, covenanted, declared and agreed that the mileage rate of issue of bonds hereunder is to be Thirty Thousand Dollars par value of bonds for each mile of standard gauge road now or hereafter constructed or acquired and comprised in this mortgage, and Ten Thousand Dollars par value of such bonds for every mile of narrow gauge road now or at any time hereafter constructed or acquired and comprised in this mortgage; that the party of the second part and its successors in the trust hereby created are forthwith upon the request of the party of the first part, its successors or assigns to authenticate and certify as issued hereunder and to deliver to the party of the first part, its successors or assigns, bonds of said party of the first part or its successors of the general form and tenor above set forth, to the amount of Ten Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars, and thereafter from time to time to further authenticate and certify as issued hereunder and deliver to the party of the first part, its successors or assigns, such bonds to amounts which shall aggregate One Hundred Thousand Dollars par value of such bonds for each mile of road constructed between the terminus of said road, near Ashland, as existing on the 28th day of March, 1887, and the California State line and Fifty Thousand Dollars par value of such bonds for each ten miles of steel rails laid down after the 12th day of May, 1887, on the lines of the Oregor and California Railroad Company, as such lines existed on the 28th day of March, 1887, and on the completion of a rail connection between the line of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, as existing at the last mentioned date and the line of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, any unissued bonds for which the mileage shall then be constructed, shall be authenticated and certified by the Trustee and delivered, provided, however, that such aggregate issue, including the amount to be forthwith authenticated, certified and delivered hereunder shall not exceed the limits of Thirty Thousand Dollars and Ten Thousand Dollars for each constructed mile of standard and narrow gauge lines respectively, or Twenty Million Dollars in all. For any additional mileage constructed or acquired either between Junction and Corvallis or elsewhere in Oregon, the said party of the second part or its successors in the trust shall authenticate and certify as issued hereunder and deliver Thirty Thousand Dollars par value of such bonds for each mile of standard gauge road and Ten Thousand Dollars par value of such bonds for each mile of narrow gauge road; the said party of the second part or its successors in the trust, however, not to be compelled to accept less than ten miles of road at any one time, except in case of terminal sections. Authenticating certificates to such bonds are to be signed and deliveries thereof to be made by the Trustee under this mortgage from time to time, upon presentation to it of certificates in writing, executed by the President and Chief Engineer of the party of the first part, or its successors, reciting the facts authorizing delivery of such bonds hereunder; such certificates to be personally acknowledged by such officers to be true before a Notary Public of either of the States of New York, California or Oregon and without other evidence or proof of such facts. Provided, however, that notwithstanding anything herein contained the party of the first part or its successors, may at any one time or from time to time, require the party of the second part and its successors to authenticate, certify and deliver to said party of the first part, its successors or assigns and permit the sale of such amount or amounts of bonds as the party of the first part or its successors may think fit, provided that the proceeds of any such bonds issued in excess of the limits hereinabove prescribed shall be received by the Trustee or Trustees hereunder and not by the party of the first part or its successors or appointees, and shall be disbursed by said Trustee or Trustees to the party of the first part, or its successors or appointees only pro rata as and when the party of the first part or its successors would have been entitled to receive such bonds under the foregoing provisions hereof, but the total issue of bonds secured by this deed of trust is not in any event to exceed for all purposes herein mentioned the aggregate sum of Twenty Million Dollars. In case the party of the first part, or its successors shall contract to sell and dispose of any of the lands granted by the United States and covered by this mortgage at prices which are assented to by the party of the second part, or its successors in this trust or its or their agent or agents on that behalf, then and in that event the party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, or any agent or agents on its or their behalf authorized so to do, shall execute such releases and conveyances as may fully discharge the lands so contracted to be sold from the lien of these presents. Provided, however, that in all cases the purchase money or price be paid to and received by the party of the second part or its successors in the trusts, or its or their duly authorized agent. For the purpose of facilitating such sales the Trustee hereunder may, from time to time either concur with the party of the first part or its successors in appointing an agent to make such sales and execute such releases as its attorney in fact, or may appoint an agent of its own to execute such releases and conveyances as its attorney in fact, and it may delegate to any such agent all its powers and duties in respect to the sale of lands. The proceeds of lands so sold shall be applied by the said party of the second part or its successors in the trust to the redemption and cancellation of the bonds to be issued hereunder in the following manner, viz: If the market price of such bonds should be below par, then and in that event such proceeds of lands may be used in purchasing the same at their market price at the discretion of the said party of the second part, or its successors in the trust. But in case in the opinion of the said party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, such bonds cannot be purchased at less than par, then in that event, as soon as the sum of Fifty Thouhand Dollars shall have accumulated from such proceeds of lands, the Trustee shall cause to be drawn at its office in the City of New York in the presence of a Notary Public out of the numbers of the bonds then outstanding, the numbers of such amount of said bonds as said land moneys will suffice to redeem at par with accrued interest, and such land moneys shall, on the first day of January or July next ensuing such drawing, be applied to the payment of such bonds so drawn at par with accrued interest to such date. The party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, shall, upon the said drawing being made, without delay send notice of the numbers so drawn to the Secretaries of the Stock Exchange at New York, London and Frankfort, and the party of the first part shall upon the said drawing being made without delay, cause notice of the numbers so drawn to be advertised once a week for at least four weeks in a daily newspaper in New York, London, and Frankfort. If the said party of the first part shall fail to make all or any of the said advertisements, the party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, shall cause them to be made, and the party of the first part shall repay to the party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, the cost thereof. But until such repayment the party of the second part, or its successors in the trust shall defray the cost thereof out of the funds in its or their hands under these presents. Bonds so drawn and advertised shall bear no interest after the next ensuing first day of January or first day of July unless on presentation thereof at the office of the said party of the second part, or its successors in the trust, in New York, payment of the said bonds, or the accrued interest thereon shall be refused. All bonds purchased or redeemed as hereinbefore provided shall be forthwith cancelled. And it is hereby further provided, declared and agreed, that any vacancy in the office of Trustee hereunder may be permanently filled by the appointment of a new Trustee or new Trustees, by an instrument or concurrent instruments in writing, executed under the hands of the holders of a majority in interest of the then outstanding bonds secured hereby, or their attorneys in fact thereunto authorized, but that the Board of Directors of the party of the first part or its successors may make a temporary appointment to fill such vacancy until a permanent appointment shall be made in the manner above prescribed. And it is hereby covenanted and agreed that any new Trustee or new Trustees appointed as aforesaid, whether by a permanent or temporary appointment, shall immediately upon its, his or their appointment, and without any further act, deed or conveyance, become and be vested with all the estates, trusts, rights, powers and duties of the Trustee or Trustees in whose place it, he, or they shall have been appointed; but, nevertheless the respective parties hereto and their respective successors and assigns, shall and will, upon request, make, execute and deliver all such releases, conveyances and assurances as shall be appropriate to vest in and confirm and assure to such new Trustee or new Trustees, such estates, trusts, rights, powers and duties according to the intent above expressed. And the said party of the second part does hereby accept the trust conferred upon it by these presents, but with the understanding and it is hereby expressly provided and agreed that it shall not be liable or accountable for the acts, defaults or neglect of any agent or agents who may in good faith and with reasonable discretion be appointed under and by virtue of or for the purposes of these presents to do any of the matters or things herein provided for and that no other liability or responsibility shall under any circumstances be borne by or attached to it than for the exercise of reasonable diligence only in the performance of the said trusts when action on its part for that purpose shall become necessary. The party of the second part is to be entitled to compensation for services in the execution of this trust.

In Witness Whereof, The parties hereto have caused their respective corporate seals to be hereunto affixed and attested by their respective Secretaries and these presents to be signed by their respective Presidents the day and year first above written.

Exhibit I

This Indenture, Made this first day of June, in the year One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-One, between the Oregon and California Railroad Company (a corporation organized and existing under the laws of Oregon, and hereinafter called the Company), of the first part; and Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, all of the City and State of New York, (hereinafter called Trustees), of the second part;

Whereas, By an Act of Congress entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon," and approved July 25th, 1866, it was amongst other things enacted as follows: "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the California and Oregon Railroad Company, organized under an Act of the State of California, to protect certain parties in and to a railroad survey to connect Portland, in Oregon, with Marysville, in California, approved April 6th, 1863, and such Company organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said State shall hereafter designate, be and they are hereby authorized and empowered to lay out, locate, construct, finish, and maintain a railroad and telegraph line between the City of Portland, in Oregon, and the Central Pacific Railroad in California, in the manner following, to-wit: The said California and Oregon Railroad Company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph within the State of California, beginning at some point (to be selected by said Company) on the Central Pacific Railroad, in the Sacramento Valley, in the State of California, and running thence northerly, through the Sacramento and Shasta Valleys, to the northern boundary of the State of California; and the said Oregon Company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph line within the State of Oregon, beginning at the City of Portland, and running thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys to the southern boundary of Oregon, where the same shall connect with the part aforesaid to be made by the first named company. Provided, That the Company completing its respective part of the said railroad and telegraph from either of the termini herein named to the line between California and Oregon before the other Company shall have likewise arrived at the same line, shall have the right and the said Company is hereby authorized to continue in constructing the same beyond the line aforesaid, with the consent of the State in which the unfinished part may lie, upon the terms mentioned in this Act, until the said parts shall meet and connect, and the whole line of the said railroad and telegraph shall be completed."

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted, That there be and hereby is, granted to the said Companies, their successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war and public stores over the line of said railroad, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile (ten on each side) of said railroad line; and when any of said alternate sections or parts of sections shall be found to have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands designated as aforesaid, shall be selected by said Companies in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections designated by odd numbers as aforesaid, nearest to, and not more than ten miles beyond the limits of the said first named alternate sections; and as soon as the said Companies, or either of them, shall file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior a map of the survey of said railroad or any portion thereof, not less than sixty continuous miles from either terminous, the Secretary of the Interior shall withdraw from sale public lands herein granted on each side of said railroad, so far as located and within the limits before specified. The lands herein granted shall be applied to the building of said road within the States respectively wherein they are situated. And the sections and parts of sections of land which shall remain in the United States, within the limits of the aforesaid grant, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold. Provided, That bona fide and actual settlers under the pre-emption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the price fixed for said lands at the date of such settlement, improvement and occupation. And Provided, Also, That settlers under the provisions of the Homestead Act who comply with the terms and requirements of said Act, shall be entitled, within the limits of said grant, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres of the land so reserved by the United States, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding."

SECTION 3. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be and the same is hereby granted to said Companies for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power and authority are hereby given to said Companies to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, water and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of the said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine shops, switches, side tracks, turntables, water stations, or any other structures required in the construction and operating of said road."

And Whereas By another Act of Congress, entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon," and approved May 4th, 1870, it was, amongst other things, enacted as follows: "Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria, and from a suitable point of junction near Forest Grove to the Yamhill River, near McMinnville, in the State of Oregon, there is hereby granted to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, now engaged in constructing the said road, and to their successors and assigns, the right of way through the public lands of the width of one hundred feet on each side of said road, and the right to take from the adjacent public lands materials for constructing said road, and also the necessary lands for depots, stations, side tracks, and other needful uses in operating the road, not exceeding forty acres at any one place; and, also, each alternate section of public lands, not mineral, excepting coal or iron lands, designated by odd numbers, nearest to the said road, to the amount of ten such alternate sections per mile, on each side thereof, not otherwise disposed of or reserved or held by valid pre-emption or homestead right at the time of the passage of this Act. And in case the quantity of ten full sections per mile cannot be found on each side of said road, within the said limits of twenty miles, other lands designated as aforesaid shall be selected under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, on either side of any part of said road nearest to and not more than twenty-five miles from the track of said road to make up such deficiency."

And Whereas, Said Oregon and California Railroad

Company has succeeded to and become invested with and is now possessed of and entitled to all the grants, rights, franchises and privileges conferred upon the Oregon Company referred to in the first hereinbefore recited Act of Congress, and of the Oregon Central Railroad Company mentioned in the secondly hereinbefore recited Act of Congress, and there has been already accepted and approved by the United States, as duly constructed under the provisions of the said firstly recited Act, the part of the railroad of said Oregon and California Railroad Company situate between East Portland and Roseburg, 198 miles in length, and as duly constructed under the provisions of the said secondly recited act, the part of the railroad of said Oregon & California Railroad Company, situated between Portland and St. Joseph, 47 miles in length, and the Company has resolved to and is about to proceed with the completion of the remaining lines of railroad and telegraph authorized by and specified in said Acts of Congress;

And Whereas, By a deed of mortgage and trust dated the first day of January, 1881, the Company mortgaged its railroads and other property therein described to Klass Van Oterendorp and Philip Lilienthal, to secure an issue of 2,500 new first mortgage bonds, for the aggregate amount of Two Million Dollars in American gold coin or Eight Million Five Hundred Thousand Marks in German money, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable half-yearly on the first days of January and July, and redeemable at par at the option of the Company, all of which bonds have been issued and are now outstanding.

And Whereas, The Company, in pursuance of its articles of incorporation and by-laws, and of a plan of reorganization of the Company approved and ratified by special meeting of its stockholders, held on the 7th day of May, 1881, has resolved to make an issue of first mortgage bonds as hereinafter described, which shall be limited to the rate of Twenty Thousand Dollars for each mile of railroad now or hereafter constructed by the Company as hereinafter specified, and actually constructed at the time of issue, and of which bonds Six Million Dollars in amount shall be now issued, and to secure the payment of said bonds and the interest thereon in the manner herein provided.

And Whereas, Six thousand (6,000) in number, Six Million Dollars in amount of said bonds intended to be secured by these presents, together with the coupons annexed thereto, and the certificate of the Trustees thereon have been prepared, and are numbered consecutively from 1 to 6,000, both inclusive, and bear even date herewith, and are in the form following, that is to say:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF OREGON.

OREGON AND CALIFORNIA RAILROAD COMPANY, of Portland, Oregon.

First mortgage six per cent gold bonds. Amount limited to $20,000 per mile of constructed road. Principal redeemable at 110, by a cumulative sinking fund of one per cent per annum, commencing in 1886.

$1,000 No. 0000 $1,000

The Oregon and California Railroad Company, for value received, hereby binds itself to pay to the bearer, at the office of the Company in the City of New York, on the first day of July, A. D. 1921, (unless this bond shall be sooner redeemed as hereinafter mentioned), the sum of One Thousand Dollars in United States gold coin of the present standard, and to pay in the meantime interest thereon, in like gold coin, at the rate of six per centum per annum, half yearly, on the first days of January and July in each year, free of tax, upon presentation and surrender at such office, as they respectively mature, of the eighty coupons annexed.

This bond is one of the first mortgage six per cent gold bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, issued and to be issued only at the rate of $20,000 for each mile of railroad now or hereafter constructed and being actually constructed at the time of issue, all being of the same amount, form and tenor, and payable in the same manner, and differing only in the identifying numbers, dates, and the number of coupons annexed, and all of which bonds issued and to be issued are equally secured by a first mortgage, dated June 1, 1881, of all the railroads of said Company, constructed and to be constructed, that is to say, from Portland to Astoria, in accordance with the Act of Congress of May 4th, 1870, and to Junction, and from East Portland to California, in accordance with the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and of all its lands, rolling stock, and all other property, present and future, of said Company, of every description, to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees, subject, however, to a redeemable prior lien, Two Million Dollars in amount, to be discharged as hereinafter mentioned, and which mortgage is recorded in the office of the County Clerk, in Portland, in Oregon, and in all other counties in which any part of the railroads and lands of said Company are situated; and the said mortgage provides that the proceeds of all bonds sold shall be received by the said Trustees and shall be applied by them in discharging the said prior lien for Two Millions of Dollars, and the balance of such proceeds, after discharging said prior lien, shall be applied only for the construction of the road, first, to California, and when such road is completed, then to Astoria and Junction; and that, for the purpose of securing such application, said Trustees shall pay over the proceeds only under the advice, and upon the certificate, of a supervising engineer, appointed by them.

The Company binds itself to the bearer to constitute a cumulative sinking fund, for redemption, at 110 per cent of the par value thereof, of all said bonds, such sinking fund, including the gross proceeds of all lands now or hereafter granted by the United States to said Company, together with such an addtional sum, to be paid annually by said Company to said Trustees, on the first day of July of each year, commencing July 1, 1886, as will make up the total annual sinking fund to one per centum, from July 1, 1886, upon the aggregate amount of bonds issued, together with, and in addition to, the amount of the interest upon the bonds previously redeemed.

The bonds to be redeemed by said sinking fund shall be drawn by lot, by said Trustees, at the office of the Company in New York, on the first day of April in each year, and the numbers of the bonds so drawn advertised in daily newspapers, of general circulation, published in New York, London and Frankfort-on-the-Main.

In case this bond shall be so drawn and advertised, the amount thereof shall become payable, together with the additional sum of One Hundred Dollars, in United States gold coin, on the first day of July then next, at the office of the Company in New York, and it shall bear no interest after such date, unless, upon presentation, payment thereof shall be refused.

Said Company further agrees to receive this bond, at par, in payment for any lands offered for sale by said Company.

Said Company further binds itself to pay forthwith, upon demand, the amount of this bond, as aforesaid, in case said Company shall fail, for six calendar months, to pay any coupon annexed to this bond, when the same becomes due, or shall fail for six calendar months to pay any sum which may be payable to the said Trustees on account of the sinking fund hereinbefore mentioned, and such default in payment of interest, or of the sum payable on account of said sinking fund shall not have been waived by a majority in amount of the holders of said bonds then outstanding in the manner provided in said mortgage. Said Company further binds itself to maintain and keep, during the continuance of this mortgage, financial agencies in London and Frankfort-on-the-Main, and to cash, on presentation at such agencies, all said bonds, and the coupons thereof, as the same become payable, at the fixed rate of exchange of four shillings and two pence sterling per dollar in London, and four marks twenty-five pfennigs in Frankfort-on-the-Main. This bond is not valid unless the certificate endorsed hereon shall be executed by said Trustees.

In Witness Whereof, Said Company has caused these presents to be sealed with its corporate seal, signed by its President and attested by its Assistant Secretary, this first day of June, 1881.

President.

Attest:

Assistant Secretary.

(Seal.)

(Form of Last Coupon.)

The Oregon and California Railroad Company will pay the bearer on the first day of July, 1921, Thirty Dollars in United States gold coin, free of tax, at the office of the Company in New York, being six months interest on First Mortgage Bonds of Said Company, No. , unless said bond shall have been previously redeemed.

Treasurer.

(Trustees' Certificate.)

We hereby certify that the within bond is one of the First Mortgage Six per cent gold Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, secured by the within mentioned mortgage dated June 1st, 1881, and made by said Company to us as Trustees, and that the total amount of said bonds certified by us does not exceed the rate of $20,000 for each mile of actually constructed railroad.

Trustees.

Now this Indenture Witnesseth, That in pursuance of said resolutions and to secure the punctual payment of said bonds now to be issued, and all such bonds as shall be hereafter issued on the security of these presents, but not exceeding in all Twenty Thousand Dollars for each mile of road actually constructed at the time of issue and the interest thereon, said Oregon and California Railroad Company doth hereby grant, bargain, sell, assign, transfer and convey unto said Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, their heirs, assigns and legal successors, as Trustees of these presents all and singular the railroad lines of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, now constructed and in operation, between East Portland, and Roseburg, and between Portland and Corvallis, and Albany and Lebanon, in the State of Oregon, including the railroads heretofore known as the Oregon Central Railroad, the Western Oregon Railroad and the Albany and Lebanon Railroad, in all about three hundred and six and one-half (306½) miles in length, running through the counties of Multnomah, Clackamas, Marion, Linn, Lane, Douglas, Washington, Yamhill, Polk and Benton, in said State of Oregon, together with the ferry, ferry-boats and landings connecting the said railroads at Portland and East Portland, and also all the railroads of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, to be hereafter constructed, that is to say, from Forest Grove to Astoria in accordance with the Act of Congress of May 4th, 1870, hereinbefore recited, and from Corvallis to Junction, and from Roseburg to California, to a junction within the Central Pacific Railroad, in accordance with the Act of Congress of July 25th, 1866, hereinbefore recited, and all lands, rights of way, easements and premises now acquired or appropriated, or which may hereafter be acquired or appropriated, for the purpose of the right of way of said railroad or for grounds, side tracks, depots, warehouses, tanks, roundhouses, stock yards, or any other railroad purposes, and also all lands granted by the United States in aid of the construction of the said railroads already completed between the termini aforesaid and not yet sold, estimated to be in amount about one million nine hundred thousand acres, and all lands which may be hereafter granted to said Company by the United States, and which lands are intended to be more particularly identified as the same are patented by the United States in manner hereinafter provided, and together with all rails, spikes, ties, timber, iron, switches, frogs, depots, warehouses, roundhouses, machine shops, bridges, trestle work, and all other buildings or structures now or hereafter belonging to or used for the maintenance or operation of said railroads respectively, including all the offices, docks and warehouses of the Company in Portland and East Portland, or elsewhere, and all locomotives, cars and other rolling stock, railroad supplies, fuel, tools and machinery now used or which may hereafter be used in or provided for the maintenance or operation of said railroads, and all telegraph lines and other appurtenances of said railroads, and the franchise to operate the same, and all the income, earnings and profits of said railroads, lands and premises and all other present and future property of every description, of said Oregon and California Railroad Company.

To Have and to Hold the said railroads, lands, rolling stock, equipment, premises and property unto the use of said Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, their heirs, assigns and legal successors, as Trustees of these presents, as joint tenants and not as tenants in common, free from all prior liens and encumbrances whatever, except the prior lien for Two Millions of Dollars created by the said deed of mortgage and trust to Klaas van Oterendorp and Philip Lilienthal, hereinbefore referred to, and which lien is to be discharged as hereinafter mentioned, in trust nevertheless for the equal benefit and security, pro rata, of every holder of any of said bonds to be now issued or which may be hereafter issued as aforesaid and intended to be secured hereby, without any priority of any one bond over another, by reason of earlier issue or negotiation, and for the uses and purposes, and with the rights and powers, and subject to the provisions, agreements, covenants and stipulations contained in the following articles, that is to say:

ARTICLE 1. The said Oregon and California Railroad Company hereby covenants with said Trustees that it will proceed with all reasonable despatch to complete its said railroad to California, so that cars can run through from Portland to San Francisco, and will keep all the railroads from time to time constructed, and rolling stock and other property of said Company in good order and repair, and will reconstruct, replace and restore all such, or so much, and such parts thereof, as may be worn out, wrecked, destroyed or displaced, and will pay all taxes assessed against said railroads, lands and premises, and will pay the principal moneys secured by all bonds to be issued on the security of these presents, and all interest due thereon, at the times and places, and in the manner in said bonds and the coupons annexed thereto respectively specified, and perform all the conditions and stipulations in said bonds expressed and contained.

ARTICLE 2. And further, that if any coupon on any of said bonds shall not be paid on presentation, as therein provided, and shall remain unpaid for six calendar months, and such default shall not be waived in manner hereinafter specified, then the said Company will forthwith pay on demand, at the place and in the manner in said bonds specified, the principal of all such bonds.

ARTICLE 3. And further, that said Oregon and California Railroad Company will create and maintain a cumulative sinking fund for the redemption of all said bonds at the rate of 110 per cent of the par value thereof, and will for such purpose, on the first day of July, 1886, and on every first day of July thereafter, pay at the office of the Company in New York, to said Trustees, such a sum as will, in addition to the gross proceeds of all lands now or hereafter granted by the United States to said Company, make up a total amount of one per cent per annum in gold coin, computed from the first day of July, 1886, upon the aggregate amount of bonds issued.

ARTICLE 4. And further, that in case default shall be made in any annual payment to be made for such sinking fund specified in the last article, or any part thereof, for six calendar months, and such default shall not be waived as hereinafter provided, then said Company will forthwith pay on demand at the place and in the manner in said bonds specified, the principal of each and all of the said bonds then remaining due, at the rate of 110 per cent of the par value thereof.

ARTICLE 5. Until default in any payment required by the previous articles, said Company shall freely possess the said railroads, lands and premises, and the income, earnings and profits thereof, and may contract to sell and dispose of the lands granted by the United States and of all other lands owned by the Company not required for the maintenance and operation of its railroads; but no such sale nor any conveyance or release of said lands, or any of them, shall be valid and effectual unless such sale be at a price approved by said Trustees and received by them, and such conveyance or release shall be executed by said Trustees, or one of them, or by their attorney or attorneys in fact, thereunto lawfully authorized. And for the purpose of facilitating such sales, said Trustees may from time to time either concur with said Company in appointing an agent to make such sales and execute such releases and conveyances as their attorney in fact, or may appoint an agent of their own to supervise and join in such sales, and to execute such releases and conveyances as their attorney in fact, and they may delegate to any such agent all their powers and duties in respect to the sale of lands, except the custody of the proceeds thereof.

ARTICLE 6. Said Trustees shall hold the said proceeds of all lands sold and the payments to be made to them by said Company as above mentioned, as well as all interest received upon bonds redeemed, as a cumulative sinking fund, to discharge and extinguish the whole of said bonds by annual redemption at the rate of 110 per cent of the par value thereof, in the following manner: on the 1st day of April, 1886, and on the 1st day of April in every succeeding year, or as soon thereafter as may be, said Trustees shall cause to be drawn at the office of the Company in New York, in the presence of a Notary Public, out of the whole number of bonds then outstanding such a number of bonds as said sinking fund will, on the 1st day of July then next ensuing, suffice to redeem as hereinbefore mentioned.

ARTICLE 7. Said Trustees shall publish by notice, conspicuously posted up on or before the 30th day of April next ensuing after each such drawing, in the office of the Company in New York and at the financial agencies of the Company in London and Frankfort-on-the-Main, and so remaining until the 1st day of July then next ensuing, and by advertisement in daily newspapers of general circulation, published respectively in New York, London and Frankfort, the numbers of the bonds so drawn for redemption, and shall pay and redeem such bonds at the rate of 110 per cent of the par value thereof, at the office of the Company in New York, on the said first day of July, or so soon thereafter as the said Company shall pay over the sums hereby stipulated to be paid for the purpose.

ARTICLE 8. When any bonds shall have been drawn as aforesaid, and notice given of the numbers of the bonds so drawn for redemption, then each bond so drawn shall become payable on the first day of July then next ensuing, together with the additional sum of One Hundred Dollars in gold coin of the United States, making in all 110 per cent of the par value thereof, payable at the office of the Company in New York, and shall bear no interest after that day, unless, on presentation thereof at the office of the Company in New York, payment of said bond at the rate aforesaid, or any interest due thereon, shall be refused.

ARTICLE 9. The bonds redeemed out of the sinking fund by said Trustees shall be cancelled by them, but the coupons shall remain in full force and shall be regularly presented by the Trustees, and the amount thereof collected, for the benefit of the sinking fund.

ARTICLE 10. All bonds which from any cause remain unredeemed on the first day of July, 1921, shall be then paid off at the rate of 110 per cent of the par value thereof.

ARTICLE 11. When all of said bonds shall be redeemed by said sinking fund, or acquired and cancelled by said Company, and handed to said Trustees, so cancelled, they shall enter satisfaction of record of these presents.

ARTICLE 12. In case said Company shall fail to keep the said railroads, rolling stock, equipment and premises herein comprised, or at any time hereafter subject to the lien of these presents, in good order and repair, or in case default shall be made in payment of any coupon on any of said bonds, or of the said sums to be paid for the sinking fund as aforesaid, or any part thereof, and such default shall continue for six calendar months, or in payment of any taxes assessed against said railroads, lands and premises, it shall be lawful for said Trustees to take possession personally, or by their agent, or agents, of said railroads, rolling stock and equipment, and the lands and other premises hereby conveyed, or which may be then subject to the lien of these presents, and to operate the said railroads and manage the same, and collect and receive the income, earnings and tolls thereof, and the proceeds of lands contracted to be sold; and said Company covenants and agrees that it will, on demand, surrender such possession and permit said Trustees to use and possess said railroads, rolling stock, land and premises, without interruption or disturbance, and will permit and suffer said Trustees to collect and get in all freight moneys, ticket balances or other earnings, and the purchase moneys of all lands sold, either then due or thereafter becoming due, and in case it may be necessary, or may be deemed advisable, by said Trustees, to take legal proceedings for foreclosure of this mortgage, or to obtain possession of said premises, in pursuance of the provisions of this article, they shall be entitled to the appointment of a Receiver, or Receivers, to be nominated by them, or to be themselves nominated and appointed Receivers, as they may think most expedient.

ARTICLE 13. Said Trustees, when in possession of said railroads, lands and premises, shall have the right as irrevocable attorney or attorneys of said Company, to bring or defend, in the name of the said Company, any actions for the collection of income, freight moneys, ticket balances or other earnings or unpaid purchase money for lands sold, or for obtaining or defending the possession of any property subject to the lien or trusts of these presents, or for the condemnation of lands required for the maintenance or operation of said railroads, or in any manner affecting the maintenance thereof.

ARTICLE 14. Said Trustees are hereby authorized in their discretion, to accept possession of said railroads, with the rolling stock, lands and appurtenances herein comprised, although no such default as aforesaid shall have been made, if said Company shall offer to give up possession to them, and thereupon to manage and operate the same, and collect the income and earnings thereof, as hereinbefore provided.

ARTICLE 15. It shall be the duty of said Trustees to take possession of said railroads, lands and premises, after any such default as aforesaid, upon written requisition made to them for such purpose by the holders of not less than one-quarter in amount of said bonds then outstanding.

ARTICLE 16. Said Trustees shall have full power, from time to time, for the purpose of enforcing and administering the trusts and powers of these presents, and for operating and managing or keeping in good order and repair the said railroads, rolling stock, lands and premises, to hire and employ such managers, officers, clerks, agents, attorneys and assistants, as they shall deem necessary or useful, and to defray all expenses of such employment, and of otherwise executing the trusts of these presents, and to pay any taxes assessed upon the trust premises or any part thereof, or any other prior charge thereon, out of any moneys coming to their hands, and in case said Trustees shall have no funds in their hands, and shall make any payments either for such purposes, or in any other manner for the protection or preservation of the trust premises (whether said Trustees shall be in possession of the same or not), the amount so paid, together with interest thereon, at the rate of ten (10) per centum per annum, shall be a first charge on the trust premises, and the earnings, income, and proceeds thereof; and in case said Company shall fail, on demand, to repay said Trustees any amount paid by them as aforesaid, with interest at the rate aforesaid, they may enter upon and take possession of said railroads, lands and premises, in the same manner as if said Company had made default in payment of interest on the bonds hereby secured, and retain possession and receive the income, earnings and proceeds thereof, until they shall have recouped themselves the amount so paid with interest as aforesaid.

ARTICLE 17. After any such default, as aforesaid, in payment of interest or sinking fund payments, or any part thereof, and such default shall have continued for one year, and shall not have been waived as hereinafter provided, or in case the principal of any of said bonds shall not be paid on the first day of July, 1921, together with the additional sum hereinbefore specified, it shall be the duty of said Trustees to forthwith proceed to enforce this security, and to sell said railroads, rolling stock, equipment and appurtenances, and the lands and premises comprised herein, or then subject to the lien of these presents, in one lot or in more than one lot or parcel, and at one time, or at different times, and for cash, or on reasonable credit, payment therefor being secured on the property sold, and otherwise, upon such terms and in such manner as said Trustees may, in their discretion, think best.

ARTICLE 18. Such sale or sales may be made either without suit by said Trustees, or their duly authorized agent, by public auction, at the door of the Court House of Multnomah County, in Oregon, after notice of such sale shall have been published at least once a week for four consecutive weeks in the New York Herald (or in case said paper shall not be then published, then in some other daily paper of general circulation published in New York, and selected by said Trustees); and in case said sale shall be adjourned, the like four weeks' notice shall be given of the adjourned sale; or, at the option of said Trustees such sale may be made judicially by action or suit, brought by said Trustees for the foreclosure of this mortgage or enforcement of the liens hereby created, or administration of the trusts of these presents, as said Trustees may deem most expedient.

ARTICLE 19. The moneys received from the net earnings of said railroads or purchase money on any such sale thereof, as hereinbefore provided, or from lands sold, when in possession of said Trustees, shall be applied in the following order: In the first place, in the payment of the cost and expenses of the execution of the trusts of these presents, and the management and operation of said railroads, and the protection and preservation of the trust premises, including a reasonable compensation to said Trustees (in addition to the ordinary compensation salary herein provided for), and the fees of counsel and attorneys; and in the next place, in payment of all coupons then overdue (excluding those on bonds belonging to the sinking fund), in the order in which they shall have become due, those of earlier date having priority over those of later date; and lastly, in payment of the principal of any of said bonds then outstanding, together with the same additional sum as would have become payable if they had been drawn for redemption as hereinbefore provided.

ARTICLE 20. On any sale by virtue of these presents, the receipt of the said Trustees shall be a sufficient discharge to any purchaser for all purchase money paid by him, and any conveyance or assignment made by said Trustees shall vest in said purchaser all the title and interest of said Company as fully and effectully as if the Company were party thereto.

ARTICLE 21. The Company hereby covenants and agrees with the said Trustees, on behalf and for the benefit of the holders of the bonds intended to be secured by these presents, that it will from time to time, and at all times hereafter, upon reasonable request made, execute, acknowledge and deliver, all such further acts, deeds, conveyances and assurances in the law for the better assuring unto the said Trustees and their legal successors from time to time as Trustees of these presents upon the trusts, and for the purposes herein expressed, the said railroads, rolling stock, equipment, lands and premises herein comprised, free from all prior liens and encumbrances, and all other present and future property of said Company of every kind and description as by the said Trustees or their counsel learned in the law shall be reasonably devised, advised or required, and will from time to time, as the said lands granted by the United States are patented to said Company, execute proper deeds of further assurance thereof to said Trustees, so as to fully identify the lands intended to be comprised in or subjected to the lien of these presents.

ARTICLE 22. On payment and cancellation of all of said bonds and the coupons thereto attached, and payment of all expenses incurred by the Trustees in the execution of the trusts of these presents, this indenture shall become void, and all the estate and interest of the Trustees in the premises conveyed hereby, and the lien created thereon by these presents shall absolutely cease and determine.

ARTICLE 23. All rights or powers by these presents given to or covenants, stipulations or agreements made with said Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, shall survive and inure to the benefit of the Trustee or Trustees for the time being of these presents, in the same manner as if said Trustee or Trustees had been named herein.

ARTICLE 24. In these presents the word "Trustees" shall be held to mean the said Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton while continuing to be Trustees hereof, and the Trustees for the time being of these presents, whether all or any be original Trustees or new Trustees.

ARTICLE 25. No Trustee shall be in any manner responsible for any act, default or misconduct of his co-Trustee, nor for that of any agent, bank, banker, broker, or other person employed by him or by his co-Trustee, unless he shall be chargeable with culpable negligence in the selection or in the continuance of their employment, nor otherwise, except for his own willful default, misconduct or gross negligence. But except as herein specially authorized, no Trustee shall have power to delegate his powers or authority to his co-Trustee or co-Trustees, or any other person whatever.

ARTICLE 26. The Trustees may pay such reasonable compensation as they shall deem proper to all agents, land agents, engineers, officers, attorneys and servants whom they may reasonably employ in the management of their trust, and said Trustees shall be paid by said Company, or, in default, out of the trust moneys the sum of fifty cents for each bond certified by them, and one-eighth per cent on all moneys passing through their hands and disbursed by them, for their entire service in the execution of the trusts herein contained until default, and in addition, in case of default, a further reasonable compensation for such additional services as they may be called upon to render in taking possession of and managing the premises, or selling the same, or bringing suit for the foreclosure of these presents, the enforcement of the liens or trusts hereby created, or the collection of the moneys secured or to be secured by these presents.

ARTICLE 27. In case of the death, resignation or refusal or incapacity to act of any Trustee, the surviving or continuing Trustee or Trustees shall by deed appoint a suitable person as Trustee, in the place or stead of the Trustee so dying, resigning, refusing or becoming incapable; and in case there shall be no surviving or continuing Trustees or Trustee, or such surviving or continuing Trustees or Trustee shall fail for three calendar months after the death, resignation, refusal or incapacity of their or his previous co-Trustee to appoint a new Trustee, then said Company, or the holder of any bond secured by these presents, may apply to any Judge in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon, to make such appointment, and any such Judge may appoint a new Trustee by instrument under his hand and seal, without suit or other legal proceedings therefor; but in no case shall a citizen of the State of Oregon be appointed or be capable of acting as a Trustee of these presents. And it is hereby declared to be the duty of said Trustees to bring all actions or suits in any way relating to the trusts of these presents in the Courts of the United States, whenever such Courts shall have jurisdiction of such action or suit, and not in the Courts of the State.

ARTICLE 28. A majority in amount of the holders of the outstanding bonds, at any time secured by these presents, shall have full power at any time, without suit, and whether there be any vacancy or not, to remove all or any of the then existing Trustees, and to appoint other Trustees or another Trustee in their or his place, and to increase or diminish the number of Trustees, or to appoint a corporation duly authorized to execute trusts in the State of Oregon, as one of the Trustees, or as sole Trustee; and any such act of the majority in amount of the bondholders shall be deemed to be sufficiently made, executed, evidenced and proved by a written instrument or instruments purporting to be signed by the bondholders, and stating the identifying numbers and the amount of the bonds held by each signatary, and the respective signatures to which, and the production to a Notary at the time of signature of the bonds specified, shall be acknowledged before, and certified by, a Notary Public, and his certificate attached, and authenticated by his notarial seal. No proof shall be necessary of the qualifications of any such Notary, so purporting to act in the United States, the British Dominions, Holland, France or the German Empire.

ARTICLE 29. Any appointment of a new Trustee, made by the surviving or continuing Trustees or Trustee, or the majority of the bondholders, or a Judge, as hereinbefore provided, shall be effectual to vest in the new Trustees or new Trustee all estates, rights, trusts, powers and duties, as fully as if they or he were Trustees or a Trustee party to these presents, without any new deed or conveyance; but, nevertheless, the Company hereby covenants, in any and every such case, to make, upon request of the new Trustees or Trustee, all such deeds, conveyances and assurances as may be appropriated for more fully and certainly vesting in and confirming to such new Trustees or Trustee such estates, rights, powers, trusts and duties, and every resigning Trustee shall, on like request, make and execute such deeds, conveyances and assurances to his successors or successor.

ARTICLE 30. A majority in amount of the holders of the outstanding bonds, at any time secured by these presents, may, by written instrument, to be executed and proved as provided in Article 28, at any time before the actual sale of the premises, waive any default in payment of interest, or of the annual payment to the sinking fund, yet so far only that the principal of the bonds shall cease to be payable forthwith, in case said principal shall have become so payable by reason of such default; but such waiver shall be of no effect unless the Company shall, together with such instrument or instruments of waiver, hand to the Trustees a sum of money sufficient to pay all coupons and sinking fund payments then in arrears, and said Trustees shall then proceed to pay said coupons and redeem the bonds so provided for as nearly as possible in the manner provided by these presents. And such a majority may, in like manner, at any time, direct and authorize the funding of any coupons secured by these premises, whether overdue or not, into bonds secured by these presents, provided, however, that the aggregate amount of all bonds secured by these presents shall never exceed the rate of Twenty Thousand Dollars for each mile of constructed road, as hereinbefore provided. Any such funding of coupons into bonds shall be binding upon the minority of said bondholders, and shall be carried out by said Trustees, who shall have power to do all things necessary or proper for the purpose.

ARTICLE 31. The Company for itself, its successors and assigns, doth hereby absolutely and irrevocably waive the benefit or advantage of any and all valuation, stay, appraisement or redemption laws, or laws requiring liens or mortgages to be foreclosed by action or suit, and of all other laws now existing, or hereafter passed, which, but for this provision, would prevent the absolute and unconditional sale of the premises hereby conveyed by Court or by a Trustee without suit; and on any such sale said Company for itself, its successors and assigns, covenants to join in and confirm the conveyance to the purchaser.

ARTICLE 32. In case of any sale of said premises, whether by the Trustee or by a Court, any purchaser shall be entitled to deliver, in part payment of the purchase money, any of the outstanding coupons or bonds secured by these presents; and such coupons or bonds shall be reckoned as equivalent to the sum which would be their portion of the net proceeds of the sale, after the deduction of all expenses, all such bonds being reckoned at 110 per cent of their par value. The payment to be made in cash, to cover such expenses, shall be fixed previously by the Trustees, or the Court, as the case may be, and announced in the advertisement of sale.

ARTICLE 33. The Trustees shall have power to release from the lien of these presents any land, rolling stock or other property, become useless for the purposes of the railroads by alteration of route, changes in machinery or equipment or otherwise; but only on condition that the property so sold be forthwith replaced by other property of equal value, and subjected to the lien of these presents.

ARTICLE 34. On any sale, whether by the Trustees or a Court of the property hereby conveyed, or any part thereof, the Trustees shall have the right to buy in the same, and a majority in amount of the holders of the outstanding bonds shall have the right, by written instrument, evidenced and proved as hereinbefore provided by Article 28, to fix a sum which it shall be the duty of the Trustees to bid for the property to be sold on behalf and for the benefit of such bondholders, but only on condition that due provision is made by such majority to the satisfaction of the Trustees or the Court, as the case may be, for the payment in cash of all expenses incurred in the execution of the trusts of these presents, and of the proportion of such sum payable to the bondholders not concurring in such request.

ARTICLE 35. On any such purchase the Trustees shall hold the property so purchased upon trust for the equal benefit of the bondholders who had required the Trustees to buy in the property on their behalf, as the absolute property of said bondholders, without any right of redemption or resale, in favor of said Company, or any bondholder.

ARTICLE 36. The Trustees shall deposit all trust funds, which may, from time to time, come to their hands, in their joint names, in the London and San Francisco Bank, Limited, or such other respectable bank or banks, trust company or companies, in London, New York, Frankford, San Francisco or Portland, as they may from time to time agree upon, and may from time to time invest the same, until required, in the purchase of United States stocks or bonds, at their market value, or in bonds secured by these presents, at any price not exceeding the par value thereof, or on loans secured on such stocks or bonds.

ARTICLE 37. The six thousand bonds intended to be now issued and secured by these presents, and all other bonds which may at any time hereafter be created and intended to be secured by these presents, shall, after the execution thereof by the Company, be delivered to said Trustees, to be certified by them as herein provided, and shall not be delivered back when certified to said Company, but shall be retained and held by said Trustees, who shall only deliver them to the Company, or to the purchasers of such bonds, upon the payment to said Trustees of the price thereof.

ARTICLE 38. The bonds to be issued on the security of these presents (except the first issue of 6,000 bonds) shall only be sold or disposed of upon terms and at a price approved of by said Trustees.

ARTICLE 39. The proceeds of all bonds sold or disposed of shall be applied by said Trustees first in paying off and discharging the said prior lien of Two Millions of Dollars hereinbefore referred to, and the residue shall be held by them as a construction fund, and shall be exclusively disbursed for the completion of the railroads of the said Company, first to California, in accordance with said Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, or with any amendments thereof which may be hereafter made by Congress and accepted by said Company, and when the railroad to California is completed so that cars can run through from Portland to San Francisco then to Astoria and Junction, in accordance with said Act of Congress of May 4th, 1870.

ARTICLE 40. For the purpose of securing the due application of the proceeds of bonds to the construction of said railroads as aforesaid, the Trustees shall disburse such proceeds only under the advice and upon the certificate of a competent engineer, from time to time agreed upon and nominated in writing by them for the purpose; and all purchases of rails, rolling stock, ties or other material shall be made on account of said construction fund, and in the name of said Trustees, so that such material shall upon the purchase thereof become and continue subject to the lien of these presents.

ARTICLE 41. The payment of coupons upon bonds now or hereafter to be issued on the security of these presents not exceeding four coupons upon any one bond after its issue shall be considered as part of the expense of, and chargeable to, the construction of the railroad to California until through connection is made with the system of the California railroads so that cars can run between Portland and San Francisco, and of the railroad to Astoria until the railroad is opened from Portland to tide water at Astoria; and the construction of a railroad bridge across the Willamette at Portland, so as to connect the railroads of said Company on each side of that river, and any necessary or proper increases of depot and dock accommodation in or near Portland, shall be considered part of the expenses of the railroad to California.

ARTICLE 42. At any time after, but not before the first day of January, 1888, whenever said Company shall have constructed any additional railroad beyond the 306½ miles hereinbefore described, said Company may prepare and execute such a number of additional bonds to be secured by these presents as shall not exceed in the whole, including the bonds for Six Millions of Dollars to be now issued, the rate of $20,000 for each mile of constructed road, and shall deliver said bonds to such Trustees, who shall cause the constructed road to be carefully examined and measured by their supervising engineer, and if they shall receive from such engineer a certificate that the additional road is duly constructed and completed to the length of miles claimed, with all proper depots and equipment in proportion to the rest of the constructed road, they shall certify said bonds, and hold the same as hereinbefore provided until sold by said Company and then deliver the same to the purchasers thereof, upon receipt of the purchase money, provided, however, that said Trustees shall not be required to examine and certify bonds for less than ten miles of railroad at one time.

ARTICLE 43. All bonds to be hereafter issued as aforesaid shall be in the same form and payable in the same manner as the bonds now to be issued, except that they shall bear the date when actually certified by said Trustees, and shall have all coupons of earlier date cut off, so as to bear interest only from the date when certified, and shall all be consecutively numbered from 6,001 onwards; and all such bonds when certified by said Trustees shall be in all respects equally secured by these presents, with the 6,000 bonds to be now issued.

ARTICLE 44. And whereas, by reason of distance, lapse of time, or other accident, the dates of the actual execution of this indenture of mortgage and trust by the various parties thereto may be previous or subsequent to the date of which it bears date, now it is hereby expressly agreed and declared that this indenture of mortgage and trust shall be dated the first day of June, 1881, and shall be valid and effectual as if executed on the day of the date thereof, and that this indenture of mortgage and trust is the indenture of mortgage referred to in the bonds hereinbefore mentioned, the form whereof is hereinbefore set forth, and is made and executed by and between the parties hereto as and for the indenture of mortgage and trust securing and intended to secure said bonds as in said bonds is mentioned and recited.

In Witness Whereof, The Oregon and California Railroad Company, pursuant to a resolution of its Board of Directors authorizing the same, has caused these presents and nineteen duplicates thereof to be sealed with its corporate seal, signed by its President, and attested by its Assistant Secretary; and the said Trustees respectively have hereunto and unto the said nineteen duplicates thereof set their hands and seals the day and year above written.

Exhibit J

Schedule of all sales of said granted lands, including conveyances and pending contracts, separately stated as to each of said land grants.

The general source from which the information contained in the following schedule has been obtained is as follows: As to conveyances executed prior to June 11, A. D. 1879, the records in the office of the Recorder or Clerk (as the case may be) of each of the counties in which any of said granted lands were or are situated; as to conveyances executed on and after said June 11, A. D., 1879, the records of the minutes of the proceedings of the Board of Directors of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, which purport to contain descriptive lists of all conveyances executed on and after said date; as to pending contracts, the annual returns of the Oregon and California Railroad Company to the Assessors of the several counties in which any of said granted lands were or are situated, which returns purport to contain all of said pending contracts.

In the following schedule sales (whether conveyances or pending contracts) are classified according to the quantity of land sold, and the purchase price per acre. For the purpose of compactness, each class is designated by a capital letter, to-wit:

"A." Designating sales each in a quantity not exceeding one quarter section and for a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre;

"B." Designating sales each in a quantity not exceeding one quarter section, but for a price exceeding $2.50 per acre;

"C." Designating sales each in a quantity exceeding one quarter section but not exceeding 640 acres;

"D." Designating sales each in a quantity exceeding 640 acres but not exceeding 2,000 acres;

"E." Designating sales each in a quantity exceeding 2,000 acres.

RECAPITULATION—TOTAL SALES—BOTH GRANTS.

The following statement covers both grants, and includes all sales,—both conveyances and pending contracts. The entire time during which sales have been made is divided into two periods, viz: 1872 to 1897 inclusive, and 1898 to 1908 inclusive. Pending contracts are included in the latter period. The exact purchase price as to pending contracts is unknown, but is computed at $10.00 per acre.

Exhibit K

Schedule of patented lands now remaining unsold, described by governmental subdivisions, tabulated by Counties, and separately stated as to each of said land grants.

Governmental subdivisions of sections are designated by the abbreviations "N," "S," "E," "W," "NE," "NW," "SE" and "SW," meaning, respectively, north, south, east, west, northeast, northwest, southeast and southwest.

EAST SIDE GRANT.

Act of July 25, A. D. 1866, as amended.

All of the lands of said East Side Grant are situated in the State of Oregon; the respective counties are indicated in the schedule.

The Counties are arranged in the order in which they occur in the grant from West to East, commencing at the North. Thus arranged, they appear in the following order. For convenience, the total number of acres in each County is here stated:

Exhibit L

To his Excellency, the President, and Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

Your memoralist, the legislative assembly of the State of Oregon, most respectfully represents:

That vast tracts of public lands within Oregon are claimed and held by the Oregon & California Railroad Company, as grantee in succession, under the acts of Congress of the United States of July 25, 1866, and April 10, 1869;

That said tracts are withdrawn from sale, whereby the development and material prosperity of the State is retarded;

That said railroad company, so claiming said lands, has not complied with the terms of said act of April 10, 1869, as to the terms of sale and the quantities of land to be sold;

That said conditions are claimed to inure only to the United States as grantor to the predecessor in alleged interest of said Oregon & California Railroad Company, and have not been complied with; therefore,

Your memorialist most respectfully asks that the Congress of the United States be and hereby is requested to enact such laws and take such steps by resolution, or otherwise, as may be necessary to compel said railroad company to comply with the conditions of said grant, and to enact and declare some sufficient penalty for noncompliance therewith by way of forfeiture of the grant, or otherwise, as in the wisdom of Congress may seem best.

That the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Oregon and all other land grant states be and they hereby are requested to use their utmost endeavor to procure the needed legislation in the above matter.

That this memorial be forwarded to the President and to Oregon Senators and Representatives in Congress.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 2nd day of March, 1909, there was duly filed in said Court a

in words and figures as follows, to wit:

To the Honorable Judges of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon

Come now your petitioners, B. W. Nunnally, John Weist, Geo. E. Walling, Edward E. Stucker, William Weist, Francis Weist, W. D. Sappington, and O. N. Cranor, and respectfully show unto Your Honors that, each of your petitioners is a citizen and resident of the United States; and that, by reason of the facts hereinafter stated, your petitioners have, and each of them has an interest in the subject matter of this suit, and of the things set forth in Complainant's bill of complaint filed herein; and especially has each of your petitioners an interest in, and claim upon a certain portion or parcel of the lands mentioned and described in Complainant's said bill of complaint; such parcel of land so claimed by each of your petitioners being particularly described and the character of claim asserted thereto being fully set forth by each of your petitioners hereinafter. To the end that your petitioners may have their several rights adjudicated, established and enforced without a multiplicity of suits, and that such multiplicity of suits may be avoided, your petitioners pray that they be permitted to intervene herein and be made parties to this suit; and, with this their petition, your petitioners, now and at all times hereafter reserving to themselves all advantages and benefits of exception which can or may be had or taken to any and all errors, imperfections or uncertainties in Complainant's bill contained; for answer thereunto, or to so much, and to such part thereof as your petitioners are advised are material and it is necessary for them to make answer unto, present this their petition, answer and cross-bill by way of asking the affirmative relief to which, as they are advised, the facts alleged entitle them severally to demand:

I.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true the allegations of paragraph One (1) of Complainant's bill of complaint, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, now is, and at all the times hereinafter mentioned as to it was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Oregon, and a resident and citizen of said State.

The defendant Southern Pacific Company now is, and at all the times hereinafter mentioned as to it was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kentucky, and a resident and citizen of said last named State.

The defendant Stephen T. Gage is a resident and citizen of the City of San Francisco, in the State of California, and is sued in his own right, and also as sole surviving trustee under a certain deed of trust hereinafter described.

The defendant Union Trust Company now is, and at all the times hereinafter mentioned as to it was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, and a resident and citizen of said last named State, and is sued in its own right, and also as trustee under a certain mortgage deed hereinafter described.

Each of the defendants John L. Snyder, Julius F. Prahl, Albert E. Thompson, James Barr, Fred Witte, W. A. Anderson, W. H. Anderson, O. M. Anderson, F. E. Williams, Paul Birkenfeld, J. H. Lewis, Francis S. Wiser, W. E. Anderson, Albert Arms, Joseph A. Maxwell, Isaac McKay, J. R. Peterson, D. MacLafferty, Edgar MacLafferty, V. V. McAboy, George C. MacLafferty, George Edgar MacLafferty, E. L. MacLafferty, B. N. MacLafferty, Enos M. Fluhrer, F. W. Floeter and S. Shryock, is a resident and citizen of the County of Columbia in the State of Oregon.

Each of the defendants Sidney Ben Smith, Orrin J. Lawrence, Robert G. Balderree, Oscar E. Smith, Egbert C. Lake, C. W. Sloat, Jesse F. Holbrook, A. E. Haudenschield, H. S. Montgomery, and W. A. Noland, is a resident and citizen of the County of Lane in the State of Oregon.

Each of the defendants John H. Haggett, Charles W. Mead, William Otterstrom, Angus MacDonald, John T. Moan, Joseph D. Hadley, Henry C. Ott, Fred L. Freebing, William Cain, R. T. Aldrich and James

C. O'Neill is a resident and citizen of the County of Multnomah in the State of Oregon.

Each of the defendants Alexander Fauske, Francis Wiest, Cordelia Michael, John B. Wiest, Cyrus Wiest, John Wiest, Thomas Manley Hill, Otto Nelson, Jasper L. Hewitt, B. L. Porter and Frank Wells is a resident and citizen of the County of Clackamas in the State of Oregon.

Each of the defendants C. P. Wells, I. H. Ingram, L. G. Reeves and W. W. Wells is a resident and citizen of the County of Polk in the State of Oregon.

The defendant F. M. Rhoades is a resident and citizen of the County of Douglas in the State of Oregon.

The defendant Marvin Martin is a resident and citizen of the County of Linn in the State of Oregon.

The defendant Roy W. Minkler is a resident and citizen of the County of Clarke in the State of Washington.

Certain of said defendants above named are described otherwise than by Christian name for the reason that the Christian name of each of said defendants is to your Orator unknown.

II.

These, your petitioners and intervenors, admit, and allege as true the allegations of paragraph Two (2) of Complainant's said bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill; the same being as follows:

On or about the twenty-fifth day of July, A. D. 1866, the Congress of the United States passed an Act entitled, which said Act was approved and became operative upon said twenty-fifth day of July, A. D. 1866, and which said Act is in terms as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that the 'California and Oregon Railroad Company,' organized under an act of the State of California, to protect certain parties in and to a railroad survey, 'to connect Portland, in Oregon, with Marysville, in California,' approved April 6, 1868, and such company organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said state shall hereafter designate, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to lay out, locate, construct, finish and maintain a railroad and telegraph line between the City of Portland in Oregon, and the Central Pacific Railroad in California, in the manner following, to-wit: The said California and Oregon Railroad Company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph within the State of California, beginning at some point (to be selected by said company) on the Central Pacific Railroad in the Sacramento Valley, in the State of California, and running thence northerly, through the Sacramento and Shasta valleys, to the northern boundary of the State of California; and the said Oregon company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph line within the State of Oregon, beginning at the city of Portland, in Oregon, and running thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys to the southern boundary of Oregon, where the same shall connect with the part aforesaid to be made by the first-named company; Provided, That the company completing its respective part of the said railroad and telegraph from either of the termini herein named to the line between California and Oregon before the other company shall have likewise arrived at the same line, shall have the right, and the said company is hereby authorized, to continue in constructing the same beyond the line aforesaid, with the consent of the State in which the unfinished part may lie upon the terms mentioned in this act, until the said parts shall meet and connect, and the whole line of said railroad and telegraph shall be completed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the said companies, their successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores over the line of said railroad, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile (ten on each side) of said railroad line; and when any of said alternate sections or parts of sections shall be found to have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted or otherwise disposed of, other lands, designated as aforesaid, shall be selected by said companies in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections designated by odd numbers as aforesaid, nearest to and not more than ten miles beyond the limits of said first-named alternate sections; and as soon as the said companies, or either of them, shall file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior a map of the survey of said railroad, or any portion thereof, not less than sixty continuous miles from either terminus, the Secretary of the Interior shall withdraw from sale public lands herein granted on each side of said railroad, so far as located and within the limits before specified. The lands herein granted shall be applied to the building of said road within the States, respectively, wherein they are situated. And the sections and parts of sections of land which shall remain in the United States within the limits of the aforesaid grant shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold: Provided, That bona fide and actual settlers under the pre-emption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the price fixed for said lands at the date of such settlement, improvement and occupation: And provided also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead act, who comply with the terms and requirements of said act, shall be entitled, within the limits of said grant, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres of the land so reserved by the United States, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby granted to said companies for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power and authority are hereby given to said companies to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, water, and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side tracks, turn-tables, water stations, or any other structures required in the construction and operating of said road.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That whenever the said companies, or either of them, shall have twenty or more consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line ready for the service contemplated by this act, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners, whose compensation shall be paid by said company, to examine the same, and if it shall appear that twenty consecutive miles of railroad and telegraph shall have been completed and equipped in all respects as required by this act, the said commissioners shall so report under oath to the President of the United States, and thereupon patents shall issue to said companies, or either of them, as the case may be, for the lands hereinbefore granted, to the extent of and coterminous with the completed section of said railroad and telegraph line as aforesaid; and from time to time, whenever twenty or more consecutive miles of the said road and telegraph shall be completed and equipped as aforesaid, patents shall in like manner issue upon the report of the said commissioners, and so on until the entire railroad and telegraph authorized by this act shall have been constructed, and the patents of the lands herein granted shall have been issued.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the grants aforesaid are made upon the condition that the said companies shall keep said railroad and telegraph in repair and use, and shall at all times transport the mails upon said railroad, and transmit despatches by said telegraph line for the government of the United States, when required so to do by any department thereof, and that the government shall at all times have the preference in the use of said railroad and telegraph therefor at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the rates paid by private parties for the same kind of service. And said railroad shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the government of the United States, free of all toll or other charges upon the transportation of the property or troops of the United States; and the same shall be transported over said road at the cost, charge and expense of the corporations or companies owning or operating the same, when so required by the government of the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the said companies shall file their assent to this act in the Department of the Interior within one year after the passage hereof, and shall complete the first section of twenty miles of said railroad and telegraph within two years, and at least twenty miles in each year thereafter, and the whole on or before the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five; and the said railroad shall be of the same gauge as the 'Central Pacific Railroad' of California, and be connected therewith.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said companies named in this act are hereby required to operate and use the portions or parts of said railroad and telegraph mentioned in section one of this act for all purposes of transportation, travel, and communication, so far as the government and public are concerned, as one connected and continuous line; and in such operation and use to afford and secure to each other equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time and transportation, without any discrimination whatever, on pain of forfeiting the full amount of damages sustained on account of such dsicrimination, to be sued for and recovered in any court of the United States, or of any State, of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That in case the said companies shall fail to comply with the terms and conditions required, namely, by not filing their assent thereto as provided in section six of this act, or by not completing the same as provided in said section, this act shall be null and void, and all the lands not conveyed by patent to said company or companies, as the case may be, at the date of any such failure, shall revert to the United States. And in case the said road and telegraph line shall not be kept in repair and fit for use, after the same shall have been completed, Congress may pass an act to put the same in repair and use, and may direct the income of said railroad and telegraph line to be thereafter devoted to the United States, to repay all expenditures caused by the default and neglect of said companies or either of them, as the case may be, or may fix pecuniary responsibility, not exceeding the value of the lands granted by this act.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the said 'California and Oregon Railroad Company,' and the said 'Oregon Company' shall be governed by the provisions of the general railroad and telegraph laws of their respective States, as to the construction and management of the said railroad and telegraph line hereinbefore authorized, in all matters not provided for in this act. Wherever the word 'company' or 'companies' is used in this act it shall be construed to embrace the words 'their associates, successors and assigns,' the same as if the words had been inserted, or thereto annexed.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That all mineral lands shall be excepted from the operation of this act; but where the same shall contain timber, so much of the timber thereon as shall be required to construct said road over such mineral land is hereby granted to said companies; Provided, That the term 'mineral lands' shall not include lands containing coal and iron.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the said companies named in this act shall obtain the consent of the legislatures of their respective States, and be governed by the statutory regulations thereof in all matters pertaining to the right of way, wherever the said road and telegraph line shall not pass over or through the public lands of the United States.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said California and Oregon railroad companies, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act."

Said last described Act of Congress was amended by an Act of Congress approved June twenty-fifth, A. D. 1868, entitled, "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,'" which said amendatory act is in terms as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That section six of an act entitled, 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, be so amended as to provide that instead of the times now fixed in said section, the first section of twenty miles of said railroad and telegraph shall be completed within eighteen months from the passage of this act, and at least twenty miles in each two years thereafter, and the whole on or before the first day of July, Anno Domini eighteen hundred and eighty."

III.

These, your petitioners and intervenors, admit, and allege as true, paragraph Three (III) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill; the same being as follows:

No right, title, or interest in or to any of the grants, franchises or other benefits in the State of Oregon, provided for by said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, was ever acquired by any corporation or person, or otherwise, except at the time, in the manner, and upon the terms and conditions as hereinafter set forth.

On or about the sixth day of October, A. D. 1866, certain proceedings were had by which certain persons attempted to organize, under the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon, a corporation bearing the corporate name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal office at the city of Portland, in said State of Oregon.

Said Oregon Central Railroad Comapny projected its railroad line from said city of Portland in a westerly direction to the village of Forest Grove, and thence southerly to and beyond the village of McMinnville, on the westerly side of the Willamette River, from which circumstance said company and its line of railroad became known, and therefore will herein be referred to and mentioned, as the "West Side Company" and the "West Side Line" respectively, to distinguish the same from a certain other line of railroad projected at about the same time on the easterly side of said river by another railroad company bearing the same corporate name, as hereinafter set forth.

On the tenth day of October, A. D. 1866, the Legislature of the State of Oregon adopted a joint resolution, which on the last aforesaid day was approved by the governor of said State, and which is in terms as follows:

"Whereas, The Congress of the United States, at its last session, passed an act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, Oregon, and made it the duty of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon to designate the company, organized under the laws of Oregon, which shall receive that part of said land grant lying within the State of Oregon; therefore be it

"Resolved by the House, the Senate concurring, That the 'Oregon Central Railroad Company,' a company organized under the general incorporation laws of this State, be and the same is hereby designated as the company which shall be entitled to receive the land granted and all the benefits of an Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, entitled 'An Act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, Oregon,' so far as the said grant applies to the State of Oregon."

Assuming in the premises to have been lawfully designated therefor, said West Side Company, on or about the twenty-fifth day of May, A. D. 1867, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in terms assenting to the provisions of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and, on or about the sixth day of July, A. D. 1867, filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States an authenticated copy of the last aforesaid resolution, together with a certified copy of its articles of incorporation, and a certified copy of the aforesaid joint resolution of the legislature of the State of Oregon; and, on or about the twentieth day of August, A. D. 1868, filed in the last aforesaid office a general map of survey of its projected line of railroad.

In the meantime, and on or about the twenty-second day of April, A. D. 1867, certain persons, residents of the State of Oregon, then and thereafter contending that said West Side Company was never lawfully incorporated or organized, and designing to secure the several grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, in that behalf caused certain proceedings to be had intended to organize, under the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon, a corporation bearing the same corporate name, to wit: "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal place of business at the city of Salem, in said State of Oregon.

Said last mentioned Oregon Central Railroad Company projected its line of railroad on the easterly side of the Willamette River, and, for the reasons hereinbefore explained, said last mentioned company and its line of railroad became known as the "East Side Company" and the "East Side Line," respectively, and therefore will herein be so referred to and mentioned.

Said East Side Company, in furtherance of its aforesaid design, on the twentieth day of October, A. D. 1868, procured a joint resolution to be adopted by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, and approved by the governor of said State, which said resolution is in terms as follows:

"Whereas, The Congress of the United States, by an Act approved July 25, 1866, entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' did grant certain lands in the State of Oregon, and confer certain benefits and privileges upon such company organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said State should thereafter designate; and

"Whereas, The Legislative Assembly of Oregon, at its fourth regular session, did adopt a joint, resolution known as 'House Joint Resolution No. 18, designating in terms the Oregon Central Railroad Company as the company entitled to receive the land granted by, and all the benefits and privileges of, the said Act of Congress; and

"Whereas, At the time of the adoption of the said joint resolution as aforesaid no such company as the Oregon Central Railroad Company was organized or in existence, and the said joint resolution was adopted under a misapprehension of facts as to the organization and existence of such company; and

"Whereas, The designation of the company to receive the lands in the State of Oregon granted, and the benefits and privileges conferred by, the said Act of Congress, yet remains to be made;

"Be it resolved by the Senate, the House concurring, That the Oregon Central Railroad Company, a corporation organized at Salem on the twenty-second (22d) day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven (1867), under and pursuant to the laws of the State of Oregon, be and the same is hereby designated as the company entitled to receive the lands in Oregon, and the benefits and privileges conferred by the said Act of Congress."

Thereupon a controversy arose between said West Side Company and said East Side Company, as to which of said companies was entitled to the grants, franchises and privileges of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866; which controversy continued until on or about the month of January, A. D. 1870, as hereinafter set forth.

Said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, prescribed as a condition precedent to the vesting of any of the grants contained therein, that the company designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon should within one year from said twenty-fifth day of July, A. D. 1866, file in the Department of the Interior its assent to said Act and the terms and conditions thereof.

The time within which to file an assent as aforesaid had expired long prior to the designation of said East Side Company by the Legislature of the State of Oregon on October twentieth, A. D. 1868, as aforesaid. Because of the premises, said East Side Company did apply to the Congress of the United States, during the session thereof commencing in the month of December, A. D. 1868, for an extension of the time within which to file its assent as aforesaid; and, in that behalf, did lay before Congress said joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Oregon last herein described, and did represent that all of the recitals thereof were true, and that because of the premises, the several grants, franchises and privileges of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, has lapsed and the benefits thereof would be wholly lost to the State of Oregon unless revived by Congress in manner aforesaid.

During the consideration by Congress of said application of said East Side Company, said West Side Company likewise appeared before Congress and opposed said application, and in that behalf contended that the several grants, franchises and privileges of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, had heretofore become, and then were, vested in said West Side Company.

Thereafter, and by Act of Congress approved April tenth, A. D. 1869, entitled, "An Act to amend an Act entitled, 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-six," Congress did grant the said application of said East Side Company, but upon the express condition that the lands granted as aforesaid should be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre.

Said Act of Congress approved April tenth, A. D. 1869, is in terms as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section six of an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, be, and the same is hereby amended so as to allow any railroad company heretofore designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, in accordance with the first section of said Act, to file its assent to such Act in the Department of the Interior within one year from the date of the passage of this Act; and such filing of its assent, if done within one year from the passage hereof, shall have the same force and effect to all intents and purposes as if such assent had been filed within one year after the passage of said act: Provided, That nothing herein shall impair any rights heretofore acquired by any railroad company under said Act, nor shall said Act or this amendment be construed to entitle more than one company to a grant of land; And Provided, Further, That the lands granted by the Act aforesaid shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre."

On or about the eighth day of June, A. D. 1869, said East Side Company, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in the following terms:

"Whereas, The Congress of the United States, on the 25th day of July, 1866, passed an Act entitled 'An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' and

"Whereas, Such Act provided that such company thereafter organized under the laws of Oregon, and designated by the Legislature of such State, should be entitled to receive and manage the said grant in Oregon, said Act further requiring that the company so organized and designated should, within one year from the date of its passage (to wit: July 25, 1866), file its assent in the Department of the Interior, and

"Whereas, No company was designated by such Legislature within the year within which such an assent was required to be filed, and

"And Whereas, The Congress of the United States did, in April, A. D. 1869, pass an Act amnedatory of the said Act of July 25, 1866, extending the time in which the company designated might file its said assent, which Act was approved by the President of the United States, April 10, 1869, and is entitled 'An Act to amend an Act entitled an Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon, approved July 25th, 1866';

"Therefore, Resolved, That this company, the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon, incorporated at Salem, Oregon, April 22, 1867, do hereby accept all the provisions, rights, privileges and franchises of said Act of July 25, A. D. 1866, entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' and of all Acts amendatory thereof and upon the conditions therein specified, and do hereby give our assent and the assent of such company thereto, and the Secretary of this Company is hereby instructed to prepare a true copy of this resolution, certified to under the seal of the corporation, signed by himself as Secretary, and by the President of this company, and such certified copy transmit to and file the same with and in the office of the Secretary of the Interior at Washington City, D. C."

On or about the thirtieth day of June, A. D. 1869, said East Side Company filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States a certified copy of said resolution last herein set forth.

On or about the twenty-ninth day of October, A. D. 1869, said East Side Company filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States a map of survey and location of the first sixty miles of its projected line of railroad.

On the twenty-fourth day of December, A. D. 1869, said East Side Company completed the construction of the first twenty miles of its aforesaid line of railroad, commencing at the City of Portland, and on the thirty-first day of December, A. D. 1869, the same was examined and approved by commissioners appointed therefor pursuant to the provisions of section four of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866.

Said West Side Company wholly failed to complete the construction of any part of its said line of railroad pursuant to the terms and conditions of the aforesaid Acts of Congress; and on or about the month of January, A. D. 1870, said West Side Company acquiesced in the aforesaid substitution of said East Side Company as the recipient of the aforesaid grants, privileges and franchises, and abandoned and waived all claim thereto, and in lieu thereof, applied for, obtained and accepted a separate and similar grant of lands, franchises and other benefits, pertaining to its line of railroad projected as aforesaid, by Act of Congress approved May fourth, A. D. 1870, as hereinafter more particularly set forth.

By reason of the premises, no right, title or interest in or to any of the grants, franchises or other benefits of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, was ever acquired by said West Side Company, or by, through or under it; or by said East Side Company, or by, through or under it, except by virtue of, and expressly subject to, all of the terms and conditions of said Act of Congress approved April tenth, A. D. 1869.

In the meantime said East Side Company had become involved in litigation questioning the validity of its incorporation and organization and its right to use said corporate name. Because of the premises, promoters, officers and stockholders of said East Side Company did, on or about the seventeenth day of March, A. D. 1870, organize the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company under the general incorporation law of the State of Oregon. In that behalf certain articles of incorporation were, on said last mentioned date, executed in triplicate and filed, one in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon, one in the office of the County Clerk of the County of Multnomah, Oregon, (being the county in which the principal office of said corporation was located), and one in the office of the Secretary of said corporation, at the city of Portland, in said County of Multnomah.

The principal object of said corporation, as stated in its aforesaid articles of incorporation, was to become the successor of said East Side Company, and as such, to receive and exercise the grants, franchises and privileges of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid Acts amendatory thereof; a copy of which said articles of incorporation is hereto attached marked "Exhibit A" and made a part of this bill.

Pursuant to the premises, on or about the twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1870, said East Side Company did execute and deliver to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company a certain instrument in writing, purporting to assign, transfer and convey to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company all of the property of said East Side Company, including the right, title and interest of said East Side Company in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid Acts amendatory thereof; a copy of which said instrument is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit B," and made a part of this bill. Thereafter, and during the months of March and April, A. D. 1870, said instrument last described was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid Acts amendatory thereof.

veyance of any of the lands granted by the aforesaid Acts of Congress, but to constitute said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the successor of said East Side Company, to construct, complete and equip the line of railroad aforesaid, and, in aid thereof, to receive and exercise the grants, franchises and other benefits in that behalf extended by Congress as aforesaid, and upon all of the terms and conditions aforesaid, and not otherwise.

On said twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1870, said East Side Company, by action of its Board of Directors and its stockholders, became and was dissolved and since last mentioned date, no corporate powers or franchises have ever been exercised by, or in the name of, said East Side Company.

On the fourth day of April, A. D. 1870, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in terms as follows:

"Whereas, This company has purchased and taken an assignment from the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon, incorporated April 22, 1867, of all the railroad franchises and other property of such corporation, including all the right, title, interest and claim, both legal and equitable, absolute and contingent, of such corporation, of, in and to the lands and all other benefits granted to the Oregon Company by an Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July 25, 1866, and amendments thereto, therefore,

Resolved, That this company do accept the grant conferred by such Act of Congress, and all the benefits and emoluments therein or thereof granted, and upon the terms and conditions therein specified, and

Resolved, That the President and Secretary of this Company be and they are hereby authorized and directed to file the assent of this Company to such Act of Congress and amendments thereto, as aforesaid, in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, which shall be done by filing a copy of these resolutions in such office, certified to under seal of this Company, and signed by the President and Secretary respectively.

Resolved Further, That a copy of the deed of assignment from said Oregon Central Railroad Company, certified to by the President and Secretary under the seal of this Company, be also filed in such office of the Secretary of the Interior, and accompanying these resolutions."

On or about the twenty-eighth day of April, A. D. 1870, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States an authenticated copy of said last described resolution, and a certified copy of said instrument dated March twenty-ninth, A. D. 1870; and at all times thereafter said defendant Oregon and Cali- fornia Railroad Company has assumed, and still assumes, to be the successor of said East Side Company and of all its rights under said Acts of Congress, as aforesaid.

IV.

These, your petitioners, admit, and allege as true, paragraph Four (IV) of Complainant's bill; the same being as follows:

Having abandoned and waived all claim to the grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, as hereinbefore set forth, said West Side Company did importune the Congress of the United States to extend to it, in lieu thereof, a similar grant of lands, franchises and other benefits pertaining to its aforesaid projected line of railroad, known as the "West Side Line"; and thereafter, by an Act entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon," approved May fourth, A. D. 1870, Congress in that behalf provided as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria, and from a suitable point of junction near Forest Grove to the Yamhill River, near McMinnville, in the State of Oregon, there is hereby granted to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, now engaged in constructing the said road, and to their successors and assigns, the right of way through the public lands of the width of one hundred feet on each side of said road, and the right to take from the adjacent public lands materials for constructing said road, and also the necessary lands for depots, stations, side tracks, and other needful uses in operating the road, not exceeding forty acres at any one place; and also, each alternate section of the public lands, not mineral, excepting coal or iron lands, designated by odd numbers nearest to said road, to the amount of ten such alternate sections per mile, on each side thereof, not otherwise disposed of or reserved or held by valid pre-emption or homestead right at the time of the passage of this Act. And in case the quantity of ten full sections per mile cannot be found on each side of said road, within the said limits of twenty miles, other lands designated as aforesaid shall be selected under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior on either side of any part of said road nearest to and not more than twenty-five miles from the track of said road to make up such deficiency.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall cause the lands along the line of said railroad to be surveyed with all convenient speed. And wherever and as often as the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior maps of the survey and location of twenty or more miles of said road, the said Secretary shall cause the said granted lands adjacent to be segregated from the public lands; and thereafter the remaining public lands subject to sale within the limits of the said grant, shall be disposed of only to actual settlers at double the minimum price for such lands; And provided, also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead Act who comply with the terms and requirements of said Act, shall be entitled, within the said limits of twenty miles, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each of the said ungranted lands, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That whenever and as often as the said company shall complete and equip twenty or more consecutive miles of the said railroad and telegraph, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the same to be examined, at the expense of the company, by three commissioners appointed by him; and if they shall report that such completed section is a first-class railroad and telegraph, properly equipped and ready for use, he shall cause patents to be issued to the company for so much of the said granted lands as shall be adjacent to and coterminous with the said completed sections.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said alternate sections of land granted by this Act, excepting only such as are necessary for the company to reserve for depots, stations, side tracks, wood yards, standing ground, and other needful uses in operating the road, shall be sold by the company only to actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres or a quarter section to any one settler, and at prices not exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the said company shall, by mortgage or deed of trust to two or more trustees, appropriate and set apart all the net proceeds of the sales of the said granted lands, as a sinking fund, to be kept invested in the bonds of the United States, or other safe and more productive securities, for the purchase from time to time, and the redemption at maturity, of the first mortgage construction bonds of the company, on the road depots, stations, side tracks, and wood yards, not exceeding Thirty Thousand Dollars per mile of road, payable in gold coin not longer than thirty years from date, with interest payable semi-annually in coin not exceeding the rate of seven per centum per annum; and no part of the principal or interest of the said fund shall be applied to any other use until all the said bonds shall have been purchased or redeemed and cancelled; and each of the said first mortgage bonds shall bear the certificate of the trustees, setting forth the manner in which the same is secured and its payment provided for. And the District Court of the United States, concurrently with the State Courts, shall have original jurisdiction, subject to appeal and writ of error, to enforce the provisions of this section.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior its assent to this Act within one year from the time of its passage; and the foregoing grant is upon condition that said company shall complete a section twenty or more miles of said railroad and telegr within two years, and the entire railroad and telegr within six years, from the same date."

By said words "Oregon Central Railroad Co pany," in said last mentioned Act of Congress, the C gress of the United States intended to, and did, refe said West Side Company. The line of railroad scribed in said last mentioned Act, extending from city of Portland to McMinnville, by way of Fo Grove, is the identical line of railroad theretofore jected by said West Side Company, as aforesaid.

On or about the second day of July, A. D. 1 said West Side Company, through its Board of Dir ors, adopted a resolution in terms assenting to, and cepting, all of the aforesaid provisions of said last m tioned Act of Congress, and on or about the twent day of July, A. D. 1870, an authenticated copy of last described resolution was, by said West Side C pany, filed in the office of the Secretary of the Inte of the United States.

On or about the fifteenth day of August, A. 1870, all of the so-called capital stock of said W Side Company was acquired by the then owners of so-called capital stock of said defendant Oregon California Railroad Company, and thereafter all of so-called capital stock of both of said companies was by a single interest, and the affairs of said two c panies were conducted virtually as a single enterp until the dissolution of said West Side Company, as hereinafter stated.

V.

These, your petitioners and intervenors, admit, and allege as true, paragraph Five (V) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, as follows:

All of the original capital stock of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and substantially all of the capital stock of said West Side Company, was issued without consideration, and, by reason of the premises, neither of said companies had any original capital or other funds for construction or other purposes, except such as was borrowed therefor.

By the issuance and negotiation or pledge of mortgage bonds and otherwise, approximately Eight Million Dollars was, during the year 1870, procured by said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and approximately One Million Dollars was, during the year 1871, procured by said West Side Company; and, with the funds thus provided, the work of constructing the aforesaid lines of railroad respectively, was prosecuted until on or about the month of January, A. D. 1873. During said period of construction, said East Side Line was constructed and extended from said city of Portland to a point near Roseburg, a distance of approximately one hundred and ninety-seven (197) miles (including said first section of twenty miles theretofore constructed), and said West Side Line was constructed and completed from said city of Portland to said McMinnville, by way of said Forest Grove, a distance of approximately forty-seven (47) miles.

On or about the said month of January, A. D. 1873, said funds became exhausted and both of said companies became bankrupt and insolvent, and becaue theresof, the construction of both of said lines of railroad was abandoned; and, as to said East Side Line, was not resumed until the month of June, A. D. 1881, as hereinafter set forth; and, as to said West Side Line, was never resumed.

Because of the premises, on or about the twenty-fourth day of July, A. D. 1874, the direction and control of the financial affairs of said two companies were assumed and thereafter exercised by the then creditors thereof, organized under the name "Bondholders Committee." On or about the twenty-ninth day of February, A. D. 1876, all of the so-called capital stock of both of said companies was, for virtually a nominal consideration, acquired by said Bondholders Committee, and thereafter all of the affairs of said two companies were conducted by, and under the direction and control of, said Bondholders Committee.

On or about the sixth day of October, A. D. 1880, for the purpose of merging said West Side Company into said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and under the direction and influence of said Bondholders Committee, the said West Side Company did execute and deliver to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company a certain instrument, in writing, purporting to assign, transfer and convey to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company all of the property of said West Side Company, including the right, title and interest of said West Side Company in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress approved May fourth, A. D. 1870; a copy of which said instrument is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit C" and made a part of this bill.

The purpose, intent and effect of said last described instrument was and is not to operate as a sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by said Act of Congress approved May fourth, A. D. 1870, but to constitute said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the successor of said West Side Company to construct, complete and equip the line of railroad aforesaid, and particularly that part thereof extending from Forest Grove to Astoria, and, in aid thereof, to receive and exercise the grants, franchises and other benefits in that behalf extended by Congress as aforesaid, and upon all of the terms and conditions aforesaid, and not otherwise.

On or about said sixth day of October, A. D. 1880, said West Side Company, by action of its Board of Directors and its stockholders, became and was dissolved; and at all times thereafter said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, has assumed, and still assumes, to be the successor of said West Side Company, as aforesaid.

Substantially all transactions subsequent to said last mentioned date relate to and affect both of the aforesaid grants of land. Hereafter in this bill of complaint, for convenience, said grant of land created by said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866, and the aforesaid Acts amendatory thereof, will be described by the words "East Side Grant"; said grant of land created by said Act of Congress approved May fourth, A. D. 1870, will be described by the words "West Side Grant"; and both of said grants will be described by the words "said land grants."

VI.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Six (VI) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, as follows:

On or about the seventh day of May, A. D. 1881, the financial affairs of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were adjusted in manner following: All of its former capital stock was, by action of its Board of Directors and its stockholders, canceled, for the reasons hereinbefore set forth; the amount of its capital stock was then established, and at all times since has remained, and still is, in the total sum of Nineteen Million Dollars ($19,000,000) composed of Twelve Million Dollars so-called preferred stock and Seven Million Dollars so-called common stock; and in payment of its then existing indebtedness, with accrued interest thereon, all of said new capital stock was then issued, and ever since has been, and still is, outstanding. By the issuance of said new capital stock, and by the use of a part of the proceeds of a new bond issue hereinafter referred to all of its then existing indebtedness was fully paid and discharged, and the several mortgages and other instruments purporting to secure the same, were canceled and satisfied.

On or about the second day of June, A. D. 1881, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered to Henry Villard, Robert Davie Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees for the owners and holders of said preferred stock so-called, a certain instrument, in writing, purporting to convey to said Trustees all of the lands of both said land grants, in trust to secure to the owners of said preferred stock so-called, some pretended right or interest in or to said lands, and for certain other purposes, as more particularly appears in said instrument, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit D" and made a part of this bill.

Said deed of trust last described purports to convey, and purports to authorize said Trustees and their successors to sell and convey, said lands to persons other than actual settlers, and in quantities greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, and for purposes other than those described in and by said land grants respectively; and because thereof, and otherwise, said deed of trust was and is in violation and breach

On or about the twenty-eighth day of June, A. D. 1881, said deed of trust was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, in the State of Oregon, in Book 27 of Mortgages, at page 179; and thereafter, and at about the same time, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by either of said land grants.

Thereafter such proceedings were had and action taken under the terms of said deed of trust, and by and with the consent and co-operation of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, that the defendant Stephen T. Gage became, and he now is, the sole surviving Trustee thereunder; and said defendant Stephen T. Gage, individually, and as Trustee as aforesaid, and the defendant Southern Pacific Company as the present owner of all of said preferred stock so-called, claim and assert some right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon said lands or some part thereof, under and by virtue of said deed of trust; but because of the premises, neither of said defendants has any right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon any part of said lands.

By the issuance and negotiation of two separate issues of its corporate bonds, bearing date June first, A. D. 1881, and May twenty-sixth, A. D. 1883, respectively, (known and described as "First Mortgage Bonds" and "Second Mortgage Bonds" respectively), the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company did provide further construction funds aggregating approximately Five Million Dollars, and on or about the month of June, A. D. 1881, the work of constructing said East Side Line was resumed, and thereafter was continued until on or about the month of January, A. D. 1884. During said last mentioned period of construction, said East Side Line was constructed and extended from said Roseburg to a point about one and one-quarter miles southerly from Ashland, in the State of Oregon, a total distance of approximately one hundred and forty-five (145) miles.

On or about said month of January, A. D. 1884, said last mentioned construction funds became exhausted, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company again became bankrupt and insolvent, and the work of construction was again abandoned, and was not resumed until the month of April, A. D. 1887, as hereinafter set forth.

On or about the nineteenth day of January, A. D. 1885, said First and Second Mortgage Bonds being still outstanding, in a suit then instituted and pending in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon, wherein certain of the holders of said First Mortgage Bonds were plaintiffs, and said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and others were defendants, the railroad lines and other property of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were placed in the hands of a Receiver then and there appointed therefor by said Court.

On or about the twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, and during the pendency of said receivership, the defendant Southern Pacific Company acquired, and thereafter exercised ownership and control of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as hereinafter more specifically set forth; and, subsequently, under the direction and influence of said defendant Southern Pacific Company, certain breaches and violations of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively hereinafter complained of were committed.

And to the end that Your Honors may be further advised in the premises, and particularly concerning the nature and purpose of the several negotiations and transactions pertaining to, and resulting in, the absorption of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company by the defendant Southern Pacific Company, (in paragraph VII hereof, set forth), your Orator says, that on and prior to said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, the general status of said land grants was as follows, to wit:

Under said East Side grant, during the years 1871 to 1877 inclusive, patents for approximately 328,000 acres of land (being lands contiguous to the first 125 miles of said East Side Line), were applied for by, and issued to, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company as the successor of said East Side Company; except as aforesaid, no patents under said East Side grant were issued until the year 1893.

Under said West Side grant, no patents were ever issued prior to the year 1895.

The total length of said East Side Line is approximately 367 miles; with the exception of the northerly 197 miles thereof, no part of said East Side Line was constructed within the times prescribed by the terms of said East Side grant; and on said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, the southerly portion thereof, extending from Ashland to the southern boundary line of the State of Oregon, still remained unconstructed. Of the West Side Line, that part thereof extending from Forest Grove to Astoria was never constructed, and because of the premises, the aforesaid granted lands contiguous to said unconstructed portion, were, by Act of Congress approved January thirty-first, A. D. 1885, entitled, "An Act to declare forfeiture of certain lands granted to aid in the construction of a railroad in Oregon," forfeited to, and the ownership thereof assumed by, the United States of America.

Of the aforesaid granted lands, approximately 250,000 acres had been sold prior to said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887; and your Orator is informed and believes, and therefore states, that nearly all of the lands so disposed of were sold to actual settlers, and in small quantities, although in many instances in quantities and for prices slightly in excess of the aforesaid limitations prescribed by said land grants respectively.

VII.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Seven (VII) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

On or about the month of January, A. D. 1885, a certain railroad syndicate known as the "Southern Pacific System," controlling substantially all railroad lines in the southwestern part of the United States, and particularly on the Pacific Coast south of the State of Oregon, including the Central Pacific Railroad Company, (which had theretofore become the successor to the grants, franchises and other benefits in the State of California, under said Act of Congress approved July twenty-fifth, A. D. 1866), organized, under the general incorporation law of the State of Kentucky, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as a general holding company for said syndicate; and, on or about the month of March, A. D. 1885, said defendant Southern Pacific Company acquired, and ever since has exercised, a controlling interest in each of the corporations constituting said Southern Pacific System; and, at about the same time, became, and ever since has been, the lessee of each of said corporations, whereby it came into possession of, and at all times thereafter has operated, all of said railroad lines.

Several of the constituent companies of said Southern Pacific System held lands granted by the United States in aid of the construction of their respective lines of railroad, aggregating many millions of acres. Shortly after its organization, the defendant Southern Pacific Company established a general land department, with offices at the city of San Francisco, in the State of California, under the charge of a certain officer known as its land agent, and thereupon assumed, and thereafter exercised, through its said land agent, control over the handling and disposing of all of the lands of its constituent companies.

Shortly after the affairs of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were placed in the hands of a Receiver, as hereinbefore set forth, said defendant Southern Pacific Company, designing to extend its aforesaid railroad system and its aforesaid land holdings by acquiring ownership and control of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, in that behalf entered into negotiations with said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and the bondholders and stockholders thereof and certain other parties hereinafter named; and, for the purpose thereof, the stockholders of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company became and were organized under the name "Stockholders Committee," certain of the owners of the aforesaid mortgage bonds became and were organized under the name "Frankfort Bondholders Committee," and certain other of the owners of said bonds became and were organized under the name "London Bondholders Committee," said Bondholders Committees representing the owners of substantially all of the aforesaid First and Second Mortgage Bonds of said company.

On or about the twenty-eighth day of March, A. D. 1887, a certain contract in writing was entered into by and between said defendant Southern Pacific Company, said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Com- pany, the defendant Union Trust Company, said Stockholders Committee, said London Bondholders Committee, said Frankfort Bondholders Committee, and the Pacific Improvement Company, (a corporation organized as hereinafter set forth) a copy of all of the terms of which contract is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit E" and made a part of this bill.

By virtue of said last described contract, all of the corporate securities of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were acquired by the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as hereinafter set forth; and the general purpose and effect of said contract were such that said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, (together with its said lines of railroad) was absorbed by, and merged into, said Southern Pacific System, and the independent corporate existence thereof virtually ceased. But it manifestly appears from the subsequent conduct of said defendant Southern Pacific Company, and your Orator charges and states, that at the time of the negotiation and execution of said last described contract, it was the purpose and design of said defendant Southern Pacific Company to secure control of the aforesaid land grants, and to divert the same from the aforesaid lawful uses and purposes thereof, to the exclusive use, benefit and enrichment of said defendant Southern Pacific Company; and to that end, said last described contract was, by the parties thereto, so conditioned, and the conditions, options and provisions thereof were so exercised and performed, that said defendant Southern Pacific Company did thereafter maintain said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company a corporation in name and form only, as a mere instrumentality and device, to accomplish, and at the same time to conceal its aforesaid purpose and design, and in that behalf to obtain and dispose of said lands in the name of, and under the guise and pretense of the administration and exercise of the aforesaid land grants by, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company; and to that end, certain proceedings were had and transactions entered into, including that certain contract of lease and that certain mortgage deed hereinafter set forth.

Pursuant to the terms of said contract of March twenty-eighth, A. D. 1887, on or about the twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, all of the capital stock and all of said Second Mortgage Bonds of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were transferred, assigned and delivered to said Pacific Improvement Company; and all of said First Mortgage Bonds were transferred, assigned and delivered to the defendant Southern Pacific Company.

During all the times mentioned in this bill as to it, said Pacific Improvement Company was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, and wholly owned, controlled and directed by the owners of a majority of the capital stock of the defendant Southern Pacific Company. The defendant Southern Pacific Company was the actual purchaser of said capital stock and said Second Mortgage Bonds, and paid all the purchase price therefor, and said Pacific Improvement Company never had any beneficial interest therein; but, under the direction and influence of said defendant Southern Pacific Company, said Pacific Improvement Company was made a nominal party to said contract of March twenty-eighth, A. D. 1887, for the purpose of concealing the true facts in the premises.

Said Pacific Improvement Company held said capital stock of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company for the use and benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, until on or about the ninth day of April, A. D. 1901, and on or about said last mentioned date, all of said capital stock was transferred to the defendant Southern Pacific Company, which, at all times thereafter, has been, and still is, the owner and holder thereof. At all times since said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, the defendant Southern Pacific Company has controlled and directed the election of directors and officers of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and has directed and controlled the management and conduct and all of the corporate acts of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, including all transactions and proceedings in this bill set forth.

Pursuant to the terms of said contract of March twenty-eighth, A. D. 1887, on or about the third day of January, A. D. 1888, the defendant Southern Pacific Company and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company entered into a certain contract of lease in writing, bearing date the first day of July, A. D. 1887, whereby all of the railroad and telegraph lines and other property of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were leased to the defendant Southern Pacific Company for the term of forty years, upon certain terms and conditions, all of which more specifically appear in said instrument, a copy of all of the terms of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit F," and made a part of this bill; which said contract of lease remained in full force and effect until on or about the first day of August, A. D. 1893, upon which last named date the defendant Southern Pacific Company and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company entered into a further contract of lease in writing, bearing date the first day of August, A. D. 1893, whereby all of the railroad and telegraph lines and other property of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company were leased to the defendant Southern Pacific Company for the term of thirty-four years, upon certain terms and conditions, all of which more specifically appear in said instrument, a copy of all of the terms of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit G," and made a part of this bill; which said last described contract of lease at all times since said first day of August, A. D. 1893, has been, and still is, in full force and effect. Pursuant to said contracts of lease, the defendant Southern Pacific Company did, on or about the sixth day of June, A. D. 1888, enter into possesison of all of the property leased as aforesaid, and at all times thereafter has been, and still is, in full possession thereof, and engaged in the operation of said lines of railroad, and during all of said times has enjoyed, and still is enjoying, all of the benefits and profits thereof.

Pursuant to the terms of said contract of March twenty-eighth, A. D. 1887, and under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, on or about the third day of January, A. D. 1888, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered to the defendant Union Trust Company a certain instrument in writing, bearing date of July first, A. D. 1887, purporting to mortgage and convey in trust to the defendant Union Trust Company, certain of the property of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, for certain purposes, and upon certain terms and conditions therein expressed, and, among others, to secure the payment of certain bonds thereafter to be issued and negotiated in the name of said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, a copy of which said instrument is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit H," and made a part of this bill.

By that certain provision of said instrument last described, to-wit:

"And all property, real, personal or mixed, which on the twelfth day of May, 1887, was covered by the mortgage securing the then existing First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company,"

reference was had, and intended to be had, to a certain deed of trust, executed by said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to Henry Villard, Horace

White and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees, bearing date June first, A. D. 1881, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit I," and made a part of this bill.

On or about the eighteenth day of January, A. D. 1888, said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, in the State of Oregon, in Book 63 of Mortgages, at page 287; and thereafter, and about the same time, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by either of said land grants.

Pursuant to the premises, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company did execute, and the defendants Southern Pacific Company and Union Trust Company did negotiate and deliver, certain of the bonds provided for by said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, said bonds bearing even date therewtih, of which approximately Seventeen Million, Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($17,500,000) in amount are still outstanding, the exact amount whereof is to your Orator unknown. All of said bonds inured to the exclusive benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company and were used by the defendant Southern Pacific Company to purchase the securities of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as aforesaid, and to complete the construction of, and improve, the lines of railroad leased by it as aforesaid. By reason of the premises, said bonds in fact represent and constitute the indebtedness of the defendant Southern Pacific Company; and the payment of all of said bonds, both as to principal and interest was and is, by endorsement thereon in writing, guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company.

In so far as said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, relates to any of said granted lands, if at all, it purports to convey, and purports to authorize the defendant Union Trust Company and its successors to sell and convey, said lands to persons other than actual settlers, and in quantities greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price exceeding Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, and for purposes other than those prescribed in and by said land grants respectively; and because of the premises in this bill set forth, said mortgage deed was and is in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms, conditions and provisions of each of said land grants respectively.

The defendant Union Trust Company, individually, and as Trustee for the holders and owners of said bonds, claims some right, title, interest or lien, in, to or upon some of said granted lands, under and by virtue of said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887; but because of the premises, the defendant Union Trust Company has no right, title, interest or lien, in, to or upon any of said lands, either in its own behalf, or as Trustee as aforesaid.

In the meantime and during the year 1887, (commencing in the month of April and ending in the month of December), the last section of said East Side Line, extending from Ashland aforesaid to the southern boundary line of the State of Oregon, was constructed by said Pacific Improvement Company, under some form of contract with the defendant Southern Pacific Company, the particulars whereof are to your Orator unknown; but, in furtherance of its aforesaid purpose and design, on or about the sixth day of June, A. D. 1887, the defendant Southern Pacific Company did instigate and cause the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and said Pacific Improvement Company to enter into a certain contract, by the terms of which the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company agreed to pay for said work of construction in its said bonds thereafter to be issued and guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as hereinbefore set forth. And your Orator says that in truth and in fact, at the time of the execution of said contract of June sixth, A. D. 1887, a large part of said work of construction had been performed under some prior contract, as hereinbefore set forth.

On or about the sixth day of June, A. D. 1888, the aforesaid receivership proceedings were dismissed and said Receiver was discharged; all of said First Mortgage Bonds and said Second Mortgage Bonds, (not including said issue of bonds dated July 1st, A. D. 1887), together with all mortgages and trust deeds securing the payment thereof, were canceled and discharged; and thereupon the defendant Southern Pacific Company entered into possession of all the property of the defendant

Oregon and California Railroad Company pursuant to the terms of said contract or lease, as hereinbefore set forth.

VIII.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Eight (VIII) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

Immediately after said sixth day of June, A. D. 1888, the defendant Southren Pacific Company, through its aforesaid land department, assumed, and at all times thereafter has exercised, absolute control over the disposition and sale of the aforesaid granted lands of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, conducting all business, however, in the name of the latter company.

Until about the year 1893, there was no marked change in the manner of the disposition of said lands, but, in the meantime, and under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, preparations were made for the future exploitation of said land grants, to-wit:

On or about the month of June, A. D. 1888, a large force of timber cruisers and land examiners was organized and thereafter was kept employed until all of said lands had been examined and appraised and prices fixed thereon without regard to the aforesaid limitations prescribed by said land grants; and your Orator says, that as to at least eighty per cent (80%) of all of said granted lands, the first sale price fixed thereon and the lowset price for which the same were ever offered for sale was greatly in excess of the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre.

During the years 1891 and 1892, anticipating and seeking to evade responsibility for the contemplated violations of the terms and conditions of said grants, and under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and the defendant Union Trust Company adopted quit-claim form of contracts and conveyances for use in making sales of said lands, and thereafter refused to contract for, or give, any other form of conveyance, except in case where, by prior contracts, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company had obligated itself to do otherwise.

Commencing with about the year 1891, patents were rapidly applied for and obtained, the amount patented under said East Side grant, commencing with the year 1893, aggregating approximately 2,450,000 acres, and the amount patented under said West Side grant, commencing with about the year 1895, aggregating approximately 128,000 acres, being the only patents ever applied for or issued under said West Side grant. No patents have been issued since the year 1906, under either of said land grants, for reasons hereinafter explained.

mand for said lands among wealthy land speculators and timber men, aided in that behalf by its well-equipped organization therefor, and by an extensive acquaintance previously established by said land department in the sale and disposition of its other land holdings hereinbefore mentioned. A sudden and rapidly increasing demand for said lands in large quantities and at rapidly increasing prices, was developed, commencing with about the year 1894.

Taking advantage of the opportunity to violate the terms and conditions of said land grants, promoted and developed as aforesaid, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, from about the year 1894 until about January first, A. D. 1908, sold and disposed of said granted lands in a manner and upon terms in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, and with the sole object of securing the greatest possible financial benefit therefrom; and in that behalf a large quantity of said lands was sold to speculators and others than actual settlers, and for speculation and purposes other than actual settlement, and in quantities greatly in excess of one-quarter section to one purchaser, to-wit: in quantities from one thousand to forty-five thousand acres to a single purchaser, and for prices greatly in excess of $2.50 per acre, to-wit: for prices from $5 to $40 per acre.

has heretofore made approximately 5,306 sales, aggregating approximately 820,000 acres, that is to say:

	Sales.	Acres.
Sales in quantities exceeding one-quarter section	376	524,000

Substantially all of said 524,000 acres sold in quantities exceeding a quarter section to one purchaser as aforesaid (and a considerable portion of said other lands sold as aforesaid), were sold to speculators and others than actual settlers and for the purpose of speculation and not for the purpose of settlement and for prices greatly in excess of two dollars and fifty cents per acre. And of said 524,000 acres sold in quantities exceeding one quarter section to one purchaser as aforesaid, approximately 478,000 acres (or about 90 per cent thereof) were sold or conveyed since the year 1897; and of said 478,000 acres, approximately 370,000 acres were sold to 38 purchasers in quantities exceeding 2,000 acres to each purchaser.

Nearly all sales were made by contracts providing for payment of purchase price in from five to ten equal annual installments, and execution of conveyance upon final payment. And although sales were suspended on or about January first, A. D. 1903, as hereinafter stated, many contracts of sale were then pending, as to which the installments falling due have been collected and conveyances executed from time to time down to and including the present, and many of such contracts are still pending.

Of the total sales made as aforesaid, approximately 4,476 have been fully executed and conveyances given aggregating approximately 646,000 acres; and approximately 830 executory contracts are still pending, aggregating approximately 174,000 acres.

For the more specific information of Your Honors, your Orator has prepared a schedule setting forth all said conveyances heretofore made and all said pending contracts, stated separately as to each of said land grants, which schedule is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit J," and made a part of this bill. In said schedule, conveyances are appropriately classified by years, and also according to quantity of land conveyed and purchase price; pending contracts are classified according to quantity of land sold. Your Orator is not informed as to the exact time said pending contracts were negotiated or executed or as to the exact purchase price thereof; but your Orator is informed and believes and therefore states, that all of said pending contracts were negotiated and entered into since the first day of January, A. D. 1898, and prior to the first day of January, A. D. 1903, and that the average purchase price thereof is approximately Ten Dollars per acre. Said schedule (Exhibit J) was compiled on the first day of July, A. D. 1908, but no subsequent transactions affect the matters therein stated, except that a few of said pending contracts have since said compilation matured and merged into final conveyances.

As to the statements contained herein (including said Exhibit J) concerning the number of sales, quantity of land sold, and the purchase price thereof, transactions consisting of executory contracts of sale, which were rescinded or canceled for any reason, and which therefore neither merged into deeds nor constitute pending contracts at the present time, are not included in any of said computations. Transactions relating to the part of said West Side grant which was forfeited to your Orator, as aforesaid, are not included in said computations.

Except as otherwise specifically stated, all statements in this bill concerning the manner of selling and disposing of said lands, apply to each of said land grants.

As between the parties thereto, said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, to the defendant Union Trust Company, has been treated as a lien upon all of said granted lands which remained unsold on the twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887. As to all lands of the last described class which have been sold since said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, the defendant Union Trust Company has received substantially all of the purchase price, and has joined in the execution of all conveyances. The exact amount thus received by the defendant Union Trust Company, and the specific application thereof, are to your Orator unknown; but your Orator says that the proceeds of all sales made since said twelfth day of May, A. D. 1887, have inured to the exclusive benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, by application in payment of the aforesaid bonds guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company, or otherwise.

IX.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Nine (IX) of Complianant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

In the month of October, A. D. 1901, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, with all of its constituent lines, became merged into that certain railroad system known as the "Harriman Lines," which said railroad system at all times thereafter has held a monopoly of railroad transportation affecting a large part of the United States, and particularly in the State of Oregon, south of Portland.

Thereupon a land department was organized and established at the city of San Francisco, to handle, exploit and manipulate all of the lands of the constituent companies of said Harriman Lines, including the aforesaid land grants of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company. All transactions concerning the last named land grants were conducted as before in the name of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company. Sales were continued as before until on or about January first, A. D. 1903.

On said first day of January, A. D. 1903, there remained unsold of said granted lands approximately

2,373,000 acres consisting of approximately 2,080,000 acres which have been heretofore patented under said land grants, and approximately 293,000 acres of unpatented lands which are now claimed by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company under and by virtue of said land grants. Said lands remaining unsold as aforesaid will hereinafter be described by the words "said unsold lands."

Approximately 1,800,000 acres of said unsold lands are situated southerly from Eugene, and constitute nearly one-half, in alternate sections, of all lands within approximately forty miles of said line of railroad from Eugene to the southerly boundary line of the State of Oregon, only a small portion of said granted lands in that part of the East Side grant having ever been sold. The territory in which said unsold lands are situated was and is wholly dependent for railroad transportation on the railroad lines of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, now operated by the defendant Southern Pacific Company as one of the constituent companies of said Harriman Lines as aforesaid.

Since said first day of January, A. D. 1903, and particularly during the last preceding two years, certain persons exceeding one thousand in number have severally applied to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase certain of said unsold lands in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, or a quarter section to each one of them, said applicants to purchase intending and desiring to purchase said lands so applied for by them respectively for the purpose of actually settling thereupon and making a permanent home thereof, and several of said applicants to purchase having actually settled and established a permanent home upon the land so applied for by them respectively; and at the time of said applications to purchase each of said applicants did tender to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents for each of the lands so applied for as the purchase price thereof.

And in addition to the said applicants to purchase, a large number of persons are ready and willing to settle upon said lands, and to purchase the same for the purpose of actual settlement thereupon and of making a permanent home thereof, in quantities, for the price, and upon terms as prescribed by said land grants respectively, but are deterred therefrom by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as hereinafter stated.

Notwithstanding the premises, and in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, under the direction and influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company as one of the constituent companies of said Harriman lines, on or about the first day of January, A. D. 1908, withdrew from sale all of said unsold lands, and at all times thereafter has refused, and still refuses, to sell any part thereof to actual settlers or for purposes of actual settlement, or in quantities or for prices as prescribed by the terms of said land grants respectively, or at all; and particularly has at all times refused, and still does refuse, to entertain any of the aforseaid applications to purchase, or to sell any of the lands applied for as aforesaid, to the persons aforesaid, upon the terms aforesaid, or upon any terms whatsoever. And ever since said first day of January, A. D. 1903, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has not only failed and neglected to encourage or promote the settlement of said lands, or the purchase thereof by actual settlers, or for the purpose of actual settlement, but by divers means and methods has at all times discouraged, obstructed, forbidden and prevented the settlement of said lands or any part thereof, and the purchase thereof or any part thereof, upon the terms prescribed by said land grants, or otherwise, by actual settlers or for the purpose of actual settlement.

Since said first day of January, A. D. 1903, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed, and now asserts, an absolute and unconditional estate in and to all of said unsold lands, and has attempted, and still does attempt, to convert its aforesaid conditional estate into an unconditional estate, in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants. And by reason of the aforesaid nominal corporate character of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and the further premises herein set forth, the unconditional estate so asserted in its name has inured to the benefit of, and has been exercised by, the defendant Southern Pacific Company as one of the constituent companies of said

Harriman Lines. The practical effect of the premises is the same as if all of said unsold lands had been conveyed to the defendant Southern Pacific Company for the use and benefit of said railroad syndicate.

By reason of the premises, and in violation of the express terms and conditions as well as the plain intendment of said land grants respectively, all of said unsold lands, and the full value thereof, have been converted to the use and benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as one of the constituent companies of the said Harriman Lines; and a virtual land monopoly has been created, and ever since said first day of January, A. D. 1903, has been maintained, and hereafter will be maintained, for the selfish uses and purposes of the defendant Southern Pacific Company and said railroad syndicate, enabling said railroad syndicate, among other things, to control and restrict commercial and industrial development of the territory tributary to said line of railroad, and thereby prevent the construction and establishment of competing railroad lines, which would naturally be attracted by the increase in production that would attend a normal and unrestricted development of industrial and commercial resources, if said granted lands should be sold to actual settlers and for the purpose of actual settlement pursuant to the terms and conditions of said land grants.

And your Orator says, that because of the premises, the industrial and commercial development of those portions of the State of Oregon wherein are situated said unsold lands, has been, and will continue to be, seriously retarded if not completely checked.

Except as otherwise specifically stated, all statements herein contained concerning the withdrawal of said lands from sale, the circumstances, purposes and effects thereof, together with the subsequent opportunities to sell said lands to actual settlers and for the purpose of actual settlement, and the conduct of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company in relation thereto, apply to each of said land grants.

A schedule of all of said unsold lands which have heretofore been patented, described by governmental subdivision, tabulated by counties, and separately stated as to each of said land grants, is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit K," and made a part of this bill. Said schedule has been prepared from the annual return of said lands for purpose of taxation, made by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to the County Assessors of the several counties in which said lands are situated; said annual tax returns purport to contain all of said granted lands which have been heretofore patented and which remain unsold, and your Orator is informed and believes, and therefore states, that the same is correct, but concerning which a full discovery is desired herein. Your Orator is unable to set forth with particularity the unpatented lands claimed as aforesaid, as to which, therefore, a full discovery is desired.

None of said unsold lands have ever been reduced to possession, or in any way improved, unless it be by persons claiming to have settled thereupon, and seeking to purchase the same, as hereinbefore, and hereinafter stated. The reasonable present value of said unsold lands exceeds the sum of $40,000,000.

None of said unsold lands now are, or ever were, necessary to reserve for depots, stations, side tracks, wood sheds, standing ground, or any other needful uses in operating any of said railroad lines or any part thereof, and no part of said lands ever was reserved or used, or now is reserved or used, or is intended to be reserved or used, for any of said purposes.

X.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Ten (X) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

In addition to the purchase price received from the aforesaid sales of said lands, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has received and enjoyed certain other benefits on account of said granted lands, to-wit:

A large number of contracts of sale have been forfeited because of defaults in payment of the annual installments falling due thereon, and the installments previously paid have been retained. Your Orator is not advised as to the exact amount realized in this manner, but is informed and believes, and therefore states, that it exceeds the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000). A full discovery in the premises is hereby sought.

A considerable portion of said lands has, from time to time, been leased for certain rentals paid therefor to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company. Your Orator is not advised as to the amount realized in this manner, and a full discovery in the premises is hereby sought.

The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has cut and used large quantities of timber growing upon said lands, and has also sold large quantities of said timber, receiving the consideration therefor. Your Orator is not advised as to the amount realized in this manner, but is informed and believes, and therefore states, that it exceeds the sum of Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($200,000). A full discovery in the premises is hereby sought.

And in divers other ways the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has received and enjoyed financial benefits on account of said granted lands, the particulars concerning which are unknown to your Orator, and a full discovery in the premises is hereby sought.

XI.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Eleven (XI) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, as follows:

The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has repeatedly threatened, and still threatens to, and will, unless restrained therefrom, sell, contract for sale, convey, or in some manner encumber or impair the title of, said unsold lands or some part thereof, in violation of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively; and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has heretofore cut large quantities of the timber growing upon said unsold lands and has otherwise committed waste thereupon, and by contract and otherwise, has permitted and invited others so to do; and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company threatens to, and will, unless restrained therefrom by this Court, continue to commit waste upon said unsold lands and particularly as to the timber and other natural products thereof, and will continue to permit, contract for and invite others so to do, to the great and irreparable injury of your Orator in the premises.

XII.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Twelve (XII) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

Until the year 1894 there was substantially no demand for said granted lands, except for the purpose of settlement and by persons of limited means able to purchase said lands only in small quantities and at reasonable prices, and nearly all sales were of that character. During a large part of said period, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company maintained an immigration bureau, engaged in inducing immigration and settlement upon said lands, and ostensibly was not otherwise engaged in soliciting or promoting sales. By reason of the premises, the occasional violations of the terms and conditions of said land grants occurring during said period, were concealed and were generally unknown, until ascertained by your Orator as hereinafter stated.

As hereinbefore set forth, a sudden demand arose for said lands commencing about the year 1894, among wealthy speculators and timber men, promoted and developed as aforesaid; and the greater part of the substantial wrongs and violations herein complained of were committed subsequent to that time. But your Orator says that nearly all of the sales consummated after that time were made by executory contracts of sale, which were not placed of record, and which did not merge into deeds for many years thereafter, and a considerable portion of which are still pending. Many of the conveyances for excessive quantities of said lands were not placed of record until recently, and many are still unrecorded. In many instances of sales in excessive quantities, the lands were attempted to be conveyed by several deeds, each of which was for a small quantity of land, whereby the true facts were concealed.

On or about the first day of January, A. D. 1903, all of said unsold lands were withdrawn from sale, and thereafter converted to certain wrongful and unlawful uses and purposes, as hereinbefore set forth. But, designing to conceal the premises from your Orator and the general public, the defendant Oregon and California

Railroad Company has, from time to time, falsely and deceitfully represented that said lands were withdrawn from sale for divers temporary reasons, and with the intention of resuming the sale thereof. An alleged confusion of the records of said land department, the alleged destruction of said records during the San Francisco fire, and other similar excuses were successively used to conceal the true character of said transaction.

XIII.

Your petitioners and intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Thirteen (XIII) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

By reason of the premises, the several wrongful and unlawful transactions in this bill complained of, were concealed from, and wholly unknown to, your Orator, until ascertained as hereinafter stated. On or about the 14th day of February, A. D. 1907, because of the great injury inflicted upon commercial and industrial conditions as aforesaid, and it having become manifest that the several aforesaid representations concerning the withdrawal of said lands from sale were false, the Legislature of the State of Oregon adopted and communicated to your Orator a certain memorial charging in general terms the true facts in the premises (a copy of which memorial is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit L," and made a part of this bill); whereupon the further issuance of patents was suspended, and an investigation of the subject was instituted by your Orator, through its Attorney General, which investigation was concluded on or about the month of January, A. D. 1908. Thereupon the subject was presented to the Congress of the United States, and thereafter, by Joint Resolution, approved April thirtieth, A. D. 1908, Congress did provide as follows:

"That the Attorney General of the United States be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to institute and prosecute any and all suits in equity, actions at law, and other proceedings which he may deem adequate and appropriate to enforce any and all rights and remedies of the United States of America in any manner arising or growing out of or pertaining to either or any of the following described Acts of Congress, to wit: 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon, approved July twenty-fifth, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-Six, as amended by the Acts approved June twenty-fifth, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-Eight, and April tenth, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-Nine. * * Also 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon,' approved May fourth, Eighteen Hundred and Seventy, including all rights and remedies in any manner relating to the lands, or any part thereof, granted by either or any of said Acts; and in and by any and all such suits, actions or proceedings, the Attorney General shall, in such manner as he shall deem appropriate, assert all rights and remedies existing in favor of the United States, relating to the subject of such suits, actions and proceedings, including the claim on behalf of the United States that the lands granted by each of said Acts respectively, or any part thereof, have been and are forfeited to the United States by reason of any breaches or violations of any of the terms or conditions of either or any of said Acts which may be alleged and established in any such suits, actions or proceedings; it not being intended hereby to determine the right of the United States to any such forfeiture or forfeitures, but it being intended to fully authorize the Attorney General in and by such suits, actions or proceedings to assert on behalf of the United States and the court or courts before which such suits, actions or proceedings may be instituted or pending to entertain, consider, and adjudicate the claim and right of the United States to such forfeiture or forfeitures, and if found to enforce the same."

Pursuant to the provisions of said last mentioned Joint Resolution of Congress, this suit is instituted.

XIV.

For convenience of reference, and without making the same a part of their answer and cross-bill, your intervenors insert paragraph XIV of Complainant's bill, as follows:

By reason of the several aforesaid breaches and violations of the aforesaid terms, conditions and provisions of said land grants respectively, certain of said granted lands and certain estates in certain of said granted lands have been, and are, forfeited to your Orator, the United States of America, free from any and all right, title, interest, lien or claim of the defendants herein, or either or any of them, or any one claiming by, through or under them or either or any of them. Among the lands and estates in lands so forfeited to your Orator, are, to-wit:

(1) All of said unsold lands;

(2) Any and all right, title and interest of any kind or nature whatsoever, vested, contingent or expectant, of any, of the defendants herein, or either or any of them, in, to or concerning any of the lands granted under, or by, either of said land grants respectively.

Pursuant to the authority and direction contained in said joint resolution of Congress approved April 30th, A. D. 1908, your Orator does hereby assert title to, and does hereby resume the title of, all of said lands and estates in lands forfeited to your Orator as aforesaid.

In addition to the lands and estates in lands above specified, certain of said granted lands which have been heretofore sold in violation of the terms and conditions of said land grants, and certain estates therein, likewise have been and are forfeited to your Orator, but are not included in this suit, for reasons following, to-wit:

The lands disposed of in violation of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, as aforesaid, were sold, contracted for sale, or conveyed to a large number of purchasers. Including alleged rights of succession by purchase, conveyance, mortgage, descent, devise and otherwise, more than three thousand (3,000) persons, firms and corporations residing in divers parts of the United States and other parts of the world, now assert some right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon the lands sold, contracted for sale and conveyed in violation of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, as aforesaid. The names and places of residence of only a few of said persons, firms and corporations are as yet known to your Orator, and because of the multiplicity and complexity of said transactions, your Orator will be unable to ascertain them in time to include said parties in this suit. Said lands were sold and purchased as aforesaid, and alleged subsequent rights have been acquired therein, under greatly varying circumstances and conditions, and because of the premises, it would be inequitable to attempt to secure an adjudication of the rights of all of said parties by making only a few of them parties defendant as representatives of all thereof. To require the making of all of said persons, firms and corporations parties to this suit, or to otherwise require an adjudication herein of the respective rights in the premises, would indefinitely postpone and ultimately defeat the rights, equities and remedies of your Orator pertaining to said unsold lands, as to which the public interests require a speedy and complete adjudication and enforcement.

Therefore, to the end that justice and equity may be suitably administered in the premises, your Orator institutes this suit for the purpose of obtaining without unnecessary delay, an adjudication and enforcement of the rights, equities and remedies of your Orator against the defendants herein, pertaining to said unsold lands, and otherwise, as more specifically appears in the prayer of this bill; and hereafter, and as soon as your Orator shall be sufficiently advised in the premises, separate and further suits will be instituted for the purpose of asserting and enforcing the rights, equities and remedies now or at any time hereafter existing in favor of your Orator (and not adjudicated or enforced herein) pertaining to any of said granted lands sold or conveyed as aforesaid, or any part thereof, or in any manner arising or growing out of any and all sales and conveyances of said granted lands in violation of any of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively.

Your intervenors admit that the resolution set forth in said paragraph was adopted by the Congress of the United States, as alleged by Complainant, but they deny that under authority, or by virtue of said resolution, or otherwise, Complainant has the right to ask, or the Court to grant a decree of forfeiture of said grant as to the lands applied for thereunder by these, your intervenors; or that Complainant has the right to assert title thereto, or resume possession of any of said lands so applied for by your intervenors.

Your intervenors further deny that, by reason of any of the several alleged breaches or violations of the terms, conditions or provisions of said grant, or otherwise, by any of parties complained of in Complainant's bill, or by reason of anything done or suffered by any of said defendants, certain, or any of said lands, or certain, or any estates in any of said granted lands, have been, or are forfeited to Complainant, free from all or any right, title or interest, lien or claim of the defendants or either or any of them, or any one claiming by, through or under them or either of them, as alleged in Complainant's bill or otherwise; and your intervenors show that each of them has a valid and subsisting claim upon the title to and possession of a certain part or parcel of said granted lands, and that such right, title and possession should be established through defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company under and by virtue of the terms of said grants, as set forth and alleged by Complainant in its bill filed herein. The particulars of claim of title, and the lands applied for by each of your intervenors are specifically alleged and shown hereinafter, each intervenor showing separately the nature of his claim, and the particular lands claimed by each.

XV.

Your intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Fifteen (XV) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

The property described in said mortgage deed bearing date July first, A. D. 1887, (not including any of said granted lands), is of a value largely in excess of the amount of all of said bonded indebtedness purported to be secured by said mortgage deed, and is amply security therefor; your Orator, however, expressly denies that any of said granted lands are included in the property described in said mortgage deed, or that the defendant Union Trust Company, as trustee or otherwise, or any other person, firm, association or corporation, has any right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon any of said lands by virtue of said mortgage deed.

XVI.

These intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Sixteen (XVI) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

Pursuant to the rules and regulations of the Department of the Interior in that behalf duly adopted and in force, all of the aforesaid patents were issued and based upon applications in writing therefor, from time to time filed in the appropriate land office of the United States by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as the successor of said East Side Company and said West Side Company respectively, which said applications contained descriptive lists of the lands so claimed and for which patents were so applied for; and each of which said applications was accompanied and supported by a certain affidavit in writing signed and sworn to by a certain agent of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company thereto duly authorized, to the effect, among other things, that all of the lands so claimed and for which patents were so applied for, were of the character contemplated by the grant under which they were claimed and for which patents were applied for as aforesaid; and believing and relying upon the statements contained in said applications and said affidavits, your Orator issued said patents.

XVII.

Your intervenors admit and allege as true paragraph Seventeen (XVII) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, as follows:

In making sales of said lands as aforesaid, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has, in and by its contracts and conveyances relating thereto, and particularly prior to the sixth day of June, A. D. 1898, made certain valuable reservations unto itself, as follows:

"Reserving, however, a strip of land one hundred feet wide, to be used by the Oregon & California Railroad Company for right of way and other purposes, when the railroad of said Oregon & California Railroad Company, or any of its branches, is or shall be located upon the premises; and the right to take all water needed for the operating of said railroad, and also reserving and excepting from said described premises, so much and such parts thereof as may be mineral lands, other than coal and iron."

All of which said reservations, being in effect the creation of permanent estates in its own favor in and to a large part of said granted lands in violation and breach of the aforesaid terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, were and are null and void. But notwithstanding the premises, the defendant Oregon and Cali- fornia Railroad Company and each of the other defendants herein, claims some inchoate right, title or interest, in and to the lands sold as last aforesaid, under and by virtue of said reservations, concerning which a full discovery is hereby sought; and such right, title and interest, if any, (which is denied), were and are subject to the right of forfeiture and to the several other rights, equities and remedies of your Orator in the premises, asserted herein.

XVIII.

Your intervenors admit, and allege as true, all of paragraph Eighteen (XVIII) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, excepting the clause therein reading "and any and all such rights, title, interests or liens, if any, were and are subject to the right "of forfeiture . . . asserted herein." Which said clause and allegation your intervenors deny in so far as the same may or might affect the claim or right of any of your intervenors in any of the lands claimed by them or either of them. Said paragraph is as follows:

In addition to the several claims of the defendants in this bill specifically mentioned, the defendants and each of them claim some right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon some or all of said granted lands, the particulars whereof are to your Orator unknown, concerning which a full discovery is hereby sought; and any and all such rights, titles, interests or liens, if any, were and are subject to the right of forfeiture and to the several other rights, equities and remedies of your Orator in the premises, asserted herein.

XIX.

Your intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Nineteen (XIX) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

A schedule, accurately setting forth all maps of survey and location filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior of the United States pursuant to the provisions of said land grants respectively, separately stated as to each of said land grants, is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit M" and made a part of this bill.

A schedule, accurately setting forth the time of the construction and completion of the several sections of said railroad and telegraph lines, together with the examination, approval and acceptance thereof, separately stated as to each of said railroad and telegraph lines, is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit N" and made a part of this bill.

A schedule, accurately setting forth the quantity of lands patented from time to time under each of said land grants, compiled by years, and separately stated as to each of said land grants, is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit O" and made a part of this bill. All of said patents were applied for by and issued to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, as the successor of said East Side Company and said West Side Company respectively.

XX.

Your intervenors admit, and allege as true, paragraph Twenty (XX) of Complainant's bill, and make the same a part of this, their answer and cross-bill, the same being as follows:

Each of the defendants (other than the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage and Union Trust Company) asserts some right, title or interest in or to certain of said unsold lands; the general nature and basis of the claims of said last described defendants are identical, and are as follows, to-wit:

Each of said last described defendants alleges to have in good faith actually settled upon certain of said unsold lands, not exceeding one-quarter section or 160 acres in quantity, with the intention of making a permanent home thereof, and to have applied to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase the lands alleged to have been settled upon as aforesaid, and to have tendered to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the sum of $2.50 for each acre applied for as aforesaid, as the purchase price thereof, and that the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has at all times refused, and still refuses, to entertain said applications to purchase, or to sell or convey to said last described defendants respectively the lands so applied for by them respectively, upon the aforesaid terms, or otherwise.

And by reason of the premises alleged by said last described defendants respectively as aforesaid (the truth whereof is to your Orator unknown) said last described defendants severally assert some right, title or interest in or to the lands so applied for by them respectively as aforesaid; and each of said last described defendants has instituted a suit in equity against the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Stephen T. Gage, and Union Trust Company, the general purpose and nature of which is to compel a sale and conveyance of the lands so applied for to said parties applying to purchase the same respectively, as aforesaid; all of which said suits are still pending and none of which have proceeded to any issue other than exceptions to certain portions of the several bills in said suits.

The said suit instituted by the defendant Roy W. Minkler is pending in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of the State of Washington; all of the other said suits are pending in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Oregon.

A schedule accurately setting forth, as to each of said suits, the court number thereof, the names of the parties thereto, the date of the institution thereof, and a description of the land involved therein, separately stated as to each of said land grants, is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit P" and made a part of this bill.

Your Orator leaves said defendants to more specifically set forth herein their respective alleged rights in the premises, as they may be advised.

Unless enjoined therefrom as hereinafter prayed, said defendants instituting said suits as aforesaid will proceed, or attempt to proceed, therein to some form of final judgment or decree. Each of said suits relates to and materially affects the rights and equities of your Orator in the premises. The rights and equities of your Orator in this bill set forth, and the relief hereinafter prayed for, relate to and affect all of the aforesaid alleged rights of said defendants respectively. If said suits shall proceed further, the rights and remedies of your Orator in the premises will be hindered, obstructed and delayed, if not substantially prejudiced. And because of the multiplicity of said suits, your Orator has made said persons parties defendant in this suit, to the end that further proceedings in each of said suits instituted and pending as aforesaid may be enjoined, and, if the Court shall so order, said parties be permitted to set forth herein their respective claims, for adjudication.

XXI.

Your intervenors hereby re-affirm and re-allege all the parts of Complainant's bill hereinbefore admitted to be true, and they rely upon said parts of said bill so set out herein and admitted and alleged to be true, together with the allegations hereinafter set forth, as the basis of their several claims, and the grounds for the relief so sought by them and by each of them in this suit.

Your intervenors, for the purpose of presenting and showing Your Honors the particular and special interest which each of them has asserted, and now claims in the lands, and the subject matter of this suit; and for the purpose of showing that they are, and each of them is entitled to affirmative relief, and to the end that their particular and respective interests in the subject matter of this suit may be protected, established and enforced by decree of Your Honors' Court herein, allege:

That your intervenors are some of the persons mentioned and referred to in paragraph Nine (IX) of Complainant's bill, as having heretofore applied to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase certain of said unsold lands embraced in said grants, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, or one quarter section to each of said persons, for the purpose of actually settling thereon, and at the time of making such application, made tender to said defendant, Oregon and California Railroad Company of the sum of two dollars and fifty cents per acre for each acre of land so applied for by each of said persons as the purchase price thereof:

That during all the times herein alleged as to them, each of your intervenors was, and now is, a citizen of the United States, and a resident thereof; and, at the time of making such application to purchase, each of your intervenors was, and now is legally qualified and entitled to purchase and acquire the particular land applied for, each having done every act required by the terms of the Acts of Congress making said grants of lands as hereinbefore set out:

That said intervenor, B. W. Nunnally, did, a long time prior to the commencement of this suit, apply to the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase the following described lands and real property, to-wit: The S. W. quarter of Section 23 in Township 4 North, of Range 3 W. of the Willamette Meridian.

That said lands and real property consist of one quarter section of land and are a part of the lands described in the Acts of Congress referred to in Complainant's bill of complaint and herein, and described in the bill of complaint as being unsold lands, and in fact are lands which have not been disposed of or sold by the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that your intervenor at said time duly applied to said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase said land and offered to pay said company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, or Four Hundred Dollars for said quarter section of land, and at the time said application to purchase was made your intervenor duly tendered in lawful money of the United States the said Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre or Four Hundred Dollars for said land, and demanded a deed of conveyance therefor under the terms and conditions of said grant, which said tender and offer of your intervenor was refused and denied by said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that at the time your intervenor made said offer to purchase said quarter section of land and ever since said time he intended to and was and is qualified, ready, able and willing and now intends to make an actual settlement upon said lands and occupy and use the same as an actual settler, and so informed the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the time said application for purchase and tender was so made to said company. And he herewith offers to tender into Court the said sum of Four Hundred Dollars, lawful money of the United States, to be paid and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to the person, persons, corporation or corporations qualified and authorized to receive the same, upon the execution and delivery to your intervenor of a good and sufficient deed of conveyance conveying to him the title to said 160 acres, or quarter section of land hereinbefore described, or upon such terms as to Your Honors may seem to be equitable and just.

That said intervenor, William Weist, did, a long time prior to the commencement of this suit, apply to the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase the following described lands and real property, to-wit: The S. W. quarter of Section 23 in Township 4 South, of Range 5 E. of the Willamette Meridian.

That said lands and real property consist of one quarter section of land and are a part of the lands described in the Acts of Congress referred to in Complainant's bill of complaint and herein, and described in the bill of complaint as being unsold lands, and in fact are lands which have not been disposed of or sold by the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that your intervenor at said time duly applied to said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase said land and offered to pay said company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, or Four Hundred Dollars for said quarter section of land, and at the time said application to purchase was made your intervenor duly tendered in lawful money of the United States the said Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre or Four Hundred Dollars for said land, and demanded a deed of conveyance therefor under the terms and conditions of said grant, which said tender and offer of your intervenor was refused and denied by said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that at the time your intervenor made said offer to purchase said quarter section of land and ever since said time he intended to and was and is qualified, ready, able and willing and now intends to make an actual settlement upon said lands and occupy and use the same as an actual settler, and so informed the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the time said application for purchase and tender was so made to said company. And he herewith offers to tender into Court the said sum of Four Hundred Dollars, lawful money of the United States, to be paid and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to the person, persons, corporation or corporations qualified and authorized to receive the same, upon the execution and delivery to your intervenor of a good and sufficient deed of conveyance conveying to him the title to said 160 acres, or quarter section of land hereinbefore described, or upon such terms as to Your Honors may seem to be equitable and just.

That said intervenor, John Weist, did, a long time prior to the commencement of this suit, apply to the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase the following described lands and real property, to-wit: The N. W. quarter of Section 23 in Township 4 South, of Range 5 E. of the Willamette Meridian.

That said lands and real property consist of one quarter section of land and are a part of the lands described in the Acts of Congress referred to in Complainant's bill of complaint and herein, and described in the bill of complaint as being unsold lands, and in fact are lands which have not been disposed of or sold by the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that your intervenor at said time duly applied to said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase said land and offered to pay said company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, or Four Hundred Dollars for said quarter section of land, and at the time said application to purchase was made your intervenor duly tendered in lawful money of the United States the said Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre or Four Hundred Dollars for said land, and demanded a deed of conveyance therefor under the terms and conditions of said grant, which said tender and offer of your intervenor was refused and denied by said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that at the time your intervenor made said offer to purchase said quarter section of land and ever since said time he intended to and was and is qualified, ready, able and willing and now intends to make an actual settlement upon said lands and occupy and use the same as an actual settler, and so informed the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the time said application for purchase and tender was so made to said company. And he herewith offers to tender into Court the said sum of Four Hundred Dollars, lawful money of the United States, to be paid and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to the person, persons, corporation or corporations qualified and authorized to receive the same, upon the execution and delivery to your intervenor of a good and sufficient deed of conveyance conveying to him the title to said 160 acres, or quarter section of land hereinbefore described, or upon such terms as to Your Honors may seem to be equitable and just.

That said intervenor, Francis Weist, did, a long time prior to the commencement of this suit, apply to the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase the following described lands and real property, to-wit: The S. E. quarter of Section 23 in Township 4 South, of Range 5 E. of the Willamette Meridian.

That said lands and real property consist of one quarter section of land and are a part of the lands described in the Acts of Congress referred to in Complainant's bill of complaint and herein, and described in the bill of complaint as being unsold lands, and in fact are lands which have not been disposed of or sold by the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that your intervenor at said time duly applied to said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase said land and offered to pay said company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, or Four Hundred Dollars for said quarter section of land, and at the time said application to purchase was made your intervenor duly tendered in lawful money of the United States the said Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre or Four Hundred Dollars for said land, and demanded a deed of conveyance therefor under the terms and conditions of said grant, which said tender and offer of your intervenor was refused and denied by said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that at the time your intervenor made said offer to purchase said quarter section of land and ever since said time he intended to and was and is qualified, ready, able and willing and now intends to make an actual settlement upon said lands and occupy and use the same as an actual settler, and so informed the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the time said application for purchase and tender was so made to said company. And he herewith offers to tender into Court the said sum of Four Hundred Dollars, lawful money of the United States, to be paid and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to the person, persons, corporation or corporations qualified and authorized to receive the same, upon the execution and delivery to your intervenor of a good and sufficient deed of conveyance conveying to him the title to said 160 acres, or quarter section of land hereinbefore described, or upon such terms as to Your Honors may seem to be equitable and just.

That said intervenor, Geo. E. Walling, did, a long time prior to the commencement of this suit, apply to the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase the following described lands and real property, to-wit: The N. E. quarter of Section 35 in Township 4 South, of Range 5 E. of the Willamette Meridian.

That said lands and real property consist of one quarter section of land and are a part of the lands described in the Acts of Congress referred to in Complainant's bill of complaint and herein, and described in the bill of complaint as being unsold lands, and in fact are lands which have not been disposed of or sold by the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that your intervenor at said time duly applied to said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase said land and offered to pay said company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, or Four Hundred Dollars for said quarter section of land, and at the time said application to purchase was made your intervenor duly tendered in lawful money of the United States the said Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre or Four Hundred Dollars for said land, and demanded a deed of conveyance therefor under the terms and conditions of said grant, which said tender and offer of your intervenor was refused and denied by said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that at the time your intervenor made said offer to purchase said quarter section of land and ever since said time he intended to and was and is qualified, ready, able and willing and now intends to make an actual settlement upon said lands and occupy and use the same as an actual settler, and so informed the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the time said application for purchase and tender was so made to said company. And he herewith offers to tender into Court the said sum of Four Hundred Dollars, lawful money of the United States, to be paid and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to the person, persons, corporation or corporations qualified and authorized to receive the same, upon the execution and delivery to your intervenor of a good and sufficient deed of conveyance conveying to him the title to said 160 acres, or quarter section of land hereinbefore described, or upon such terms as to Your Honors may seem to be equitable and just.

That said intervenor, W. D. Sappington, did, a long time prior to the commencement of this suit, apply to the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase the following described lands and real property, to-wit: The S. W. quarter of Section 31 in Township 8 South, of Range 6 W. of the Willamette Meridian.

That said lands and real property consist of one quarter section of land and are a part of the lands described in the Acts of Congress referred to in Complainant's bill of complaint and herein, and described in the bill of complaint as being unsold lands, and in fact are lands which have not been disposed of or sold by the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that your intervenor at said time duly applied to said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase said land and offered to pay said company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, or Four Hundred Dollars for said quarter section of land, and at the time said application to purchase was made your intervenor duly tendered in lawful money of the United States the said Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre or Four Hundred Dollars for said land, and demanded a deed of conveyance therefor under the terms and conditions of said grant, which said tender and offer of your intervenor was refused and denied by said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that at the time your intervenor made said offer to purchase said quarter section of land and ever since said time he intended to and was and is qualified, ready, able and willing and now intends to make an actual settlement upon said lands and occupy and use the same as an actual settler, and so informed the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the time said application for purchase and tender was so made to said company. And he herewith offers to tender into Court the said sum of Four Hundred Dollars, lawful money of the United States, to be paid and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to the person, persons, corporation or corporations qualified and authorized to receive the same, upon the execution and delivery to your intervenor of a good and sufficient deed of conveyance conveying to him the title to said 160 acres, or quarter section of land hereinbefore described, or upon such terms as to Your Honors may seem to be equitable and just.

That said intervenor, Edward E. Stucker, did, a long time prior to the commencement of this suit, apply to the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase the following described lands and real property, to-wit: The S. ½ and N. W. ¼ of N. W. quarter of Section 31 in Township 8 South, of Range 6 W. of the Willamette Meridian.

That said lands and real property consist of one quarter section of land and are a part of the lands described in the Acts of Congress referred to in Complainant's bill of complaint and herein, and described in the bill of complaint as being unsold lands, and in fact are lands which have not been disposed of or sold by the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that your intervenor at said time duly applied to said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase said land and offered to pay said company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, or Four Hundred Dollars for said quarter section of land, and at the time said application to purchase was made your intervenor duly tendered in lawful money of the United States the said Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre or Four Hundred Dollars for said land, and demanded a deed of conveyance therefor under the terms and conditions of said grant, which said tender and offer of your intervenor was refused and denied by said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that at the time your intervenor made said offer to purchase said quarter section of land and ever since said time he intended to and was and is qualified, ready, able and willing and now intends to make an actual settlement upon said lands and occupy and use the same as an actual settler, and so informed the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the time said application for purchase and tender was so made to said company. And he herewith offers to tender into Court the said sum of Four Hundred Dollars, lawful money of the United States, to be paid and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to the person, persons, corporation or corporations qualified and authorized to receive the same, upon the execution and delivery to your intervenor of a good and sufficient deed of conveyance conveying to him the title to said 160 acres, or quarter section of land hereinbefore described, or upon such terms as to Your Honors may seem to be equitable and just.

That said intervenor, O. N. Craner, did, a long time prior to the commencement of this suit, apply to the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase the following described lands and real property, to-wit: The S. W. quarter of Section 11 in Township 5 South, of Range 4 E. of the Williamette Meridian.

That said lands and real property consist of one quarter section of land and are a part of the lands described in the Acts of Congress referred to in Complainant's bill of complaint and herein, and described in the bill of complaint as being unsold lands, and in fact are lands which have not been disposed of or sold by the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that your intervenor at said time duly applied to said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to purchase said land and offered to pay said company the sum of Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre, or Four Hundred Dollars for said quarter section of land, and at the time said application to purchase was made your intervenor duly tendered in lawful money of the United States the said Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per acre or Four Hundred Dollars for said land, and demanded a deed of conveyance therefor under the terms and conditions of said grant, which said tender and offer of your intervenor was refused and denied by said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company; that at the time your intervenor made said offer to purchase said quarter section of land and ever since said time he intended to and was and is qualified, ready, able and willing and now intends to make an actual settlement upon said lands and occupy and use the same as an actual settler, and so informed the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, at the time said application for purchase and tender was so made to said company. And he herewith offers to tender into Court the said sum of Four Hundred Dollars, lawful money of the United States, to be paid and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to the person, persons, corporation or corporations qualified and authorized to receive the same, upon the execution and delivery to your intervenor of a good and sufficient deed of conveyance conveying to him the title to said 160 acres, or quarter section of land hereinbefore described, or upon such terms as to Your Honors may seem to be equitable and just.

Your intervenors allege that, by reason of the premises, and as hereinbefore specifically set out, each of them has an interest in the subject matter of this suit, to the extent of the parcel of land applied for by them respectively, and that under the terms of the said Acts of Congress making said grants of lands, and the conditions imposed thereby upon intending purchasers of said lands, as set out in Complainant's bill, and reaffirmed herein as being true, it was the legal duty of the Oregon and California Railroad Company to convey to your intervenors, and to each of them, the lands so applied for upon the application so made with the tender of the purchase price therefor as alleged herein; and that, as to these intervenors, and as to the lands so applied for by them, Complainant has no right to claim, nor has the Court authority to decree a forfeiture; but that it is the duty of the Complainant and the Court to enforce the terms of said grants in favor of these your intervenors.

These intervenors further allege that, each parcel, or quarter section of land so applied for by them severally, was at the date of their several applications, and now is of greater value than the sum of two thousand dollars.

XXII.

For further answer and cross-bill, your intervenors allege that, by the several Act of the Congress set out at length in Complainant's bill and admitted to be true, and re-alleged herein, it was intended by the Congress of the United States to create a trust in said land for the use and benefit of such citizens of the United States as should become actual settlers thereon and should desire and offer to purchase the same in accordance with the terms, and under the restrictions imposed by said Acts of Congress making said grants; and that, by transferring said lands to the said Oregon and California Railroad Company,—said company having accepted the terms of said grants, as shown in Complainant's bill, and herein,—Complainant constituted said Oregon and California Railroad Company the trustee of said trust, and thereafter said trustee held, and its co-defendants who claim a joint interest with, or an interest adverse thereto,—other than your intervenors and others of their class,—have held, and they and said Oregon and California Railroad Company now hold said lands, so granted, in trust, for the benefit of these intervenors and others of their class who, like your intervenors, are qualified under the provisions of said Acts of Congress to take said lands, and who have settled thereon and offered to purchase the same in accordance with the terms of said grants so made as aforesaid.

And your intervenors allege that, as to themselves, and others of their class, said trust is active and operative, and the terms thereof should be enforced in their favor by decree of this Honorable Court.

Wherefore, having fully answered the allegations of Complainant's bill, in so far as they are advised the same should be answered; and having fully set forth their several claims to the end that the Court may be fully advised in the premises, your intervenors pray that their several rights may be established and enforced by decree of this Honorable Court; that, defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, by such decree, be directed and required to convey to each of your intervenors the tract of land so applied for by each as hereinbefore set forth, upon payment of the price thereof in accordance with the terms of said grants; that all such orders and decrees as the equity of their cause demands be entered in their behalf, and that each be awarded his costs and disbursements herein expended.

CROSS-COMPLAINT OF JOHN L. SNYDER, ET AL.

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court of the United States, for the District of Oregon:

John L. Snyder, Julius F. Prahl, Albert E. Thompson, James Barr, Fred Witte, W. A. Anderson, W. H. Anderson, O. M. Anderson, F. E. Williams, Paul Birkenfeld, J. H. Lewis, Francis S. Wiser, W. E. Anderson, Albert Arms, Joseph A. Maxwell, Isaac McKay, J. R. Peterson, D. MacLafferty, Edgar MacLafferty, V. V. McAboy, George C. MacLafferty, George Edgar MacLafferty, E. L. MacLafferty, B. N. MacLafferty, Enos M. Fluhrer, F. W. Floeter, S. Shryock, each being citizens of the State of Oregon, and residing in Columbia County, in the District of Oregon, bring this their cross-complaint against the Oregon and California Railroad Company, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon; the Union Trust Company, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and S. T. Gage, a citizen of the State of California, residing in the city of San Francisco, in said State, defendants in this cause, and thereupon cross-complainants for their cause of suit state;

I.

That John L. Snyder long prior to the institution of the present suit by the United States of America; to wit, on September 16, 1907, did in his own behalf, as complainant, duly institute in this Court suit No. 3184, against the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the Union Trust Company and S. T. Gage, defendants herein, in which said suit the said John L. Snyder among other things truthfully alleged that he had prior to the institution thereof, actually settled upon the Southeast quarter Section Seventeen (17), Township Four (4) North, Range three (3) West, for the bona fide purpose of making the said land his home and for the purpose of purchasing the said land from the Oregon and California Railroad Company at the price of $2.50 per acre under the Act of Congress of May 4, 1870, due tender of the purchase price being alleged in said complaint, in which said suit complainant asked for a decree against the said Oregon and California Railroad Company to compel the latter to convey said quarter section of land to him under said Act of Congress, upon the terms stipulated in said Act, and that said suit was duly prosecuted by said John L. Snyder until December 23, 1908, when this Court upon the motion of said Oregon and California Railroad Company and over the protest of said John L. Snyder by order duly entered of record stayed further proceedings in said individual suit of John L. Snyder and consolidated the same with this suit, No. 3340, granting leave to said John L. Snyder to file his joint or several cross-complaint in said suit No. 3340 on or before January 4, 1909, on which said last mentioned date by order of this Court duly entered of record, said John L. Snyder was permitted to file his joint or several cross-complaint herein on or before January 18, 1909.

That Julius F. Prahl under circumstances in all respects identical on November 14, 1907, filed his individual suit in this Court No. 3215, against the same defendants for the Southwest quarter Section seventeen (17), Township four (4) North, Range three (3) West, and that said individual suit was in like manner stayed, the cause being consolidated with this suit, the complainant in like manner being permitted to file his joint or several cross-complaint herein on or before January 18, 1909.

That Albert E. Thompson under circumstances in all respects identical on November 27, 1907, filed his individual suit in this Court, No. 3221, against the same defendants for the Southeast quarter Section twenty-seven (27) Township four (4) North, Range three (3) West, and that said individual suit was in like manner stayed, the cause being consolidated with this suit, the complainant in like manner being permitted to file his joint or several cross-complaint herein on or before January 18, 1909.

That James Barr under circumstances in all respects identical on November 27, 1907, filed his individual suit in this Court, No. 3222, against the same defendants for the East one-half of the North-east quarter and East one-half of the Southeast quarter, Section nine (9) Township four (4) North, Range three (3) West, and that said individual suit was in like manner stayed, the cause being consolidated with this suit, the complainant in like manner being permitted to file his joint or several cross-complaint herein on or before January 18, 1909.

That Fred Witte under circumstances in all respects identical on December 2, 1907, filed his individual suit in this Court, No. 3223, against the same defendants for the Southwest quarter Section twenty-five (25), Township four (4) North, Range three (3) west, and that said individual suit was in like manner stayed, the cause being consolidated with this suit, the complainant being in like manner permitted to file his joint or several cross-complaint herein on or before January 18, 1909.

That W. A. II.

As a continuation of said causes aforementioned in the manner permitted by the aforesaid orders of this Court, the cross-complainants herein named in obedience to said order of Court, requiring these cross-complainants to plead over in this suit, now jointly state their cause of suit, as follows:

III.

That there was heretofore passed by the Congress of the United States, and approved by the President of the United States on May 4, 1870, an Act, duly published at pages 94 and 95 of the 16th Volume of the Statutes at Large of the United States, which said Act is a Public Law of the United States, and is entitled, and is in words and figures as follows, to wit:

"CHAP. LXIX.—An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria, and from a suitable point of junction near Forest Grove to the Yamhill River, near McMinnville in the State of Oregon, there is hereby granted to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, now engaged in constructing the said road, and to their successors and assigns the right of way through the public lands of the width of one hundred feet on each side of said road, and the right to take from the adjacent public lands materials for constructing said road, and also the necessary lands for depots, stations, side tracks, and other needful uses in operating the road, not exceeding forty acres at any one place, and also each alternate section of the public lands not mineral, excepting coal or iron lands, designated by odd numbers nearest to said road, to the amount of ten such alternate sections per mile, on each side thereof, not otherwise disposed of or reserved or held by valid pre-emption or homestead right at the time of the passage of this Act. And in case the quantity of ten full sections per mile cannot be found on each side of said road within the said limits of twenty miles, other lands designated as aforesaid shall be selected under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior on either side of any part of said road nearest to and not more than twenty-five miles from the track of said road to make up such deficiency.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall cause the lands along the line of the said railroad to be conveyed with all convenient speed, and whenever and as often as the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior maps of the survey and location of twenty or more miles of said road, the Secretary shall cause the said granted lands adjacent to and coterminus with such located sections of road to be segregated from the public lands, and thereafter the remaining public lands, subject to sale within the limits of the said grant, shall be disposed of only to actual settlers at double the minimum price for such lands. And provided also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead act who comply with the provisions of the terms of said act shall be entitled, within the said limits of twenty miles, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each of the said ungranted lands, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That whenever and as often as the said company shall complete and equip twenty or more miles of the said railroad and telegraph, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the same to be examined, at the expense of the company, by three commissioners appointed by him; and if they shall report that such completed section is a first class railroad and telegraph, properly equipped and ready for use, he shall cause patents to be issued to the company for so much of the said granted lands as shall be adjacent to and coterminus with the said completed sections.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said alternate sections of land granted by this Act, excepting only such as are necessary for the company to reserve for depots, stations, side tracks, wood yards, standing ground, and other needful uses in operating the road, shall be sold by the company only to actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres or a quarter section to any one settler, and at a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the said company shall, by mortgage or deed of trust or two or more trustees, appropriate and set apart all the net proceeds of the sales of said granted lands, as a sinking fund, to be kept invested in the bonds of the United States, or other safe and more productive securities, for the purchase from time to time, and the redemption at maturity of the first mortgage construction bonds of the company, on the road, depots, stations, side tracks and wood yards, not exceeding thirty thousand dollars per mile, payable in gold coin not longer than thirty years from date, with interest payable semi-annually in coin not exceeding the rate of seven per centum per annum; and no part of the pricipal or interest of the said fund shall be applied to any other use until all the said bonds shall have been purchased or redeemed and cancelled; and each of the said first mortgage bonds shall bear the certificate of the trustees, setting forth the manner in which the same is secured and its payment provided for. And the District Court of the United States, concurrently with the State Courts, shall have original jurisdiction, subject to appeal and writ of error, to enforce the provisions of this section.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior its assent to this Act within one year from the time of its passage, and the foregoing grant is upon the condition that the said company shall complete a section of twenty or more miles of said railroad and telegraph within two years, and the entire railroad and telegraph within six years from the same date."

IV.

That thereafter, to wit, on July 12, 1870, the Oregon Central Railroad Company, designated as grantee in the foregoing Act, duly filed its assent thereto with the Secretary of the Interior, and the said Oregon Central Railroad Company, for itself and its successors, did thereby and in that manner expressly contract and agree with the United States, among other things, that said Oregon Central Railroad Company would sell all of the lands granted by said Act in quantities as great as and not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres, or a quarter section, to any one settler, and at a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre, excepting only such portions of said lands as said Oregon Central Railroad Company should necessarily require for depots, stations, side tracks, wood yards, standing ground and other needful uses in operating the road, and that said contract was entered into by and between the United States and said Oregon Central Railroad Company and its successors for the benefit of any and all citizens of the United States who should thereafter actually settle upon said lands.

V.

That immediately thereafter, and within the time limited by the terms of said Act of Congress, said Oregon Central Railroad Company did build, construct, complete and equip the railroad and telegraph line mentioned in the aforesaid Act of Congress, from Portland in a westerly direction through the Counties of Multnomah and Washington to Forest Grove, and from Forest Grove in a southwesterly direction through the Counties of Washington and Yamhill to a point on the Yamhill River at McMinnville, and thereby said Oregon Central Railroad Company and its successors did become entitled to receive, subject to the provisions of the aforesaid Act of Congress and its aforesaid contract with the United States all the lands granted by said Act of Congress lying coterminous with the line of railroad and telegraph so built, constructed, completed and equipped, and said Oregon Central Railroad Company and its successors did thereby become entitled to receive patents from the United States to said lands, subject to the provisions of said Act of Congress and said contract aforementioned.

VI.

That on October 6, 1880, and before said Oregon Central Railroad Company had received patent for any of the lands granted by said Act of Congress, defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, became the successor of said Oregon Central Railroad Company, and that said defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, is now the owner and holder of the legal title to all of the lands granted by the Act of Congress aforesaid, and subject to the provisions of the Act of Congress and the contract aforesaid, excepting such portions of said lands as said defendant the Oregon & California Railroad Company has sold and conveyed away. That on October 6, 1880, said Oregon Central Railroad Company, by its deed of conveyance, by it duly made, executed and delivered on said date to defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, did grant, bargain and sell, transfer, convey and confirm to said defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, the right of way and franchise of said Oregon Central Railroad Company, and the railroad and telegraph line of said Oregon Central Railroad Company aforesaid, from Portland to Forest Grove and from Forest Grove to McMinnville, together with the depots, stations and side tracks of said Oregon Central Railroad Company, and all the property and assets of said Oregon Central Railroad Company of every kind and character, and particularly all the lands granted to said Oregon Central Railroad Company by the Act of March 4, 1870, which said Oregon Central Railroad Company was on the date of said deed, entitled to receive, or might thereafter become entitled to receive under said Act of Congress, and that said defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, received and accepted said deed of conveyance, and entered into the immediate possession of said railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Forest Grove and McMinnville, under said deed, as the successor of said Oregon Central Railroad Company, and has ever since claimed to the United States and the public at large that it is the successor of the Oregon Central Railroad Company.

That thereafter defendant the Oregon & California Railroad Company, as successors to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, and under authority of and pursuant to said Act of Congress of May 4, 1870, did file with the Commissioner of the General Land Office its various applications and selection lists at divers times for patents to the lands granted by said Act of Congress, and upon such application and selection lists, and under authority of and pursuant to said Act of Congress, the President of the United States has heretofore conveyed by patents to said defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, about five hundred thousand acres of land granted by said Act of Congress under authority of and pursuant to said Act of Congress, and subject to the provisions of said Act, and among the lands granted by patent to said defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company upon its applications and selection lists aforesaid, under and subject to the provisions of the Act of Congress aforesaid, were the lands heretofore described in Paragraph I of this cross-complaint, which said lands are involved in this suit, and were conveyed to said defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company by the United States by patents upon the selection lists of said defendant company, and under and pursuant to said Act of Congress of May 4, 1870, and subject to all the terms and provisions of said Act. That said defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, has not heretofore sold nor conveyed away said lands heretofore described in Paragraph I of this cross-complaint, but is now the owner and holder of the legal title thereto, subject to the aforesaid Act of Congress.

VIII.

That Congress, by said Act of May 4, 1870, intended to and did grant to said Oregon Central Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, the right of way for said railroad and telegraph line through the public lands of the width of one hundred feet on each side of said road, and also the necessary lands for depots, stations, side tracks and other needful uses in operating said road, not exceeding forty acres in any one place, and also each alternate section of the public non-mineral lands, excepting coal or iron lands, designated by odd numbers nearest to said road, to the amount of ten alternate sections per mile on each side thereof, not otherwise disposed of or reserved or held by valid pre-emption or homestead rights at the date of the passage of said Act, and the right, in case the quantity of ten full sections per mile could not be found on each side of said road within the said limits of twenty miles, to select and receive other lands designated as aforesaid under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior on either side of any part of said road nearest to and not more than twenty-five miles from the track of said road, to make up such deficiency, and subject to the provisions hereinafter stated. That Congress intended to and did, by said Act of May 4, 1870, provide that the said alternate sections of land granted by said Act, excepting only such as were necessary for said company to reserve for depots, stations, side tracks, wood yards, standing ground and other needful uses in operating said road, should be sold by said company only to actual settlers, in quantities as great as and not exceeding one hundred sixty acres or a quarter section to any one settler, and at a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre, and that said company should file with the Secretary of the Interior its assent to said Act within one year from the time of its passage.

IX.

That Congress, by said Act of May 4, 1870, intended to and did grant to said Oregon Central Railroad Company, and to its successors and assigns, and to its successor, defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, a limited beneficial interest in the lands designated in said Act, and that Congress by said Act intended to and did stipulate and provide that the right of citizens of the United States to enter and settle upon said lands, to the extent of one hundred and sixty acres or a quarter section to each citizen so desiring to enter and settle upon said lands, and to purchase the same from the railroad company at a price not to exceed two dollars and fifty cents per acre, should be reserved to the citizens of the United States. That Congress, by said Act of May 4, 1870, intended to and did provide and stipulate that the odd numbered sections granted by said Act to said railroad company should continue open to entry and settlement by citizens of the United States without let or hindrance from said railroad company, in quantities as great as and not exceeding one hundred sixty acres or a quarter section to any one citizen, as freely as though said Act had not been passed at all, but that Congress, by said Act, did stipulate that the sale price of the lands within the limits of said grant, both even and odd numbered sections, should thereafter be two dollars and fifty cents per acre, that is, that the sale price of the even numbered sections retained by the Government should thereafter be two dollars and fifty cents per acre, and that the sale price of the odd numbered sections granted to said railroad company should thereafter not exceed two dollars and fifty cents per acre. That Congress, by said Act of May 4, 1870, intended to and did make and constitute said Oregon Central Railroad Company, and its successor, defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, a mere intermediary trustee, through which Congress intended to and did by said Act provide for the conveyance of the legal title to the odd numbered sections of lands granted by said Act from the United States Government to such citizens of the United States as might thereafter settle upon such lands. That Congress by said Act did not intend to grant to said railroad company any possessory right to any of said lands, except those particular portions designated for a right of way, depots, stations, side tracks, wood yards, standing ground, and other needful uses in operating the road, but that Congress by said Act reserved the right to citizens of the United States to enter upon and take possession of all said lands with the exceptions last aforementioned, and to purchase the same from said railroad company upon becoming actual settlers upon said land, and that Congress intended to and did, by said Act of May 4, 1870, accomplish a double purpose, to wit: First, Congress intended to and did, by said Act, provide financial aid to said railroad company in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, by providing that the odd numbered sections aforementioned should be conveyed by the United States to said railroad company in trust, for the sole purpose of being hereafter conveyed by said railroad company to actual settlers, and for no other purpose, with the provisions that said railroad company should have the right to receive the proceeds of the disposition of all of said lands, and that said lands should be disposed of at not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre; Second, Congress intended to and did by said Act provide that its then declared policy of disposing of the public lands to citizens of the United States in small tracts, and at prices not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre, should not be interfered with or abridged by the grant of such aid to said railroad company, but that such policy of the Government should continue as free and uninterrupted as though such aid had not been granted by said Act to said railroad company, and this latter purpose was the paramount object of the grant. That Congress, by said Act of May 4, 1870, reposed a special trust and confidence in said Oregon Central Railroad Company and its successors to carry out the expressed and declared policy and theory of said Act, and to convey said lands at a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre, to all such citizens of the United States as might thereafter settle upon the same, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres or a quarter section to any one settler, and that therefore, defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, successor to said Oregon Central Railroad Company, as to all lands now held by it under said Act of Congress, except such as are necessary for right of way, side tracks, stations, depots, standing ground, wood yards, and other needful uses in operating the road, is a trustee for the United States, and for all such citizens of the United States as may be now actually settled upon any of the lands, under and pursuant to said Act of Congress, who have tendered to said railroad company the maximum sum per acre which it is entitled to receive, to wit: Two dollars and fifty cents per acre, and that it is now the legal duty of defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to convey by good and sufficient deeds to all such settlers the lands by them settled upon.

MacLafferty, prior to June 2, 1908, entered into possession of and settled upon the NW¼ Section 25, Township 4 North, Range 3 West, containing 160 acres; and cross-complainant, George Edgar MacLafferty, prior to June 8, 1908, entered into possession of and settled upon the NE¼ Section 1 Township 3 North, range 3 West containing 160 acres; and cross-complainant, E. L. MacLafferty, prior to June 17, 1908, entered into possession of and settled upon the NW¼ Section 1, Township 3 North, Range 3 West, containing 160 acres; and cross-complainant, B. N. MacLafferty, prior to June 17, 1908, entered into possession of and settled upon the SE¼ Section 1, Township 3 North, Range 3 West, containing 160 acres; and cross-complainant, Enos M. Fluhrer, prior to July 15, 1908, entered into possession of and settled upon the SE¼ Section 21, Township 5 North, Range 2 West, containing 160 acres; and cross-complainant, F. W. Floeter, prior to August 17, 1908, entered into possession of and settled upon the NE¼ Section 19, Township 4 North, Range 3 West, containing 160 acres; and cross complainant, S. Shryock, prior to August 24, 1908, entered into possession of and settled upon the SW ¼ Section 21, Township 4 North, Range 3 West, containing 160 acres, and all of the above mentioned entries made by said cross-complainants are on lands in Columbia County, Oregon, and said entries and settlements thereon were made under and pursuant to said Act of Congress of May 4, 1870, and by virtue of the right given to cross-complainants so to do by said Act of Congress. That from the date of said settlements down to the present time cross-complainants have remained in possession of and occupied and inhabited the said lands above described as their homes, to the exclusion of homes elsewhere, and that it is their bona fide purpose and intention to make said quarter sections of land their homes for the future, and to improve, clear, husband and cultivate the same. That immediately after settling upon said quarter sections of land as aforesaid, cross-complainants erected their dwelling houses thereon, in which they have resided at all times since and are now residing. That prior to the filing of cross-complainants individual suits, heretofore mentioned in Paragraph I of this cross-complaint, cross-complainants each offered to defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, their applications to purchase said quarter sections of land, and each tendered the sum of four hundred dollars in United States gold coin, and each tendered and offered to reimburse defendant for all taxes and disbursements paid out by defendant on account of said lands, in payment for said quarter sections of land, that being two dollars and fifty cents per acre therefor, which said applications the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, then and there denied and refused, and continues to deny and refuse, and which said tender and offer of four hundred dollars in United States gold coin, for each quarter section, and taxes and disbursements, in payment for said lands, the defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, then and there rejected and refused, and still refuses. That these cross-complainants are, and were at the time of filing their individual suits, heretofore mentioned in Paragraph I of this cross-complaint, citizens of the United States.

XI.

That said quarter sections of land above described are situated in Columbia County, Oregon, about fifteen miles from the railroad and telegraph line that was constructed by the aforesaid Oregon Central Railroad Company, under and pursuant to said Act of Congress of May 4, 1870, that the same are non-mineral, and that none of said quarter sections of land or any part thereof were or are necessary for depots, stations, side tracks, wood yards, or other needful uses in operating the road.

XII.

That defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, denies that it holds said quarter sections of land last described as a trustee for cross-complainants, or that it is bound or obliged by said Act of May 4, 1870, and by the facts pleaded in this cross-complaint, to convey said quarter sections of land to these cross-complainants. That said defendant has repudiated the trust created and reposed in it by said Act of Congress of May 4, 1870, and now denies that it holds said quarter sections of land last described in trust for the United States and for these cross-complainants, and in disregard of its plain duty and obligation and as trustee under said Act of Congress, and under the facts pleaded herein, refuses to accept from cross-complainants herein the sum of two dollars and fifty cents per acre for said lands, or to convey said lands to said cross-complainants, but that said defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, on the contrary, in violation of the trust aforesaid, now asserts a claim of ownership of the absolute fee-simple title to said lands.

XIII.

That said defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, does not deny that its source of title to all of the lands herein referred to as being granted to it, is the Act of May 4, 1870, but that said defendant attempts to justify its present assertion of the absolute ownership of said lands by the claim that it has now held said lands for thirty-seven years and that it has paid large sums in taxes on said lands, and that it at one time was willing and anxious to sell said lands for the prices limited by said Act of Congress, and that no persons then applied to buy. Said defendant therefore claims that it would be unjust and inequitable to now require it to sell said lands to actual settlers for the price and sum of two dollars and fifty cents per acre, and said defendant further asserts that cross-complainants are barred from a recovery by reason of their alleged laches in not sooner asserting their claim, and by reason of the alleged thirty-seven years' adverse possession of said defendant and its grantors. But your cross-complainants state that in truth and in fact all of the land received by said defendant under said Act of Congress has been patented to defendant during the past twelve years, and that the first patent ever issued to said defendant under said act of Congress for any of said land is dated October 9, 1895. Your cross-complainants further state that in truth and in fact said defendant has not paid taxes on said lands to an amount in excess of fifty cents per acre, and that said defendant has never made any improvements on said lands. Your cross-complainants further state that said defendant has never at any time been willing to comply with the terms of said Act of Congress of May 4, 1870, by conveying said lands to actual settlers in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres at prices not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre. Your cross-complainants further state that said defendant has received by patent up to this time under said Act of Congress a total of 128,616.13 acres, of which it has sold to the firm of Hammond & Winton, the Olean Land Company, and others, approximately 49,358.26 acres for the average price of approximately $7.00 per acre, and in tracts of thousands of acres to single purchasers, and that from such sales said defendant has received a sum far in excess of two dollars and fifty cents per acre for the entire lands patented to it, and all taxes and disbursements paid out by said defendant on account of said lands. Your cross-complainants therefore allege that said defendant has already received, for the sold portions of said lands patented to it, a sum far in excess of the total amount it was entitled to receive for all of the lands so patented to it and that it would not be unjust or inequitable to require said defendant to now comply with the terms of said law by disposing of all of the balance of said lands as required by said Act of May 4, 1870.

XIV.

Your cross-complainants state that they are each now willing to pay in Court for defendant, and hereby each tenders into Court for defendant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the sum of four hundred dollars, in United States gold coin, for each quarter section of the lands above described, as the purchase price for said quarter sections of land so settled upon, and now occupied by your cross-complainants as aforesaid, and your cross-complainants also stand ready and willing to pay into Court for defendant all disbursements heretofore expended by defendant in connection with said lands for taxes or otherwise, if the same shall be claimed by defendant and ascertained and deemed a just and equitable charge in favor of defendant by this Honorable Court.

XV.

Your cross-complainants further allege that defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Oregon; and that defendant, the Union Trust Company, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York.

XVI.

WHEREFORE, Your cross-complainants pray that the said defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company be declared and adjudged by decree of this Court to hold the legal title to the following quarter sections of land, which your cross-complainants respectively entered into possession of and settled upon prior to the filing of their individual suits hereinbefore mentioned:

John L. Snyder, SE¼ Sec. 17, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Julius F. Prahl, SW¼ Sec. 17, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Albert E. Thompson, SE¼ Sec. 27, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; James Barr, E½ of NE¼ and E ½ of SE ¼, Sec. 9, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Fred Witte, SW¼ Sec. 25, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; W. A. Anderson, SW¼ Sec. 5, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; W. H. Anderson, SW¼ Sec. 5, Tp.

4 North, Range 3 West; O. M. Anderson, NW¼ Sec. 5, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; F. E. Williams, NW¼ Sec. 21, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Paul Birkenfeld, SE¼ Sec. 15, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; J. H. Lewis, W½ or NE¼ and W½ of SE ¼, Sec. 9, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Francis S. Wiser, NW¼ Sec. 27, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; W. E. Anderson, SE¼ Sec. 5, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Albert Arms, NE¼ Sec. 35, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Joseph A. Maxwell, NE¼ Sec. 27, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Isaac McKay, SE¼ Sec. 21, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; J. R. Peterson, NE¼ Sec. 21, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West, D. MacLafferty, NE¼ Sec. 25, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; Edgar MacLafferty, SE¼ Sec. 25, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; V. V. McAboy, NE¼ Sec. 7, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; George C. MacLafferty, NW¼ Sec. 25. Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; George Edgar MacLafferty, NE¼ Sec. 1, Tp. 3 North, Range 3 West; E. L. MacLafferty, NW¼, Sec. 1, Tp. 3 North, Range 3 West; B. N. MacLafferty, SE¼ Sec. 1, Tp. 3 North, Range 3 West; Enoch M. Fluhrer, SE¼ Sec. 31, Tp. 5 North, Range 2 West; F. W. Floeter, NE¼ Sec. 19, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West; S. Shryock, SW¼ Sec. 21, Tp. 4 North, Range 3 West.

And your cross-complainants further pray that defendant, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, be declared and adjudged by decree of this Court to hold the legal title to said above described lands, with power in trust to convey said lands to your cross-complainants, and that said defendant be compelled by decree and order of this Court to accept the said sums of money above named as the purchase price for the said above described quarter sections of land and to execute said power in trust, and to convey, make and execute to your cross-complainants good and sufficient deeds to said quarter sections of land above described, or that such decree stand in place and stead of such conveyance, and for such other and further orders, judgments and decrees as may be just and proper.

XVII.

Cross-complainants further allege that they are informed and verily believe that defendant, the Union Trust Company, and defendant S. T. Gage, claim some interest in the lands involved in this suit, the nature and extent of which is unknown to your cross-complainants, and cross-complainants therefore ask that said Union Trust Company and S. T. Gage be required to answer this cros-complaint, setting up their interest, if any they have.

XVIII.

Cross-complainants having been made defendants by the United States of America in its Bill of Complaint in this suit No. 3340, state that they admit each and every allegation of fact in said Bill of Complaint of the United States of America contained except the claim of the United States of America, that the lands sued for by these cross-complainants are, or ever, can be forfeited to said United States of America, and there being no issue of fact between the United States of America and these cross-complainants, the latter for the sake of convenience and brevity of the record, pray that this paragraph of their cross-complaint shall be deemed and accepted a sufficient answer by them to the Bill of Complaint of the United States of America herein.

Solicitor for Cross-Complainants.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 7th day of December, 1908, there was duly filed in said Court, a Demurrer in words and figures as follows, to wit:

[DEMURRER OF O. & C. R. R. et al., TO BILL OF COMPLAINT]

[TITLE]

The Joint and Several Demurrer of the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage individually and as Trustee, to the complainant's bill of complaint herein.

These defendants, Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage individually and as trustee, jointly and severally, by protestation, not confessing or acknowledging all or any of the matters and things in the said bill of complaint to be true in such manner or form as the same are therein set forth and alleged, demur thereto and to the whole thereof; and for cause of demurrer to said bill, and the whole thereof, show:

First.—As against these defendants, and each of them, the said bill is (a) Without equity, and cannot be maintained, as to the "East Side Grant," so-called in said bill, and subject thereof; and is

(b) Without equity, and cannot be maintained, as to the "West Side Grant," so-called in said bill, and subject thereof; and is

(c) Without any equity whatsoever.

Second.—As against these defendants, and each of them, the said bill does not set forth or show any matter, equity, or cause, entitling complainant to

(a) Any discovery as to the "East Side Grant," so-called in said bill, and subject thereof, nor as to any facts, particulars, transactions, matters or things about, relating to, or concerning the said "East Side Grant"; nor to

(b) Any discovery as to the "West Side Grant," so-called in said bill, and subject thereof, nor as to any facts, particulars, transactions, matters or things about, openly relating to, or concerning the said "West Side Grant"; nor to (c) Any discovery whatsoever.

Third.—As against these defendants, and each of them, the said bill does not set forth or show any matter, equity or cause, entitling complainant to

(a) Any relief as to the "East Side Grant," so-called in said bill, and subject thereof, or because of or arising out of any facts, particulars, transactions, matters or things in the said bill set forth or shown about, relating to, or concerning the said "East Side Grant," nor to

(b) Any relief as to the "West Side Grant," so-called in said bill, and subject thereof, or because of or arising out of any facts, particulars, transactions, matters or things in the said bill set forth or shown about, relating to, or concerning the said "West Side Grant"; nor to

(c) The decree asked for in the "First" subdivision, paragraph "(1)" of the prayer to said bill, declaring or adjudging forfeiture of all or any of the lands or estates in lands in said paragraph described or referred to; nor to

(d) The decree quieting title asked for in the "First" subdivision, paragraph "(1)" of the prayer to said bill, as to all or any of the lands or estates in lands in said paragraph described or referred to; nor to

(e) The decree or order asked for in the "First" subdivision, paragraph "(1)" of the prayer to said bill, requiring these defendants or any of them to surrender unto complainant possession, or control, of any lands or estates in lands in said paragraph described or referred to; nor to

(f) The decree or order asked for in the "First" subdivision, paragraph "(2)" of the prayer to said bill, appointing a receiver or receivers, or investing such or any receiver or receivers with title or possession of all or any lands described or referred to in said subdivision "(2)," or authorizing or directing such or any receiver or receivers to do or perform any of the acts or things in said subdivision "(2)" set forth or suggested; nor to

(g) The, or any, injunction asked for in the "First" subdivision, paragraph "(3)" of the prayer to said bill, requiring these defendants or any of them, to do or perform any of the acts or things in said subdivision "(3)" set forth or suggested; nor to

(i) The, or any, decree or order asked for in the "Third" subdivision of the prayer to said bill, directing or requiring these defendants, or any of them, to account, pay over, or do or perform any of the acts or things set forth or suggested in the said "Third" subdivision; nor to

(j) The, or any, injunction or restraining order asked for or suggested in the "Fifth" subdivision of the prayer to said bill; nor to (k) Any relief whatsoever.

Wherefore these defendants, jointly and severally pray the judgment of this Honorable Court whether they, or either of them, shall be compelled to make any further or other answer to the said bill, or to any of the matters and things therein contained, and pray to be hence dismissed, with their and each of their reasonable costs in this behalf sustained.

Joint and Several Demurrer of Defendants O. & C. R. R. et al., to Bill of Complaint.

Filed Dec. 7, 1908.

G. H. MARSH,
Clerk.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 1st day of March, 1909, there was duly filed in said Court, a Demurrer in words and figures as follows, to wit:

[DEMURRER OF UNION TRUST COMPANY TO CROSS-BILL OF JNO. L. SNYDER, et al.]

The demurrer of the defendant Union Trust Company to the document filed herein on January 15th, 1909, under the heading of and purporting to be the "Cross-Complaint of John L. Snyder, et al."

This defendant, Union Trust Company, by protestation, not confessing or acknowledging all or any of the matters and things in the said document to be true in such manner or form as the same are therein set forth and alleged, demur thereto and to the whole thereof; and for cause of demurrer show:

I.

First.—That the said document fails to show that the matter in dispute therein sought, purporting or intended to be presented on behalf of said John L. Snyder, Julius F. Prahl, Albert E. Thompson, James Barr, Fred Witte, W. A. Anderson, W. H. Anderson, O. M. Anderson, F. E. Williams, Paul Birkenfeld, J. H. Lewis, Francis S. Wiser, W. E. Anderson, Albert Arms, Joseph A. Maxwell, Isaac McKay, J. R. Peterson, D. MacLafferty, Edgar MacLafferty, Enos M. Fluhrer, F. W. Floeter, and S. Shryock, or either or any of them, exceeds exclusive of interest and costs the sum or value of two thousand dollars.

Second.—That the said document fails to show any matter, equity or cause entitling the said John L. Snyder, or either of said defendants above named, or any of them to file or maintain the same.

Third.—That the said document fails to show any matter, equity or cause entitling the said John L. Snyder, or either of said defendants above named, or any of them, to any discovery whatsoever.

Fourth.—That the said document fails to show any matter, equity, or cause entitling the said John L. Snyder, or either of the defendants above named, or any of them, to any relief whatsoever.

II.

And this defendant demurs to so much of said document as precedes, and is exclusive of, subdivision "XVIII" thereof, for each and all the causes of demurrer to the whole document hereinbefore set forth, in the same words and figures as hereinbefore separately, and respectively, stated.

III.

And this defendant demurs to subdivision "XVIII" of the said document, for each and all of the causes of demurrer hereinbefore set forth to the whole document, in the same words and figures as hereinbefore separately, and respectively, stated.

Wherefore this defendant prays the judgment of this Honorable Court whether it shall make any further or other answer to the said document, or to any part thereof, or to any matters and things therein contained; and pray to be hence dismissed with its reasonable costs in this behalf sustained.

DOLPH, MALLORY, SIMON AND GEARIN,

And afterwards, to-wit, on the 7th day of April, 1909, there was duly filed in said Court, a demurrer in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

[DEMURRER OF O. & C. R. R. et al., TO PETITION OF B. W. NUNNALLY, et al.]

[TITLE]

The joint and several demurrer of the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage individually and as Trustee, to the document filed herein on or about March 1st, 1909, purporting to be the Petition, Answer and Cross-Bill of B. W. Nunnally and seven other persons.

These defendants, Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage, individually and as Trustee, jointly and severally, by protestation, not confessing or acknowledging all or any of the matters and things in the said document to be true in such manner or form as the same are therein set forth and alleged, demur thereto and to the whole thereof; and for cause of demurrer show:

1st. That the said document fails to show that the matter in dispute therein sought, purporting or intended to be presented on behalf of B. W. Nunnally, or any person or persons therein named as an intervenor or as intervenors, exceeds exclusive of interest and costs the sum or value of two thousand dollars.

2nd. That the said document fails to show any matter, equity or cause entitling the said B. W. Nunnally, or any person or persons therein named as an intervenor or as intervenors, to file or maintain the same.

3rd. That the said document fails to show any matter ,equity or cause entitling the said B. W. Nunnally, or any person or persons therein named as an intervenor or as intervenors, to any discovery whatsoever.

4th. That the said document fails to show any matter, equity, or cause entitling the said B. W. Nunnally, or any person or persons therein named as an intervenor or as intervenors, to any relief whatsoever.

Wherefore, these defendants, jointly and severally, pray the judgment of this Honorable Court whether they, or either of them, shall make any further or other answer to the said document, or to any part thereof, or to any matters and things therein contained, and pray to be hence dismissed with their, and each of their, reasonable costs in this behalf sustained.

And afterwards, to-wit, on the 13th day of February, 1909, there was duly filed in said Court, a demurrer in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

[TITLE]

The joint and several demurrer of the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage individually and as Trustee, to the document filed herein on January 15th, 1909, under heading of and purporting to be the "Cross-Complaint of John L. Snyder, et al."

These defendants, Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage, individually and as Trustee, jointly and severally, by protestation, not confessing or acknowledging all or any of the matters and things in the said document to be true in such manner or form as the same are therein set forth and alleged, demur thereto and to the whole thereof; and for cause of demurrer show:

I.

1st. That the said document fails to show that the matter in dispute therein sought, purporting or intended to be presented on behalf of the said John L. Snyder, Julius F. Prahl, Albert E. Thompson, James Barr, Fred Witt, W. A. Anderson, W. H. Anderson, O. M. Anderson, F. E. Williams, Paul Birkenfeld, J. H.

Shryock, or either or any of them, to any relief whatsoever.

II.

And these defendants, jointly and severally, demur to so much of the said document as precedes, and is exclusive of, subdivision "XVIII" thereof, for each and all of the causes of demurrer to the whole document hereinbefore set forth, in the same words and figures as hereinbefore separately, and respectively, stated.

III.

And these defendants, jointly and severally, demur to subdivision "XVIII" of the said document, for each and all of the causes of demurrer hereinbefore set forth to the whole document, in the same words and figures as hereinbefore separately, and respectively, stated.

Wherefore these defendants, jointly and severally, pray the judgment of this Honorable Court whether they, or either of them, shall make any further or other answer to the said document, or to any part thereof, or to any matters and things therein contained; and pray to be hence dismissed with their, and each of their, reasonable costs in this behalf sustained.

And afterwards, to-wit, on Saturday, the 13th day of March, 1909, the same being the 136th judicial day of the regular October, 1908, term of said Court; present: the Honorable Chas. E. Wolverton, United States District Judge presiding, the following proceedings were had in said cause, to-wit:

[ORDER SUBMITTING ALL DEMURRERS]

[TITLE]

Now, at this day, come the parties hereto by their counsel as of yesterday; whereupon, this cause comes on to be further heard upon the demurrers of the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage to the Bill of Complaint and the several cross-bills and interventions herein; Whereupon, the Court having heard the arguments of Mr. B. D. Townsend and Mr. Tracy C. Becker, Special Assistants to the Attorney-General of the United States, for the plaintiff, of Mr. William D. Fenton and Mr. Peter F. Dunne, of counsel for the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage, and of Mr. A. W. Lafferty and Mr. William H. Flett, of counsel for the cross-complainants and intervenors herein, will advise thereof.

And afterwards, to-wit, on Monday, the 24th day of April, 1911, the same being the 13th judicial day of the regular April, 1911, term of said Court; present: the Honorable Chas. E. Wolverton, United States District

Judge presiding, the following proceedings were had in said cause, to-wit:

[ORDER OVERRULING DEMURRER TO BILL OF COMPLAINT AND SUSTAINING DEMURRERS TO BILLS OF INTERVENTION]

[TITLE]

This cause was heard upon the demurrer of the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage to the Bill of Complaint herein, and upon the demurrers of the said defendants to the several cross bills and interventions filed herein, and was argued by Mr. Tracey C. Becker and Mr. B. D. Townsend, Special Assistants to the Attorney-General of the United States, for the plaintiff, and by Mr. William Singer, Jr., Mr. Peter F. Dunne and Mr. William D. Fenton, of counsel for the said defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage, and by Mr. A. W. Lafferty, Mr. William H. Flett and Mr. John Mills Day, of counsel for the said cross-complainants and intervenors.

On consideration whereof, it is now ordered and adjudged that the said demurrer to the Bill of Complaint herein be, and the same is hereby, overruled; that each of the demurrers filed by said defendants to the cross-bills and interventions herein be, and the same is hereby, sustained.

Whereupon, on motion of said defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage, appearing by Mr. William D. Fenton, of counsel, it is ordered that said defendants be, and there are hereby, allowed ninety days from this date within which to take further proceedings herein.

And on motion of the defendant, Union Trust Company, appearing by Mr. John M. Gearin, of counsel, it is ordered that said defendant Union Trust Company be, and it is hereby, allowed thirty days after the expiration of the time allowed said defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage, within which to take further proceedings herein.

And on motion of the said cross-complainants and intervenors, appearing by Mr. Arthur I. Moulton, Mr. John M. Day and Mr. Lewis C. Garrigus, of counsel, it is ordered that cross-complainants and intervenors herein be, and they are each hereby, allowed ninety days from this date within which to take further proceedings herein.

CHAS. E. WOLVERTON,
Judge.

And afterwards, to-wit, on the 24th day of April, 1911, there was duly filed in said Court, an opinion on demurrers in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

After setting out the citizenship and residence of the respective parties, the bill of complaint states, in effect:

On July 25, 1866, Congress passed an act granting lands in aid of the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon. By its first section the act authorizes and empowers the California and Oregon Railroad Company, and such company organized under the laws of the State of Oregon as the Legislature thereof shall thereafter designate, to construct and maintain a railroad and telegraph line between the city of Portland, in Oregon, and the Central Pacific Railroad, in California:

Thereafter it is provided as follows:

> Sec. 2. "That there be, and hereby is, granted to the said companies. their successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops. munitions of war, and public stores over the line of said railroad, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile (ten on each side) of said railroad line; and when any of said alternate sections or parts of sections shall be found to have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands, designated as aforesaid, shall be selected by said companies in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections designated by odd numbers as aforesaid, nearest to and not more than ten miles beyond the limits of said first-named, alternate sections; and as soon as the said companies, or either of them, shall file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior a map of the survey of said railroad, or any portion thereof, not less than sixty continuous miles from either terminus, the Secretary of the Interior shall withdraw from sale public lands herein granted on each side of said railroad, so far as located and within the limits before specified. The lands herein granted shall be applied to the building of said road within the states, respectively, wherein they are situated. And the sections and parts of sections of land which shall remain in the United States within the limits of the aforesaid grant shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold: Provided, That bona fide and actual settlers under the pre-emption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement, and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the price fixed for said lands at the date of such settlement, improvement and occupation. And provided, also, That settlers under the provisions of the Homestead Act, who comply with the terms and requirements of said Act, shall be entitled, within the limits of said grant, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres of the land so reserved by the United States, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sec. 3. "That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to said companies for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power, and authority are hereby given to said companies to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, water, and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of sail railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side-tracks, turntables, water stations, or any other structures required in the construction and operating of said road."

Sec. 4. That, whenever twenty or more consecutive miles of the road shall have been completed and ready for use, the same shall be examined by three commissioners appointed by the President, who are required to report to the President; and if it shall appear that the line of road and telegraph has been constructed and equipped in accordance with the terms of the Act, then that patents shall issue to the company entitled to the same for the lands granted to the extent and coterminous with the completed section, and thus from time to time, whenever other sections of the road shall be completed, until the entire line shall have been constructed.

Sec. 5. "That the grants aforesaid are made upon the condition that the said companies shall keep said railroad and telegraph in repair and use, and shall at all times transport the mails upon said railroad, and transmit despatches by said telegraph line for the Government of the United States, when required so to do by any department thereof, and that the Government shall at all times have the preference in the use of said railroad and telegraph therefor at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the rates paid by private parties for the same kind of service. And said railroad shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free of all toll or other charges upon the transportation of the property or troops of the United States; and the same shall be transported over said road at the cost, charge, and expense of the corporations or companies owning or operating the same, when so required by the Government of the United States."

Sec. 6. "That the said companies shall file their assent to this Act in the Department of the Interior within one year after the passage hereof, and shall complete the first section of twenty miles of said railroad and telegraph within two years, and at least twenty miles in each year thereafter, and the whole on or before the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five; and the said railroad shall be of the same gauge as the 'Central Pacific Railroad' of California, and be connected therewith."

Sec. 7. "That the said companies named in this Act are hereby required to operate and use the portions or parts of said railroad and telegraph mentioned in section one of this Act for all purposes of transportation, travel, and communication, so far as the Government and public are concerned, as one connected and continuous line; and in such operation and use to afford and secure to each other equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation, without any discrimination whatever, on pain of forfeiting the full amount of damage sustained on account of such discrimination, to be sued for and recovered in any Court of the United States, or of any State, of competent jurisdiction."

Sec. 8. "That in case the said companies shall fail to comply with the terms and conditions required, namely, by not filing their assent thereto as provided in section six of this Act, or by not completing the same as provided in said section, this Act shall be null and void, and all the lands not conveyed by patent to said company or companies, as the case may be, at the date of any such failure, shall revert to the United States. And in case the said road and telegraph line shall not be kept in repair and fit for use, after the same shall have been completed, Congress may pass an act to put the same in repair and use, and may direct the income of said railroad and telegraph line to be thereafter devoted to the United States, to repay all expenditures caused by the default and neglect of said companies or either of them, as the case may be, or may fix pecuniary responsibility, not exceeding the value of the lands granted by this Act."

Sec. 9. That the companies concerned shall be governed by the general laws of the respective states as to the construction and management of said railroad and telegraph line in all matters not provided for in the Act.

Sec. 10. That all mineral lands, except such as shall contain coal and iron, shall be excepted from the operation of the grant; but that, where such lands contain timber, so much of the timber as shall be required to construct the road over the lands is hereby granted.

Sec. 11. That said companies shall be governed by the statutory regulations of the States concerned in all matters pertaining to the right of way wherever said road shall not pass through public lands of the general Government.

Sec. 12. "That Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said California and Oregon railroad companies, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this Act."

This Act was amended June 25, 1868, whereby section six thereof was made to provide that "Instead of the times now fixed in said section, the first section of twenty miles of said railroad and telegraph shall be completed within eighteen months from the passage of this Act, and at least twenty miles in each two years thereafter, and the whole on or before the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and eighty."

About October 6, 1866, certain persons attempted to organize a corporation bearing the name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal office at Portland, Oregon. This company projected its line of road from Portland to Forest Grove, thence to McMinnville, on the westerly side of the Willamette River. For convenience, it will be hereafter referred to as the "West Side Company," and its line as the "West Side Line."

On October 10, 1866, the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon by joint resolution, designated the Oregon Central Railroad Company as the organization entitled to receive the grant and benefits accorded by the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866. This company, on May 25, 1867, assented to the provisions of said Act of Congress, and thereafter, about July 6, 1867, filed an authenticated copy of its resolution, together with a certified copy of its articles of incorporation and of the joint resolution of the Legislative Assembly of Oregon, with the Secretary of the Interior, and on about the 20th of August, 1868, filed with such officer a general map of survey of its projected line of railroad.

In the meantime, namely, about April 22, 1867, certain persons, contending that said West Side Company was not regularly and lawfully incorporated, and designing to secure the grant and privileges accorded by said Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, organized another corporation bearing the name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal place of business at the city of Salem, Oregon. This company projected its line of road on the easterly side of the Willamette River, and for convenience will be designated the "East Side Company," and its line the "East Side Line."

On October 20, 1868, the East Side Company procured a joint resolution to be adopted by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, whereby, after setting out, among other things, the adoption of the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, the adoption by the Legislature of the State of House Joint Resolution No. 13, designating the Oregon Central Railroad Company as the organization entitled to the benefits of the grant and privileges accorded by said Act of Congress, that at the time of the adoption of such resolution no such company as the Oregon Central Railroad Company was organized or in existence, that the resolution was adopted under a misapprehension of the facts, and that the proper designation yet remained to be made, it was resolved that the Oregon Central Railroad Company, a corporation organized at Salem on April 22, 1867, "be and the same is hereby designated as the company entitled to receive the lands in Oregon, and the benefits and privileges conferred by the said Act of Congress." Thereupon a controversy arose between the West Side Company and the East Side Company as to which was entitled to the benefits of the said Act of Congress, and, the time within which to file an assent having expired long prior to the designation of the East Side Company by the Legislative Assembly of Oregon, the said East Side Company applied to Congress for an extension of time for filing its assent; following which the respective contentions of the East and the West Side Companies relative to the right to receive the benefits of the Act of July 25, 1866, were placed before Congress, and that body, on April 10, 1869, passed an act amendatory of section six of the Act of July 25, 1866, in language following:

> "That section six * * * * be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to allow any railroad company heretofore designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, in accordance with the first section of said Act, to file its assent to such Act in the Department of the Interior within one year from the date of the passage of this Act; and such filing of its assent, if done within one year from the passage hereof, shall have the same force and effect to all intents and purposes as if such assent had been filed within one year after the passage of said Act: Provided, That nothing herein shall impair any rights heretofore acquired by any railroad company under said Act, nor shall said Act or this amendment be construed to entitle more than one company to a grant of land; And provided further, That the lands granted by the Act aforesaid shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre."

On June 8, 1869, the East Side Company adopted a resolution assenting to the terms of the Act of July 25, 1866, an authenticated copy of which was filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior on June 13, 1869. This resolution by its preamble set forth, among other things, that no company was designated within the year within which an assent was required to be filed to the Act of July 25, 1866, and that Congress did, on April 10, 1869, pass an act extending the time in which assent might be filed. About October 29, 1869, the East Side Company filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior a map of survey and location of the first sixty miles of its projected line of railroad; and on December 24th of the same year completed the construction of the first twenty miles of road, from Portland south, which was approved December 31st by commissioners duly appointed.

The West Side Company wholly failed to construct any part of its projected line of road, and abandoned and waived all claim to the benefits to accrue under said Acts of Congress, and in lieu thereof applied for and obtained and accepted a similar grant of lands, franchises, and other benefits pertaining to its projected line of road by Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870.

The East Side Company having become involved in litigation questioning the validity of its organization, also its rights to use the corporate name adopted, on March 17, 1870, its officers, stockholders, and promoters organized the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the principal purpose of this organization being to become the successor to said East Side Company, and to receive, hold, and exercise the grants, franchises, and privileges accorded by said Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and acts amendatory thereto. Pursuant to such purpose, the East Side Company, on March 29, 1870, executed and delivered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company a certain instrument of writing purporting to assign, transfer and convey to the latter company all the property of the former, including all its right, title, and interest in and to the grants, franchises, and benefits under the act of July 25, 1866.

On April 4, 1870, the Oregon and California Railroad Company adopted a resolution, whereby the company accepted the grant conferred by the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and acts amendatory thereof, and authorized its president and secretary to file such assent in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, together with an authenticated copy of the deed of assignment from the Oregon Central Railroad Company. A copy of the resolution and deed of assignment was filed with the Secretary of the Interior April 28, 1870; and from that time on the Oregon and California Railroad Company assumed and continued to act as the successor to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, being the said East Side Company.

On May 4, 1870, Congress passed an act granting certain lands to the Oregon Central Railroad Company —the West Side Company—to aid in the constrnction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in Oregon, which provides as follows:

"That for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and from a suitable point of junction near Forest Grove to the Yamhill River, near McMinnville, in the State of Oregon, there is hereby granted to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, now engaged in constructing the said road, and to their successors and assigns, the right of way through the public lands of the width of one hundred feet on each side of said road, and the right to take from the adjacent public lands materials for constructing said road, and also the necessary lands for depots, stations, side-tracks, and other needful uses in operating the road, not exceeding forty acres at any one place; and, also, each alternate section of the public lands, not mineral, excepting coal or iron lands, designated by odd numbers nearest to said road, to the amount of ten such alternate sections per mile, on each side thereof, not otherwise disposed of or reserved or held by valid preemption or homestead right at the time of the passage of this Act. And in case the quantity of ten full sections per mile cannot be found on each side of said road, within the said limits of twenty miles, other lands designated as aforesaid shall be selected under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior on either side of any part of said road nearest to and not more than twenty-five miles from the track of said road to make up such deficiency."

Sec. 2. "That the commissioner of the general land office shall cause the lands along the line of the said railroad to be surveyed with all convenient speed. And whenever and as often as the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior maps of the survey and location of twenty or more miles of said road, the said Secretary shall cause the said granted lands adjacent to and coterminous with such located sections of road to be segregated from the public lands; and thereafter the remaining public lands, subject to sale within the limits of the said grant, shall be disposed of only to actual settlers, at double the minimum price for such lands; And provided also, That settlers under the provisions of the Homestead Act who comply with the terms and requirements of said Act, shall be entitled, within the said limits of twenty miles, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each of the said ungranted lands, anything in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sec. 3. "That whenever and as often as the said company shall complete and equip twenty or more consecutive miles of the said railroad and telegraph, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the same to be examined, at the expense of the company, by three commissioners appointed by him; and if they shall report that such completed section is a first-class railroad and telegraph, properly equipped and ready for use, he shall cause patents to be issued to the company for so much of the said granted lands as shall be adjacent to and coterminous with the said completed sections."

Sec. 4. "That the said alternate sections of land granted by this Act, excepting only such as are necessary for the company to reserve for depots, stations, side-tracks, wood-yards, standing ground, and other needful uses in operating the road, shall be sold by the company only to actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres or a quarter section to any one settler, and at prices not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre."

Sec. 5. "That the said company shall, by mortgage or deed of trust to two or more trustees, appropriate and set apart all the net proceeds of the sales of the said granted lands, as a sinking fund, to be kept invested in the bonds of the United States, or other safe and more productive securities, for the purchase from time to time, and the redemption at maturity, of the first mortgage construction bonds of the company, on the road depots, stations, side-tracks, and wood-yards, not exceeding thirty thousand dollars per mile of road, payable in gold coin not longer than thirty years from date, with interest payable semi-annually in coin not exceeding the rate of seven per centum per annum; and no part of the principal or interest of the said fund shall be applied to any other use until all the said bonds shall have been purchased or redeemed and canceled; and each of the said frist mortgage bonds shall bear the certificate of the trustees, setting forth the manner in which the same is secured and its payment provided for. And the District Court of the United States, concurrently with the State courts, shall have original jurisdiction, subject to appeal and writ of error, to enforce the provisions of this section."

Sec. 6. "That the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior its assent to this Act within one year from the time of its passage; and the foregoing grant is upon condition that said company shall complete a section of twenty or more miles of said railroad and telegraph within two years, and the entire railroad and telegraph within six years, from the same date."

About July 2, 1870, the West Side Company, through its board of directors, adopted a resolution assenting to and accepting all the provisions of said Act, and thereafter, on July 20th, filed an authenticated copy of such resolution in the office of the Secretary of the Interior. About August 15, 1870, all the capital stock of the West Side Company was acquired by the owners of the capital stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and thereafter the capital stock of both companes was held as a single interest, and the affairs of the two companies were conducted as a single enterprise within the dissolution of the West Side Company.

With funds derived from mortgage bonds and otherwise, the East Side Line, up to the month of January, 1873, was constructed as far south as Roseburg, a distance of 197 miles from Portland, and said West Side Line to McMinnville, a distance of forty-seven miles. At that time the companies became insolvent, and the construction of the East Side Line was not resumed until in June, 1881, while the West Side Line was never resumed. Thereafter, from about July 24, 1874, the direction and control of the financial affairs of the two companies were assumed and exercised by the creditors thereof, organized under the name and designation "Bondholders' Committee," which committee subsequently acquired all the capital stock of said companies. About October 6, 1880, the Bondholders' Committee caused the West Side Company to execute and deliver to the Oregon and California Railroad Company a certain instrument in writing purporting to assign, transfer and convey to the latter company all the property of the former, including all its right, title and interest in and to the grant, franchises, and other benefits accruing in pursuance of the Act of Congress of May 4, 1870. Ever since said date the Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed to be the rightful successor to the said West Side Company.

For convenience, the respective grants by Congress will be alluded to as the East Side Grant and the West Side Grant.

About May 7, 1881, through a readjustment of the capital stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company by its board of directors and stockholders, all the former capital stock of said company was canceled, and a reissue was had, consisting of $12,000,000, preferred stock, and $7,000,000 common stock, aggregating $19,000,000. Through the issuance of this stock, and the use in part of the proceeds of a new bond issue, all of the company's existing indebtedness was then fully paid and discharged.

About June 2, 1881, the Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered to Henry Villard, Robert Davie Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, as trustees for the owners and holders of the said preferred stock, an instrument of writing purporting to convey to said trustees all lands comprised by both of said land grants, in trust, to secure to the owners of said preferred stock some asserted right or interest in or to said lands, and for certain other purposes more particularly specified in said instrument. Thereafter Stephen T. Gage succeeded to the trusteeship under said instrument, and is now the sole surviving trustee. He, by virtue thereof, and the Southern Pacific Company, by virtue of its ownership of the preferred stock, claim and assert some right, title and interest in, or lien upon, the granted lands.

In June, 1881, and May, 1883, the Oregon and California Railroad Company issued first and second mortgage bonds aggregating, approximately, $5,000,000, the work of construction was resumed, and the East Side Line was extended to a point one and one-quarter miles south of Ashland, a distance of approximately 145 miles.

This extension was completed about the month of January, 1884, and the work of extension was not again resumed until in April, 1887. In January, 1885, by reason of default in payment of said first and second mortgage bonds, the Oregon and California Railroad Company was placed in the hands of a receiver.

In connection with these facts, which are more fully set out in the bill of complaint, it is alleged that the West Side Company acquired no right or interest in or to the East Side Grant, and that the said East Side Company acquired no right or interest therein except subject to all the terms and conditions of the Act of Congress of April 10, 1869; that the principal purpose of the conveyance of date March 29, 1870, was not to operate as a sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by said Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, but was to constitute the Oregon and California Railroad Company the successor to the said East Side Company, to construct and equip said line of railroad, and to receive the grant and exercise the franchises and other benefits accorded by said Act of Congress—the same allegation being made with reference to the conveyance by the West Side Company to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, of date Oct. 6, 1880, that the original capital stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and substantially all the stock of the West Side Company, were issued without consideration; that neither of said companies had any funds for construction or other purposes, except such as were borrowed therefor; and that the deed of trust to Villard and other trustees purports to convey and to authorize said trustees to sell and convey said lands comprised by the said East and West Side grants to other than actual settlers, in quantities greater than one quarter section to one person, and at a price greater than $2.50 per acre, and was therefore in violation and breach of the express terms of the grants.

It is further alleged, in effect, as follows: About January, 1885, a certain railroad syndicate, known as the "Southern Pacific System," controlling substantially all the railroad lines in the southwestern part of the United States, including the Central Pacific Railroad, organized the Southern Pacific Company as a general holding company for said syndicate, and on or about March, 1885, the Southern Pacific Company acquired, and has since exercised, a controlling interest in each of the corporations constituting said Southern Pacific System, and is the lessee of all of the railroad lines controlled by said system, exercising control thereof, as well as control over, and the handling and disposal of, all the lands of its constituent companies. Shortly after the organization of the Southern Pacific Company it established a land department in San Francisco, California, for the control, handling, and disposal of lands of its constituent companies held under grants from the Government; and after the Oregon and California Railroad Company passed into the hands of a receiver, the Southern Pacific Company, designing to acquire ownership and control of its holdings, entered into negotiations with said company, and the bondholders and stockholders thereof, which resulted in a contract, of date March 28, 1887, the general effect being that the Oregon and California Railroad Company, together with its line of railroad, was absorbed by, and merged into, the said Southern Pacific System; and the complainant charges that it was further the purpose and design of the Southern Pacific Company to secure control of the Oregon and California Railroad Company's land grants, and to divert the same from the purposes for which such grants were made to the exclusive use and benefit of the Southern Pacific Company. Thereafter the Oregon and California Railroad Company was continued a corporation in name only, and as an instrumentality and device for the administration of these grants.

About May 12, 1887, in pursuance of the contract of March 28, 1887, all of the capital stock, and all of said second mortgage bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were assigned and transferred to the Pacific Improvement Company, and all of said first mortgage bonds were assigned and transferred to the Southern Pacific Company. The Pacific Improvement Company was a corporation controlled and directed by the owners of a majority of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, and held the capital stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in trust for the use and benefit of the Southern Pacific Company until about April 9, 1901, when all of such capital stock was transferred to the Southern Pacific Company, which company is now the owner and holder thereof.

Pursuant, further, to the contract of March 28,

1887, the Southern Pacific Company and the Oregon and California Railroad Company entered into a contract of lease, in writing, whereby the railroad and telegraph lines of the latter company were leased to the former for the term of forty years, which remained in full force and effect until about August 1, 1893, when the said companies entered into a further contract, whereby such properties were leased to the Southern Pacific Company for the term of thirty-four years, which latter contract is still in full force and effect, and by virtue whereof the Southern Pacific Company entered into, and is now in the full possession, management, and control of said properties.

In pursuance, also, of the contract of March 28, 1887, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, on about January 3, 1888, executed and delivered to the Union Trust Company its mortgage upon certain of its properties, to secure certain bonds, then issued and thereafter to be issued, of which approximately $17,500,000 in amount are still outstanding. Although executed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the bonds were guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company, and were used by that Company to purchase the outstanding securities of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and to complete the construction of and improve the lines of the said latter company. In this relation, it is averred that said mortgage deed, in so far as it relates to any of the granted lands, if at all, purports to convey, and to authorize the Union Trust Company to sell and convey said lands to persons other than actual settlers, in quantities greater than one quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price exceeding $2.50 per acre, and for purposes other than those authorized by said grants.

During the year 1887, the last section of the East Side Line, extending from Ashland to the southern boundary of the State of Oregon, was completed, and on or about the 6th day of June, 1888, the receivership proceedings were wound up, and the receiver discharged. All of the first and second mortgage bonds (not including the issue of July, 1887), together with all mortgages and trust deeds securing the payment thereof, were canceled and discharged; whereupon the Southern Pacific Company entered into the possession and management of all of the properties of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, as aforesaid.

Under the East Side Grant, and during the years 1871 to 1877, inclusive, patents for approximately 323,000 acres of land were applied for by, and issued to, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, being lands contiguous to the first 125 miles of said East Side Line. No patents were applied for or issued within that time under the West Side Grant. Commencing about the year 1891, other patents were applied for, and from 1893 up to 1906, lands aggregating 2,450,000 acres were patented to the Oregon and California Railroad Company under the East Side Grant; and commencing about the year 1895, approximately 128,000 acres under the West Side Grant. Of the lands so granted the Oregon and California Railroad Company has made approximately 5,306 sales, aggregating about 820,000 acres, as follows: Sales in quantities not exceeding one quarter section, 4930, covering 296,000 acres, and sales in quantities exceeding one quarter section, 376, covering 524,000 acres. In this connection, it is alleged that the Oregon and California Railroad Company, under the direction and domination of the Southern Pacific Company, from the year 1894 until about January 1, 1908, sold, and disposed of said granted lands in manner and upon terms in violation and breach of the terms and conditions of the grants; that is to say, said lands were sold to speculators and persons other than actual settlers, and in quantities greatly in excess of one quarter section to one purchaser, namely, in quantities ranging from 1,000 to 45,000 acres to a single purchaser, and for prices greatly in excess of $2.50 per acre, the same ranging from $5.00 to $40.00 per acre. That about 90 per cent of the said 524,000 acres was sold or conveyed since the year 1897, and of this approximately 370,000 acres were sold to thirty-eight purchasers, in quantities exceeding 2,000 acres to each purchaser. On January 1, 1908, there remained unsold of said granted lands approximately 2,373,000 acres, consisting of about 2,080,000 acres which have been patented, and 293,000 acres unpatented, now claimed by the defendant, Oregon and California Railroad Company, by virtue of said grants.

It is alleged that since January 1, 1908, many persons have applied to the Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase the lands remaining unsold, in quantities of 160 acres to each purchaser, the said applicants desiring and intending in good faith to settle thereupon, and to make permanent homes thereof, but that said applications have been refused and rejected, and the said Oregon and California Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company have, since January 1, 1903, withdrawn all of said unsold lands from sale, and have at all times thereafter refused, and do now refuse, to sell any part of said grants, to actual settlers or for purposes of actual settlement, in quantities or for prices as prescribed by the terms and conditions of such grants. In setting forth these facts, it is further alleged that since said January 1, 1903, the Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed, and now asserts, an absolute and unconditional estate in and to all of said unsold lands, and that, by reason of the premises and the relationship which the Southern Pacific Company sustains to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, all of such unsold lands have been converted to the use and benefit of the said Southern Pacific Company; that the Oregon and California Railroad Company has derived benefits from said grants other than from sales of the lands, namely, from forfeiture of contracts of sale, from leases, and from timber cut from the grants; and in further detail, matters are alleged upon which to base injunctive process; and other matters designed to excuse delay in instituting this suit.

On February 14, 1907, a memorial was presented to Congress, praying that steps be taken to compel the Oregon and California Railroad Company to comply with the terms of the said grants or to require a forfeiture of the lands granted. Later, on April 30, 1908, Congress adopted a joint resolution providing as follows:

> "That the Attorney General of the United States be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to institute and prosecute any and all suits in equity, actions at law, and other proceedings which he may deem adequate and appropriate to enforce any and all rights and remedies of the United States of America in any manner arising or growing out of or pertaining to either or any of the following described Acts of Congress, to wit: 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July twenty-fifth, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-six, as amended by the acts approved June twenty-fifth, Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-eight, and April tenth, Eighteen Hundred and sixty-nine; * * Also 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon,' approved May fourth, Eighteen Hundred and Seventy, including all rights and remdies in any manner relating to the lands, or any part thereof, granted by either or any of said Acts; and in and by any and all such suits, actions or proceedings, the Attorney General shall, in such manner as he shall deem appropriate, assert all rights and remedies existing in favor of the United States, relating to the subject of such suits, actions and proceedings, including the claim on behalf of the United States that the lands granted by each of said Acts respectively, or any part thereof, have been and are forfeited to the United States by reason of any breaches or violations of any of the terms or conditions of either or any of said Acts which may be alleged and established in any such suits, actions or proceedings; it not being intended hereby to determine the right of the United States to any such forfeiture or forfeitures, but it being intended to fully authorize the Attorney General in and by such suits, actions or proceedings to assert on behalf of the United States and the Court or Courts before which such suits, actions or proceedings may be instituted or pending to entertain, consider, and adjudicate the claim and right of the United States to such forfeiture or forfeitures, and if found to enforce the same."

This suit is instituted in pursuance of said joint resolution, and it is further alleged that by reason of the premises all of said granted lands now unsold, and such as were sold in violation of the grants, are forfeited to the United States, and specifically that: "Pursuant to the authority and direction contained in said joint resolution of Congress approved April 30th, A. D. 1908, your orator does hereby assert title to, and does hereby resume the title of, all of said lands and estate in lands forfeited to your orator as aforesaid." The relief demanded is:

1. That the Court adjudge and decree all unsold lands comprised by said grants, whether patented or unpatented, to be forfeited to the United States, and the title thereof quieted; or, if such relief be denied,

2. That the Court adjudge and decree that all such unsold lands are subject to purchase by actual settlers, in quantities of 160 acres to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre, and that a receiver be appointed to carry into effect the conditions of the grants in that respect; or, if this relief be denied,

3. That a mandatory injunction issue requiring the Oregon and California Railroad Company to sell such unsold lands in compliance with the terms of the grants.

An injunction is further sought, also, an accounting for moneys received for lands unlawfully sold, discovery, and general relief.

Prior to the filing of the bill of complaint, John L. Snyder and sixty-six others had instituted suits against the defendants the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the Union Trust Company, and S. T. Gage, to require such defendants to convey to said complainants each a tract of 160 acres of land included in the West Side Grant. These parties claim their right to such conveyances by reason of having settled upon lands designated, with a bona fide purpose of making said lands their homes, and of having tendered to the Oregon and California Railroad Company the sum of $2.50 per acre, or $400 for each quarter section so settled upon, in alleged pursuance of the act of May 4, 1870, making such grant. When, however, the United States instituted its suit making the complainants in the Snyder suit parties thereto, the causes were consolidated, and Snyder and others have filed their cross-bill in the Government's case, setting up their alleged rights. The particular feature of this cross-bill, after setting out the history of the grant in purport much as it is narrated in the complaint, is voiced in its ninth paragraph, whereby it is alleged, in substance, that Congress, by the Act of May 4, 1870, intended to and did grant to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, and to its successor, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, a limited beneficial interest in the lands specified in the act, and to that end made and constituted the Oregon and California Railroad Company a mere intermediary trustee, through which to convey the legal title to the odd-numbered sections comprised by the grant to such citizens of the United States as might thereafter settle upon such lands; that Congress did not intend to grant to said railroad company any possessory title to any of said lands, except for depot grounds, stations, etc., but reserved the right to citizens of the United States to enter upon and take possession of all of said lands, and to purchase the same from the railroad company upon becoming actual settlers upon the respective tracts selected; in other words, in order to afford financial aid to the grantee, Congress constituted the railroad company a trustee, for the express purpose, and with power and authority to sell and convey the lands designated to actual settlers, and that thereby the railroad company became a trustee as to such lands for the United States, and for all citizens of the United States who may now be actual settlers upon such lands. It is further asserted that the railroad company refused to accept the tender made by cross-complainants of the purchase price, and refused and still refuses to make conveyances of the lands selected and settled upon, and now claims and asserts ownership of the absolute fee simple title thereto.

Many persons, amounting to several thousand, through intervention permitted by order of the Court, have filed complaints against the defendant railroad companies, claiming the right to purchase from the Oregon and California Railroad Company certain lands comprised by the grants of Congress of July 25, 1866, and May 4, 1870. These complaints, in their narration of the history of the grants, follow very closely the allegations contained in the Government's bill. The particular claim, however, upon which the complainants therein found their alleged right is set forth, in substance, as follows: That since January 1, 1903, and prior to the commencement of the Government's suit, the interveners applied to the Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase certain of the lands comprised by the aforesaid grants; that in so applying each of the said interveners made request to purchase 160 acres or one quarter section of land, and thereupon offered to pay to said company the sum of $2.50 per acre, or $400 per quarter section, and tendered the amount each for the parcel of land selected, and demanded a deed of conveyance, therefor, under the alleged terms and conditions of the grants of Congress; that each of the interveners, ever since his application to purchase was made, has been and now is ready and willing to pay said money consideration, and offers to bring the same into Court to be used for such purpose, if the Court shall so order, and that each is a qualified purchaser under the terms of the grants, and at the time of the application intended, and now intends, to make actual settlement upon the tract of land so selected, and henceforth to use the same as an actual settler.

It is further alleged that the interveners have a prior right, estate, and vested interest in the property, to the extent of the amount of land which each has so applied to purchase; that under the terms and conditions of said Acts of Congress, it was the legal duty and obligation of the Oregon and California Railroad Company to issue its deed for the lands applied for upon payment of the purchase price as named, and that as to such interveners the Court is without jurisdiction to declare the lands forfeited to the Government.

Many other persons have also intervened, by permission of the Court, who have made applications to the Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase since the commencement of the Government's suit, who base their alleged right and claim upon like application and tender as the prior interveners, the allegations of their complaints conforming very nearly to those of such prior interveners.

Demurrers to the Government's bill, to the cross-bill, and to all bills of intervention, which are pertinent to raise the paramount questions involved by the controversy, have been interposed by the defendant railroad companies and Stephen T. Gage, and also by the Union Trust Company.

WOLVERTON, District Judge:

Counsel for the defendant railroad companies and S. T. Gage make the following points of contention in support of their demurrers to the bill of complaint, the cross-complaint, and the bills of intervention. I quote from their reply brief:

> "I. Rights acquired by the East Side Company under the Act of 1866, deprived Congress of the power, by amendatory Act of 1869, to impose new conditions on the estate; besides the amendatory Act expressly save 'rights acquired' under the Act of 1866.
> "II. The controlling purpose of Congress in making the land grants, here and by the Union Pacific Act, as expressly stated in each Act, is the same; hence, here as there, any policy of Congress to promote settlement of the lands 'was manifestly subordinated to the higher purpose of having the road constructed with the aid of the land grant.' (99 U. S. 48-67.)
> "III. The 'actual settler' proviso is not a condition, because it does not (a) enure specially to the grantor, nor (b) indicate that forfeiture shall attend its breach, and (c) is not compulsory; but if a condition it is void for (d) repugnancy to the grant, and (e) restraint of alienation.

"IV. The 'actual settler' proviso is a personal covenant between grantor and grantee, only. Specific performance cannot be enforced because (a) it is not compulsory, (b) lacks mutuality of right and remedy, and (c) is the nature of a continuing contract. Besides, whether compulsory or prohibitive, it is (d) in restraint of alienation.

"V. As the 'actual settler' proviso is not compulsory withdrawal of the lands in suit from sale is not a breach; and the other alleged breaches would not operate forfeiture of these unsold lands, were the proviso a condition.

"VI. Were the 'actual settler' proviso a condition, broken as alleged, grantor has waived the breach by (a) apparent asquiesence in the many deeds of record made by the Railroad Company in violation of the proviso; (b) acceptance and use of the road; (c) annual issuance of land patents, from 1871 to 1906; and by (d) effect of the general forfeiture Acts of January 31st, 1885, and September 29th, 1890.

"VII. The land patents are conclusive. Were they void, the title which they purport to convey was confirmed by the force and effect of the Acts of March 3rd, 1891, and March 2nd, 1896; which Acts also bar this suit as to all lands patented prior to October, 1902.

"VIII. All causes of action sought to be presented by the bill other than forfeiture and to quiet title, are also barred by laches and limitations; it appearing that as to those other causes of action complainant is not the real party in interest. Cross-complainants and interveners are also barred by laches and limitations.

"IX. Were the 'actual settler' proviso a condition, which has been broken, still this suit could not be maintained as one to enforce forfeiture, nor to quiet any title which complainant could acquire by such a judgment, because (a) grantor has not declared forfeiture, (b) the fact of forfeiture has not been adjudged at law, and (c) the defendant Railroad Company holds the legal title and possession."

These will be considered, though not in the order of their statement; but in the meanwhile it will be necessary to determine the contention of the cross-complainants and interveners.

It should be premised that the theory of the bill is not that the grants have not been fully earned so as to entitle the Oregon and California Railroad to have the patents issue, but that, being earned, and patents in large measure having issued, the company has failed to comply with certain terms attending the grants, which it is claimed are conditions subsequent qualifying the estate granted, and that thereby the estate, whether now held under patent or as yet in pursuance of the acts making the grants, has been forfeited to the United States.

The several acts, namely, the Act of July 25, 1866, the Acts of June 25, 1868, and April 10, 1869, amendatory thereof, and the Act of May 4, 1870, contain all of the provisions of Congress relative to the granting of the public lands in question. Scarcely four years elapsed from the inception of the legislation until the last act was adopted, and, viewed as a whole, extending from the first to its final development and adaptation, it indicates a common purpose, and should be considered in pari materia.

A corporation bearing the name "Oregon Central Railroad Company" was organized October 6, 1866, with its principal offices at Portland, Oregon. This company, it is alleged, projected its line of road southward from Portland, on the westerly side of the Willamette River, and on October 10, 1866, the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, by joint resolution, designated it as the company entitled to receive the grant under the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866. This company also adopted a resolution on May 25, 1867, assenting to the provisions of the grant, and filed a copy thereof with the Secretary of the Interior July 6, 1867. On August 20, 1868, the company filed with the Secretary of the Interior a map of survey of its projected line. On April 22, 1867, another corporation was organized, under the same name, with its principal place of business at Salem, Oregon. This company, claiming that the one previously organized was not lawfully incorporated, procured, on October 20, 1868, the adoption of a joint resolution by the Legislative Assembly of Oregon, designating it as the organization entitled to receive the grant. This resolution by preamble sets out that at the time of its adoption no such company as the Oregon Central Railroad Company, with its principal office at Portland, was organized or in existence, and that the previous joint resolution designating that company as the one entitled to receive the grant was adopted under a misapprehension of the facts. On June 8, 1869, the company last organized, with its principal office at Salem, being the East Side Company, adopted a resolution assenting to the provisions of the act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and specifically to the amendments thereto, which resolution was filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior June 30, 1869. On October 29, 1869, this company filed its map of survey and location of the first sixty miles of its projected line of railroad on the East Side, and on December 24, 1869, completed the construction of its first twenty-mile section, the same being approved on the 31st of that month. The allegations of the bill do not show that the company was engaged in the work of construction prior to the time of filing its assent, namely, June 30, 1869; but for the purposes of this controversy it may be assumed that such was the case, as it is not at all probable that the section was built in so short a time as intervened between the date of such filing and that of the completion of the section.

On July 2, 1870, the company first organized—the West Side Company—by resolution assented to the grant of May 4, 1870, and filed a copy of such resolution with the Secretary of the Interior July 20, 1870. The Oregon and California Railroad Company was incorporated March 17, 1870, and on March 29, 1870, it took over, by assignment and transfer, all of the property, rights, and franchises of the East Side Company, including its grant of public lands by virtue of the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and the acts amendatory thereto. By resolution adopted April 4, 1870, this company accepted the grant upon the terms and conditions specified. A copy of the resolution was filed with the Secretary of the Interior April 28, 1870. Ever since such transfer, the latter company has exercised control in the construction of the East Side road and over the grant of Congress to the East Side Company; and the West Side Company has never, since filing its assent to the West Side Grant, claimed or assumed to exercise any control over the affairs, rights or privileges of the East Side Company.

Now, bearing in mind the various Acts of Congress touching these grants, the resolutions of the Legislature of the State, and the proceedings of these several corporations, we will consider the first contention of defendants' counsel, together with the incidental questions presented in support of the demurrer to the bill.

It is stoutly urged that these grants are in praesenti, and with reference to the East Side Grant that it became operative, by relation back to the date of the Act of Congress conferring the grant, upon the designation by the legislature of the State of the Oregon Central Railroad Company (East Side) as the one entitled thereto, October 20, 1868. That is to say that, upon that date, the grant became vested in the East Side Company, subject to the conditions imposed for construction, etc., and hence that the amendment of April 10, 1869, requiring the lands granted to be sold to actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres to one purchaser, and at a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre, was beyond the power of Congress to enact.

It is undoubtedy true, as argued, that the grant could not become operative until there was a grantee in being, or existence, capable of taking; nor could it become operative until a company was designated by the Legislature of the State as the one entitled to the benefits thereof, as, under the provisions of the Act conferring the grant, it was to the company that should be so designated. The words "That there be, and hereby is, granted," standing alone, unquestionably import a transfer of present title. When read in connection with the terms of the grant, and in relation to the thing granted, they may or may not bear such signification. Where a grantee is actually in existence and qualified to take according to the terms of the law, the words alluded to operate as an immediate and present transfer. But it is otherwise if the grantee is not in existence, or has not qualified himself in pursuance of the terms of the grant to entitle him to that which is offered. Instances of a present transfer are illustrated by the following cases:

Leavenworth, etc. R. R. Co. vs. United States, 92 U. S. 733, which related to a grant to the State to aid in the construction of certain railroads, the companies to be aided being named and designated in the Act making the grant; Schulenberg vs. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, which was also on a transfer to the State "to aid in the construction of railroads," the holding being that the State acquired a present estate by the terms of the grant; Lessieur vs. Price, 12 How. 59,—a grant to the State of four sections of land, to be selected, for the purpose of fixing the seat of government thereon; Railroad Company vs. Smith, 9 Wall. 95—a grant of swamplands to the State; and Michigan Land and Lumber Co. vs. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, also a grant of like lands to the State.

In all such like cases, where identification of the lands in contemplation has been necessary, as by the definite location of the line of railroad which determines the particular sections comprised by the grant, or by the ascertainment of the quality of the land in determination of its swampy character, the grant is said to take effect at the time of the identification or ascertainment, but by relation back to the date of the grant, notwithstanding the grant is denominated as one in praesenti and vests a present estate. Where, however, the grantee is not in existence, or is required to do something by which to qualify himself to take under the terms and conditions prescribed, then the grant does not vest a present estate, nor does it become operative except at the time the contemplated grantee comes into being or qualifies himself to receive the designated bounty. As is said by Mr. Chief Justice Waite, in Hall vs. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 509:

> "There cannot be a grant unless there is a grantee, and consequently there cannot be a present grant unless there is a present grantee. If, then, the law making the grant indicates a future grantee and not a present one, the grant will take effect in the future and not presently."

In that case the grant, which was in pursuance of the Donation Act of September 27, 1850 (9 Stat. 496), was to a white settler or occupant of the public lands "who shall have resided upon and cultivated the same for four consecutive years," and the distinguished jurist further said:

> "Whenever a settler qualified himself to become a grantee, he took the grant and his right to a transfer of the legal title from the United States became vested. But until he was qualified to take, there was no actual grant of the soil."

It was concluded that there was no grant of land to the settler until he had qualified himself to take by completing his four years of residence and cultivation, and performed such other acts in the meantime as the statute required in order to protect his claim and keep it alive, and that "Down to that time he was an authorized settler on the public lands, but not a grantee." In such a case, therefore, the grant is of the date the settler qualifies himself to take; the court making no declaration concerning the doctrine of relation. The doctrine of relation, while a fiction of law, is potent for subserving the purposes of justice, and is applied only for the security and protection of persons who stand in some privity with the party initiating proceedings for land, and who has acquired the equitable claim or right to the title. By it is meant "that principle by which an act done at one time is considered by a fiction of law to have been done at some antecedent period. It is usually applied where several proceedings are essential to complete a particular transaction, such as a conveyance or deed. The last proceeding which consummates the conveyance is held for certain purposes to take effect by relation as of the day when the first proceding was had." Gibson vs. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 100. See also Lynch vs. Bernal, 9 Wall. 315, 325.

Applying this doctrine in a case involving rights acquired under the Timber Act of June 3, 1878, Mr. Justice Brewer, in United States vs. Detroit Lumber Co., 200 U. S. 321, 334, says:

> "It is a doctrine of frequent application, designed to promote justice. * * * The ordinary railroad land grants have been grants in praesenti, and under them the title has been adjudged to pass, not at the completion of the road, but at the date of the grant. (Citing authorities.) A patent from the United States operates to transfer the title, not merely from the date of the patent, but from the inception of the equitable right upon which it is based. Shepley vs. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330. Indeed, this is generally true in case of the merging of an equitable right into a legal title. Although the patents in this case were not issued until after the sales of the timber, yet when issued they became operative as of the date of the original entries."

If the doctrine of relation were applied in the case of Hall vs. Russell, supra, we should say that the grant was of the date the settler qualified himself to take with relation back to the date of the initiation of his claim, but not to the date of the enactment of the Donation law.

In the present case the grant was to a company to be organized, and to such a one as the Legislature of the State of Oregon should designate as entitled thereto. It is plain, under the authorities, that no title passed until the organization was perfected and the designation of the legislature made. Nor do I think that the grant became operative until the company filed its assent to the terms and conditions of the Act, as required by section six thereof, as amended April 10, 1869. It was one of the conditions of the Act that the assent be filed, and it was by the observance thereof that the grantee qualified itself to take. Indeed, it was the first act required to be done on the part of the grantee for the initiation of a claim under the grant, and without such an assent no one could know that it purposed availing itself of the benefits of the act conferring the grant. Hence under the doctrine of the cases, the Act of July 25, 1866, could not operate to avert an interest in the grantee until the organization qualified itself by assenting to the terms of the Act in the manner prescribed; and whether the grant then took effect by relation back to the date of the Act or not, Congress was wholly authorized to add such amendments in the meantime as it saw fit. It disturbed no vested right of the grantee by so doing. But, however this may be, there is another reason rendering it competent for Congress to make the amendment. On October 10, 1866, the Legislature of Oregon designated the West Side Company as the organization entitled to the grant, and that company filed its assent to the provisions of the Act of July 25, 1866, with the Secretary of the Interior, July 6, 1867, within the year, and in these respects it would seem that the law had been complied with. But the East Side Company, organized April 22, 1867, set up a claim to the grant, which was evidently brought to the attention of the Legislature of the State, for that body, asuming that it had previously designated a company not in existence as entitled to the grant, designated the East Side Company as the one proper to receive the benefits thereof. This was on October 20, 1868, being more than one year subsequent to the passage of the Act of July 25, 1866. From this time, the West Side Company made no further claim to this particular grant, and later accepted a new grant.

So that the West Side Company was no longer entitled to the benefits of the Act of 1866, and whatever controversy existed between the two companies was thus ended. On June 13, 1869, the East Side Company filed its assent, whereby it accepted all the provisions, rights, privileges, and franchises of the Act of July 25, 1866, and of all acts amendatory thereof, and upon the conditions therein specified. Congress had amended the original act by extending the time for completion of the first and subsequent sections of twenty miles each of the road, and for the completion of the whole. This was prior to the date when the Legislature of the State designated the East Side Company as the one entitled to receive the grant, and had it not been for the amendment, the East Side Company would then have been in default in construction work, and under section eight, the Act would have been rendered null and void. Then followed the amendment of April 10, 1869, extending the time for filing assent, being the one containing the proviso that the lands granted should be sold to actual settlers. There was some reason for passing this amendment. Congress undoubtedly believed that it was necessary so that the Act might be complied with in that respect, and the East Side Company supposed that it was necessary to the acquirement and completion of its rights to the grant, for it soon thereafter signified its assent to the original Act by resolution adopted and duly filed with the Secretary of the Interior. The language of the resolution leaves no doubt as to the purpose of the company. Now, here was a legislative interpretation of the Act of July 25, 1866, that it was necessary to the acquirement of the grant that the company seeking its benefits should file assent thereto, and for that purpose an extension of time was given. On the other hand, there was a complete assent to the interpretation on the part of the railroad company, thus ratifying, if need be, the Act of Congress in making the extension of time and requiring sale of the lands to actual settlers. This all under the reservation in the original Act, by section twelve, of the authority of Congress to alter, amend, or repeal the same.

The view thus entertained is not without authoritative support. In St. Paul, etc., Railway Co. vs. Greenalgh, 139 U. S. 19, Congress by an act extended time to the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company within which to complete its road, upon condition: "That all rights of actual settlers and their grantees who have heretofore in good faith entered upon and actually resided on any of said lands prior to the passage of this Act, or who otherwise have legal rights in any of such lands, shall be saved and secured to such settlers or other such persons in all respects the same as if said lands had never been granted to aid in the construction of the said lines of railroad." In conjunction therewith the railroad company was required to file a formal acceptance of the conditions in the Department of the Interior for record. Notwithstanding it did not affirmatively appear that any acceptance was ever signed, it was considered, in the absence of such proof, that, as the company continued to assert and exercise ownership over the road, it had in fact accepted the conditions imposed. Hence it was adjudged that a settler upon the lands of the grant prior to the Act extending the time for completion of the road acquired a right superior to that of the railroad company. Thus in effect the amendment of the statute conferring the grant was acceded to by the grantee, and it thereby became bound by it. In this relation the Court says:

> "A mere breach of condition does not of itself work a forfeiture of a grant; some other proceeding must be taken by the grantor to indicate his dissatisfaction with the breach and his intention to exercise his rights to revoke the grant and take possession of the property in consequence thereof. While in this case no specific action was taken by Congress to work a forfeiture of the grant, or by the State, yet the continued possession and use of the property by the company were, in fact, subject to the condition that the rights of settlers upon the lands at the time should not be interfered with, where such settlements had been made in good faith, as was the case in the present instance. And it would be in the highest degree inequitable to allow the company to have all the benefits of the extension of time to complete its road, so as to avoid any forfeiture of its privileges and franchises, without at the same time holding it to the conditions affecting the rights of settlers upon the lands of the company, in consideration of which the extension was made."

So it is here, the railroad company acceded to the amendment by complying specificaly with its requirements, saying nothing of its alleged participation in securing the passage thereof.

It is insisted that the amendment extending the time for completing the road was a waiver on the part of Congress of the necessity for filing an assent, because it was adopted more than one year after the adoption of the main Act, and the amendment makes no mention of the time for filing assent. The answer to this is that Congress did not so treat it, and the railroad company evidently did not so regard it, for both proceeded upon the theory that the assent was yet essential to the earning of the grant. But it is said that at the time of the designation by the Legislature of the East Side Company as entitled to the grant, the company had already assented to the conditions of the Act conferring it, by implication, because it was organized especially for subserving the purposes of the Act, and had then been in the active construction of the road for some time, and therefore that the Act then became operative. It is not alleged in the bill that the company was then engaged in the construction of its road; but, conceding that it was, Congress had made express assent essential by direct terms, and the time of that assent was also made of the essence of the grant, for the grant was made dependent upon the observance of the provision.

Construing the Act as law, however, as it will presently appear it should be construed, which requires that the intendment of Congress shall govern rather than that the law of specific performance of a contract shall be applied, the construction of the Act of Congress, together with its subsequent amendment and the acquiescence of the railroad company therein, again becomes paramount and controlling, and the express assent dominates the grant, so that it does not become operative until that assent is given. See Rogers v. Port Huron & Lake Mich. R. R., 45 Mich. 460, 468. As was said in this case, which bears a close analogy to the case at bar as it pertains to the present question:

> "This acceptance was the only act whereby any of these companies was brought into contract relations with the State at all. The law did not assume to force the grant upon any company, and the contract could not bind either party until both assented to the same agreements and conditions."

The clause in the amendment of April 10, 1869, protecting any rights theretofore acquired by any railroad under the original Act, was intended, looking to the history of the legislation, to protect the West Side Company, as at that time there was a controversy between the East Side and West Side companies as to which was entitled to claim the grant. The West Side Company had previously been designated by the Legislature as entitled to the benefits of the Act, and it had furthermore filed its assent, so that, but for the fact that the East Side Company was now claiming the grant, the West Side Company was apparently entitled to it, and while Congress did not assume to settle the differences between these companies, it did intend to preserve any rights of the West Side Company that it had then acquired. So it was further enacted that the amendment should not be construed as to entitle more than one company to the grant; thus leaving the companies to adjust the matter between themselves. The adjustment came when the West Side Company also obtained a grant. Nor is this case controlled by the case of the United States v. Oregon and California Railroad Company, 176 U. S. 28, 51, for the stipulation upon which that cause was determined shows a different state of facts from those here presented. That construction is preferred which will give meaning, force and operation to all the clauses of an act, rather than that that one clause should nullify another, unless it be that there is a clear and irreconcilable repugnance between them. It is hardly reasonable to suppose that the clause protecting any company against the impairment of rights accrued was designed in any way to nullify the provision requiring sales to be made to actual settlers, etc., seeing that the latter provision is a part of the same amendment, and follows immediately after the former clause.

The sixth and seventh points of contention will be considered together. It is strongly insisted that the Government has in several ways waived, or has precluded itself of the right at this time to insist upon, a forfeiture of the lands in question:

First, by the issuance of its patents to such of the lands comprised by the grant as have been patented.

Second, by not sooner insisting upon the forfeiture, it being assumed that the Government was in possession of knowledge of certain breaches of the condition requiring the grantee railroad companies to sell to actual settlers.

Third, by the act of Congress of September 29, 1890 (26 Stat. 496), entitled "An Act to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads and for other purposes;" and as to the West Side Grant by an Act approved January 31, 1885 (23 Stat. 296), entitled "An Act to declare forfeiture of certain lands granted to aid in the construction of a railroad in Oregon;" and Fourth, by the Act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. 1099), fixing a time beyond which suits to annul and vacate patents issued by the United States may not be instituted, together with the Act of March 2, 1896 (29 Stat. 42), relating to suits by the United States for vacating any patent to lands theretofore erroneously issued under railroad or wagon-road grants, which is a re-enactment, or rather amendatory of the preceding Act.

First, as to the effect of the issuance of the patents. By reference to the bill of complaint it will be noted that patents were issued subsequent to 1871, running to 1906 inclusive, for approximately 2,765,597 acres of the East Side Grant, and of the West Side Grant 128,618 acres. The discussion must proceed with reference to the theory of the Government in seeking to maintain this suit, which is, that the "Settlers' Clause" in the amendment of April 10, 1869, and in the act of May 4, 1870, is a condition subsequent to be observed on the part of the railroad companies; that, if not observed, a forfeiture of the lands would be incurred; and that such provision is a condition attending and upon which the grant was made. Whether the theory can be substantiated in law will be a subject for consideration later.

To recur to the Act of July 25, 1866, the first section relates to the authorization of the railroad company to construct the road; the second to the grant of the lands, the said lands to be applied to the building of the road; and the third section to the grant of the right of way. The fourth section relates to the issuance of the patents. These were required to be issued whenever any section of twenty miles of the road was completed, upon the report of the commissioners showing that the road had been constructed and equipped in all respects as required by the Act. The fifth section prescribes that the grants are made upon condition that the companies shall keep the road in repair and use. The sixth relates to the filing of the companies' assent and the time of the completion of the road, section by section, as specified; and the eighth section, besides providing for forfeiture for non-compliance with specific provisions, authorizes Congress, in case the road is not kept in repair or fit for use after completion, to pass an act to put the same in repair and use, and to appropriate the income for defraying the expense thereof. These comprise all the provisions of the Act which can have any bearing upon the issuance of patents for lands earned under the provisions of the grant.

All public grants are administered by the Land Department, which is a part of the administrative and executive branch of the general Government, and was organized to supervise all the various proceedings by which title to public lands is acquired, from their commencement to their close. Before the issuance of any patent, the Land Department is charged with the duty of ascertaining and determining whether all the conditions of the law entitling it to issue have been complied with. It may be that the issuance depends upon the existence of certain facts, or the performance of certain obligations imposed, or the observance of specific regulations; and in all these the Land Department must ascertain and determine whether the law has been fulfilled so as to entitle the grantee to his final patent under the grant. Within its special jurisdiction, and wherein its function is to conduct inquiry into matters of fact, the Land Department acts judicially, and its findings and judgments, while proceeding within the scope of its powers, are as binding and conclusive as the findings, judgments and decrees of any other special tribunal, and they are unimpeachable and unassailable except by direct proceeding instituted for their correction or annulment. This much for the solemnity and integrity of the acts of the Land Department when in the exercise of its judicial functions. These functions are usually brought into requisition in the consideration and determination relative to the issuance of patents, both under general laws for disposal of the public domain to private persons, and under specific grants for railroad and other purposes. In Barden v. Northern Pacific Railroad, 154 U. S. 288, 327, a case concerning a grant for railroad purposes, the Court declares that:

> "It is the established doctrine, expressed in numerous decisions of this Court, that wherever Congress has provided for the disposition of any portion of the public lands, of a particular character, and authorizes the officers of the Land Department to issue a patent for such land upon ascertainment of certain facts, that department has jurisdiction to inquire into and determine as to the existence of such facts, and in the absence of fraud, imposition, or mistake, its determination is conclusive against collateral attack."
> "The patent of the United States is," it is said, "the conveyance by which the nation passes its title to portions of the public domain."
> Smelting Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 640.

This under the general laws for disposition of the public lands. And it is further said that:

> "The execution and record of the patent are the final acts of the officers of the Government for the transfer of its title, and, as they can be lawfully performed only after certain steps have been taken, that instrument, duly signed, countersigned, and sealed, not merely operates to pass the title, but is > in the nature of an official declaration by that branch of the Government to which the alienation of the public lands, under the law, is intrusted, that all the requirements preliminary to its issue have been complied with."

Ordinarily, the patent under a grant for railroad purposes does not operate to pass the title, for that is done by virtue of the grant itself, in which case the patent is rather in the nature of a confirmation of the grant, and in further assurance of title, bearing the force and effect of a solemn certificate that all things have been done and observed entitling the patentee to his grant at that particular juncture.

Says Mr. Justice Field, in Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 529:

> "In the legislation of Congress a patent has a double operation. It is a conveyance by the Government when the Government has any interest to convey, but where it is issued upon the confirmation of a claim of a previously existing title it is documentary evidence, having the dignity of a record, of the existence of that title, or of such equities respecting the claim as justify its recognition and confirmation. The instrument is not the less efficacious as evidence of previously existing rights because it also embodies words of release or transfer from the Government."

v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496), after holding that the grant was in praesenti, says, at page 510:

> "The subsequent issue of the patents by the United States was not essential to the right of the company to those parcels, although in many respects they would have been of great service to it. They would have served to identify the lands as coterminous with the road completed; they would have been evidence that the grantee had complied with the conditions of the grant, and to that extent that the grant was relieved of possibility of forfeiture for breach of them: they would have obviated the necessity of any other evidence of the grantee's right to the lands; and they would have been evidence that the lands were subject to the disposal of the railroad company with the consent of the Government. They would have been in these respects deeds of further assurance of the patentee's title, and, therefore, a source of quiet and peace to it in its possessions."

This language was substantially repeated in Deseret Salt Company v. Tarpey, 142 U. S. 241, 251, where a question was suggested as to the necessity for patents where the title passed by the Act conferring the grant.

Let us ascertain now what the Land Department, in acting in its supervisory character in the administration of these grants, was required to ascertain and determine relative to the lands granted before issuing patents therefor. It must know that the railroad company was duly incorporated, properly designated by the State Legislature as entitled to the benefits of the Act, and duly authorized to take the grant. It must know that the lands for which patents are sought are within the place or indemnity limits of the grant, and that they have not been reserved, sold, or otherwise disposed of. It must know that the section of twenty miles opposite which the lands are sought to be patented has been completed and equipped in all respects as required by the Act conferring the grant and the amendments thereto, section by section of twenty miles each in its order as the road progresses; and if the entire road was completed and equipped according to law, the Land Department must know that. In this respect the Land Department is aided by the commissioners appointed by the President for the express purpose of ascertaining and making report relative to the facts pertinent to the inquiry. When these facts have been ascertained and determined to exist, then it is incumbent upon the Land Department to issue the patents. The department is required to look no further, nor to concern itself with what the railroad company is bound to do in the future to preserve the integrity of the grant, or to prevent its forfeiture, if such a thing is within the purpose and intendment of Congress.

Now, recurring again to the theory of the bill of complaint that the Settlers' Clause imposes a condition subsequent upon the railroad company for the breach of which a forfeiture would be incurred, it is plain that the Land Department could have nothing to do with any alleged breach of the condition, as by the very order of things such breach would come after the time when it would have passed judgment with relation to the issuance of the patents under the grant. The issuance of the patents, therefore, by the Land Department could be taken neither as a waiver on the part of the Government of the right to insist upon the condition subsequent, nor as adjudication conclusive against the Government's insistence upon the performance of such a condition.

The second ground upon which waiver is predicated is that the Government has not sooner insisted upon forfeiture, knowing that breach of the alleged condition subsequent has been committed. The infractions of the condition referred to consist in the assignment and transfer by the East Side Company of all its rights, privileges, franchises, and property, including the right, title, and interest of the company in and to the granted lands, East Side, to the Oregon and California Railroad Company March 29, 1870, and a like transfer of the West Side Grant October 6, 1880, the execution of certain mortgages noted in the bill of complaint, covering the granted lands, and other conveyances.

As to the transfers to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, these were not intended as a sale and disposition of the lands, but the transactions were designed to work a substitution of the latter company for its predecessors, so that the intention and purpose of Congress, voiced by the enactments conferring the grants, might be carried into effect through its instrumentality, thus conceding to it the rights and benefits to accrue to the original companies, but nothing beyond. Such is the theory upon which the bill of complaint is drawn, and such is clearly the effect of the transfers. The Oregon and California Railroad Company has so treated them, and so has the Government. As it pertains to the East Side Grant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company specifically assented to the Act conferring it, and assented to the grant itself on April 4, 1870, within the extended time for filing assent by the amendment of April 10, 1869. The assent was, however, not filed with the Secretary of the Interior until April 28th. But no importance is attached to that. As to both grants, patents have been issued by the Government to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and accepted by it as the grantee, and in all transactions since the transfer the Oregon and California Railroad Company has been treated, and it has so treated the relationship with the Government, as the grantee company.

As it relates to the mortgages, if considered as evidencing sales of the granted lands, and other conveyances in alleged violation of the stipulations of the Settlers' Clause, there is nothing stated in the bill from which it can be inferred that the Government assented to them in any way, and hence it can not be considered to have waived the condition.

"Mere indulgence or silent acquiescence is never construed into a waiver unless some element of estoppel can be invoked." 29 A. & Eng. Enc. of Law, 1106.

So it is said in Gray v. Blanchard, 8 Pick. 284, 292:

"A mere indulgence is never to be construed into a waiver of a breach of condition; and so are the authorities."

See, also, Trustees of Union College v. City of New York, 173 N. Y., 38; Howe v. Lowell, 171 Mass. 575; Carbon Block Coal Company v. Murphy et al., 101 Ind. 115.

There is certainly nothing contained in the bill of complaint that shows that the Government did more than to remain silent while the Oregon and California Railroad Company was disposing of the lands in violation of the condition prescribed by the Settlers' Clause, if it be a condition, and one of which the Government can avail itself. It did nothing affirmatively or actively by which to mislead the railroad company or cause it rightfully to presume upon the Government's acquiescence. So that the Government has neither waived, nor is it estopped to insist upon, forfeiture for condition broken, if forfeiture may be predicated upon the clause. This will be determined later. Furthermore, it is not believed that the executive officers of the Government can, without express authority from Congress, waive the conditions expressed in a grant emanating from Congress.

The acceptance and use of the road by the Government was contemplated from the beginning, and could not operate as a waiver of a condition subsequent attending the grant.

If it be the purpose to ground the defense upon laches, that cannot be done, for laches is not imputable to the Government.

The other ground of waiver as assigned cannot be supported. The act of Congress of September 29, 1890, supra, declares:

> "That there is hereby forfeited to the United States, and the United States hereby resumes the title thereto, all lands heretofore granted to any State or to any corporation to aid in the construction of a railroad opposite to and coterminous with the portion of any such railroad not now completed, and in operation, for the construction or benefit of which such lands were granted; and all such lands are declared to be a part of the public domain."

It has been held in United States v. Tennessee & Coosa Railroad Co., 176 U. S. 242, that this act did not operate upon lands opposite completed road, and did not work a forfeiture as to them. It is urged that, under the rule expressio unius est exclusio alterius, the act operates as a declaration of waiver of forfeiture as to all lands opposite the completed portions of all railroads. This is equivalent to saying that the effect of the Act was to confirm to the railroad companies all lands opposite completed railroads, or portions thereof. The application sought is a novel one. To say that forfeiture by Congress of lands opposite railroads not constructed is to confirm to the grantees the lands opposite roads constructed, against all contingencies and reserved conditions, whether precedent or subsequent, is carrying the doctrine beyond its purpose and effect. It could not be presumed that Congress, when adopting the general statute applying to all lands under grants lying opposite parts of railroads uncompleted, had in mind all conditions subsequent that might have been annexed to grants where the roads had been completed. The thing is so manifest that it requires no argument; it is sufficient to state the proposition. So Congress could not have intended, by the Act under discussion, to confirm the grants here concerned against any condition subsequent that might have been annexed to them, and, if not intending so to do, the Act could not operate as a waiver or forfeiture of conditions subsequent, if broken. The same is true of the Act of January 31, 1885 (23 Stat. 296), forfeiting the unearned land grant to the West Side Company, although its operation was not general, but related to the forfeiture of a portion of one grant only.

The fourth ground upon which waiver is predicated relates to the statutes of limitation for bringing suits for the annulment of patents, and is rather an objection going to the remedy or the right to institute the suit. The statutes invoked are Section 8 of the Act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. 1099), and Section 1 of the Act of March 2, 1896 (29. Stat. 42). The former statute provides:

> "That suits by the United States to vacate and annul any patent heretofore issued shall only be brought within five years from the passage of this Act, and suits to vacate and annul patents hereafter issued shall only be brought within six years after the date of the issuance of such patents."

The provision is contained in "An Act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes," but, being general in its terms, would seem to include patents to railroad companies under grants thereto, as well as other patents issued by the Government. The later statute declares:

> "That suits by the United States to vacate and annul any patent to lands heretofore erroneously issued under a railroad or wagon road grant shall only be brought within five years from the passage of this Act, and suits to vacate and annul patents hereafter issued shall only be brought within six years after the date of the issuance of such patents, and the limitation of section eight of chapter five hundred and sixty-one of the acts of the second session of the Fifty-first Congress and amendments thereto is extended accordingly as to the patents herein referred to."

The two statutes, read together, put all patents, whether issued in pursuance of railroad grants or otherwise, in the same category, and suits by the Government to cancel cannot be maintained except as thereby provided. But the plain answer to the objection is that this is not a suit to annul the patents issued under these grants. It reaches back of the patents—the purpose being to forfeit the entire grants, so far as the lands are now held by the railroad company, for failure to observe the condition requiring the company to sell to actual settlers. The patents are only evidentiary of the grant; it is the grant that confers title. If the grant is rendered subject to forfeiture for want of the observance of a condition subsequent, the breach whereof may have occurred later than the issuance of many patents, it does not appeal to reason that the forfeiture should be defeated because suits were not instituted to annul the patents within the time fixed by the statute. Should the grant be annulled, the annulment would carry with it, it is true, the avoidance of the patents. But the conditions of the grant must be read into the patents, so the patents cannot stand in the way of the enforcement of such conditions.

The cause which forms the basis of this suit arises out of none of the facts adjudicated by the Land Department, or with which that department had anything to do in issuing the patents; but it arises from the alleged want of the observance of the terms of the grant, whereby the grant itself, it is alleged, has been forfeited. The patents add nothing to the terms of the grant, nor take aught from them.

So I conclude that the Government has not waived its right to maintain this suit for any of the reasons assigned. Nor is it barred of its remedy by virtue of the statutes of limitation relied upon by counsel.

The crucial controversy attending this cause relates to the true intendment of Congress as expressed by the clause contained in the amendment of April 10, 1869, referred to as the "Actual Settlers" proviso, as follows:

> "And provided further, That the lands granted by the Act aforesaid shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one-quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre."

The Government contends that this is a condition subsequent, subjoined to the original Act, the offset of which is to entail a forfeiture of the lands granted for non-observance of the condition. The defendants, the railroad companies and Stephen T. Gage, contend that it is neither a condition subsequent, an enforceable covenant, nor a trust obligation, it being urged that it is an "unenforceable regulative, directive covenant," leaving it wholly to the good faith and discretion of the grantee whether to observe its terms or not.

Reference to some of the plain rules of statutory interpretation will aid in the solution of the problem. It is axiomatic that the intent of Congress, as a first principle, should be ascertained and enforced.

These grants, says the Supreme Court,

> "are to receive such a construction as will carry out the intent of Congress, however difficult it might be to give full effect to the language used if the grants were by instruments of private conveyance."

Winona & St. Peter R. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618, 625.

"There is a presumption," says the same Court, "against a construction which would render a statute ineffective or inefficient or which would cause grave public injury or even inconvenience."

Bird v. United States, 187 U. S. 118, 124.

"The first and most elementary rule of construction is, that it is to be assumed that the words and phrases are used in their technical meaning if they have acquired one, and in their popular meaning if they have not, and that the phrases and sentences are to be construed according to the rules of grammar; and from this presumption it is not allowable to depart, unless adequate grounds are found, either in the context or in the consequences which would result from the literal interpretation, for concluding that that interpretation does not give the real intention of the Legislature."

Endlich on the Interpretation of Statutes, p. 4, sec. 2.

In application of this rule the Court says, in McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y., 601:

"If the words are free from ambiguity and doubt, and express plainly, clearly, and distinctly the sense of the framers of the instrument, there is no occasion to resort to other means of interpretation. It is not allowable to interpret what has no need of interpretation."

And so in United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 102, Mr. Justice Brewer says:

> "The primary and general rule of statutory construction is that the intent of the lawmaker is to be found in the language that he has used. He is presumed to know the meaning of the words and the rules of grammar. The courts have no function of legislation, and simply seek to ascertain the will of the legislator. It is true there are cases in which the letter of the statute is not deemed controlling, but the cases are few and exceptional, and only arise when there are cogent reasons for believing that the letter does not fully and accurately disclose the intent. No mere omission, no mere failure to provide for contingencies, which it may seem wise to have specially provided for, justify any judicial addition to the language of the statute."

In further elucidation, "The province of construction," says the Court in Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 421, "lies wholly within the domain of ambiguity." And in another case, Kohlsaat v. Murphy, 96 U. S. 153, 160, that:

> "The controlling rule of decision in applying the statute in any particular case is, whenever the intention of the Legislature can be discovered from the words employed, in view of the subject-matter and the surrounding circumstances, it ought to prevail, unless it lead to absurd and irrational conclusions, which would never be imputed to the Legislature, except when the language employed will admit of no other signification."

Another plain rule of interpretation is that the purposes of the Act must be gathered from the context and a survey of all its provisions, so that if possible it may stand as a harmonious and consistent whole, every word and sentence bearing an appropriate meaning and signification, rejecting none, unless leading to a manifest absurdity, which it must be presumed that the Legislature never intended.

Rice v. Railroad Company, 1 Black 358, 378;

United States v. Winn, 3 Sumner 209, 211;

United States v. Bitty, 208 U. S. 393, 402.

Furthermore, interpretation must be had in the light of the conditions prevailing at the time of the enactment, and thus by standing in the place of the legislative body its intendment may be gathered by looking through its visions at the things as they then existed, and the probable exigencies that give rise to the measure.

In Platt v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 99 U. S. 48, 60, construing the Union Pacific Land Grant by Act of 1862, the Court says:

"All will concede * * * we are to look at the state of things then existing, and in the light then appearing seek for the purposes and objects of Congress in using the language it did. And we > are to give such construction to that language, if possible, as will carry out the Congressional intentions."

As stated by Mr. Justice Jackson, in Mobile & Ohio Railroad v. Tennessee, 153 U. S. 486, 502:

> "Legislative contracts, especially, should be read in the light of the public policy entertained and the purposes sought to be accomplished at the time they were made, rather than at a later period when different ideas and theories may prevail."

Other citations to this purpose are unnecessary. I shall later point out some of the attendant and inducing conditions, including the policy and purposes of the Government pertaining to railway grants and donations and sale of the public domain to private settlers, leading in all probability to the legislation in controversy.

In the case of legislative grants, imposing conditions along therewith upon the grantee in relation to the thing granted, the Acts conferring them are to be construed as laws, and the technical rules governing the interpretation of contracts are inapplicable; the single inquiry being as to the intent of the one party—the legislative intendment in promulgating the law.

Says the Court in Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 62:

> "A legislative grant operates as a law as well as a transfer of the property, and has such force as the intent of the Legislature requires."

So in Missouri, etc., Ry. Co. v. Kan. Pac. Ry. Co., 97 U. S. 491, 497:

> "It is always to be borne in mind in construing a Congressional grant, that the Act by which it is made is a law as well as a conveyance, and that such effect must be given to it as will carry out the intent of Congress. That intent should not be defeated by applying to the grant the rules of the common law, which are properly applicable only to transfers between private parties."

Mr. Justice Brewer, sitting in the Circuit Court, states the rule concisely, yet comprehensively, thus:

> "All legislative land grants are to be regarded, not merely as contracts, but also as laws. As such, they are subject to the same rules of interpretation that govern other laws, and a primary rule is that the intent of the legislator is to be sought, and, when ascertained, controls. The technical rules which govern the interpretation of private contracts must always yield to the single inquiry of the intent of the one party—the Legislature."
> St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Greenhalgh, 26 Fed. 563, 568.

See, also:

Platt v. Union Pacific R. R. Co., 99 U. S. 48;

Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 509;

Johnson v. Ballou, 28 Mich., 378.

And still another rule of construction as it pertains to grants of the public domain to private individuals or corporations is that they should, where there is ambiguity or uncertainty, be construed most favorably to the Government, thus devolving upon the grantee, in whatsoever claim he seeks to maintain against the Government relative to the grant, to show a right clearly defined and about which there can be no controversy or contention. Mr. Justice Harlan, in Sioux City, etc. Railroad v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 360, states the principle thus:

> "If the terms of an Act of Congress, granting public lands, 'admit of different meanings, one of extension and the other of limitation, they must be acepted in a sense favorable to the grantor. And if rights claimed under the Government be set up against it, they must be so clearly defined that there can be no question of the purpose of Congress to confer them.' Leavenworth &c. Railroad v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 740."

Mr. Justice Field earlier stated the same principle in Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 437:

> "It is also a familiar rule of construction that where a statute operates as a grant of public property to an individual, or the relinquishment of a public interest, and there is a doubt as to the meaning of its terms, or as to its general purpose, that construction should be adopted which will support the claim of the Government rather than that of the individual. Nothing can be inferred against the State."

Mr. Justice Harlan makes use of this explicit and significant language in Water Company v. Knoxville, 200 U. S. 22, 33:

> "The universal rule in doubtful cases—this Court said in Oregon Railway Co. v. Oregonian Ry. Co., 130 U. S. 1, 26—is that 'the construction shall be against the grantee and in favor of the Government.' As late as Coosaw Mining Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 562, this Court said: 'The doctrine is firmly established that only that which is granted in clear and explicit terms passes by a grant of property, franchises or privileges in which the Government or the public use has an interest. Statutory grants of that character are to be construed strictly in favor of the public, and whatever is not unequivocally granted is withheld; nothing passes by mere implication.' "

And so it was held in that case.

Some inquiry now relative to the conditions existing the time these grants were made, and the history, licy, and purposes of the general Government in its ntrol, administration, and disposition of the public do-ain.

In the early annals of the United States the public nds were regarded largely as an asset out of which to rive revenue for the needs of the Government. At e time the domain was pledged to the payment of the blic debt. The earlier policy was to dispose of these nds to private purchasers, both at public and private le, but for as much as could be had, and thus to in-ease the revenues of the Government. Such was the ntral thought. It may have contemplated that pur-asers of large tracts would themselves subdivide their ldings, by disposition to persons desiring to establish mes, and that the lands would eventually be devoted the needs of the settler. But that was subordinate the main purpose. Lands once offered at public auc-n, when no purchaser was secured, became what was own as "offered lands," or lands subject to private try. These offered lands could thereafter be pur-ased at the minimum price, being the price fixed be-v which the Government would not consent that they ould be bid in at auction. Through this regulation, rchasers at private entry were enabled to acquire such cts of land as they were able to pay for, for home or other purposes. They could acquire no other lands from the Government except those that had been previously offered at public auction and failed of a purchaser at a price equal to the minimum or above. Even settlement upon the public domain was discouraged, Congress believing that satisfactory disposition thereof might otherwise be more readily and expeditiously accomplished. Notwithstanding, there was constant and increasing encroachment upon the public domain, and many persons made settlement upon tracts of land of their own selection, cultivating and improving them, and thus fitting and designing them for homes and permanent residence. Based upon such settlement, cultivation and improvement, and by virtue of being the first appropriators, the settlers began to put forth claims to the first right to purchase the tracts involved from the Government, that they might acquire the ultimate title thereto. Later, Congress recognized these claims of right; first in a small way, that is, confining its recognition to settlers in certain localities, and limiting its relief in matter of time. The idea grew, however, until Congress was induced to adopt a general pre-emption law authorizing the entry of lands surveyed, but not open to private entry, as well as of lands which could be bought at private sale. In illustration of the development of the policy, it was enacted May 29, 1830 (4 Stat. 420, 421):

> "That every settler or occupant of the public lands, prior to the passage of this Act, who is now in possession, and cultivated any part thereof in the > year 1829, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter * * * any number of acres, not more than one hundred and sixty or a quarter-section, to include his improvement, upon paying to the United States the then minimum price of said land."

On April 5, 1832, another statute was passed (4 Stat. 503), declaring:

> "That all actual settlers, being house-keepers upon the public lands, shall have the right of pre-emption to enter, within six months after the passage of this Act, not exceeding the quantity of one half-quarter section."

Where, by reason of the public surveys not having been made, the settlers were unable to describe their entries, the privileges thus granted were extended by acts of July 14, 1832 (4 Stat. 603), and March 2, 1833 (4 Stat. 663), for a priod of one year after the surveys should be made. These pre-emption acts were revived by Act of June 19, 1834 (4 Stat. 678), and again by Act of June 22, 1838 (5 Stat. 251), and later still by Act of June 1, 1840 (5 Stat. 382). But on September 4, 1841 (5 Stat. 455), a general pre-emption statute was enacted extending the benefits of settlement without restriction as to time, and providing that, from and after the passage of the Act, every person as therein designated, being the head of a family, etc., who since the first day of June, 1840, had made or should thereafter make settlement in person on the public lands, which had been surveyed prior thereto, and who should inhabit and improve the same and erect a dwelling thereon, was authorized to enter, in the proper land office, any number of acres of such land, to include the residence of the claimant, not exceeding 160 acres, by payment to the United States of the minimum price of such land. This statute expressly authorized any person possessing the qualifications designated to make settlement upon any lands of the Government domain that had theretofore been surveyed. Prior thereto the Government had been adopting legislation designed to legalize what was treated rather as a trespass upon the Government's domain than as an entry and occupation by right, license or privilege. Now the entry is directly permitted, and not only this, but settlement is invited, by throwing open the surveyed portions of the public domain for that express purpose. Says the Court in Clements v. Warner, 24 How. 394, 397:

> "Later statutes enlarged the privilege (of preemption), so as to embrace lands not subject to sale or entry, and clearly evince that the actual settler is the most favored of the entire class of purchasers."

This case was decided in 1860. In the meanwhile the trend of public thought was toward even greater liberality as it concerned the settler. The public domain was fast coming to be regarded, not as a property—a mere asset from which to derive revenue for the Government's current needs, or with which to discharge its obligations—but as a vast domain, which in large measure shoud be devoted to the settlement and habitation of its citizens, and that those willing to venture out into the frontier and there provide homes for themselves, and thus establish communities and build up the country, were primarily deserving of the Nation's bounty. So the sentiment grew favorable to donating outright small tracts of the public lands to such of the citizens, present and prospective, of the Government as would be willing to make settlement thereon, and show good faith in their purpose to make of such lands their permanent homes by living thereon and improving the same. Ultimately—May 20, 1862 (12 Stat. 392), Congress adopted the Homestead Law, which donates to those who desire to take advantage of its provisions 160 acres of public land, without cost except the fees attending the filings and proofs in the land office, on condition only that they reside upon and cultivate the same for a period of five years. This law grew rapidly in favor, and soon became firmly established in public confidence and esteem as wise and justly beneficient.

It was not until early in the 19th century that Congress began the appropriation of public lands in aid of internal improvements. First the appropriations were of a certain proportion of the proceeds arising from sales of the land, but later they were of the land itself, which in the earlier stages was devoted to the construction of canals, river improvements and wagon roads. This was followed by appropriations to aid in the construction of railroads. The grants were made first to the states, to be by them devoted to the ultimate purposes designed, but following a considerable time later grants were made to railroad corporations incorporated by Act of Congress, and then to a few private corporations. During the fifties, and up to within the year 1866, numerous grants were made to states, covering many millions of acres, in aid of the construction of railroads. Most of these were similar in the manner of disposing of the lands, the states being made the intermediary through which the title was to pass, to insure good faith on the part of the railroad companies ultimately to receive the benefits. Generally the grants were of lands not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of. Later acts excluded lands also to which a pre-emption claim or right of homestead settlement had attached, and such as were in the occupancy of bona fide settlers. On July 1, 1862, Congress made a departure by granting lands to a company of its own incorporation, as well as to privately incorporated concerns under general State laws. I refer to the Act creating the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the grant of lands thereto in aid of the construction of its road, including grants to some private corporations. Other grants were made to Federal corporations, namely, one in 1864, another in 1866, and still another in 1871, being the last of all the grants made by Congress in aid of the construction of railroads. Some other grants to private corporations followed those provided for along with the Union Pacific Grant, and among them the grants of lands under consideration here.

The earlier grants were attended with a doubling of the minimum price of lands within the railroad limits; that is, within the exterior boundaries of the grant not covered by it, but required that such lands be offered at public sale before they were subjected to private entry even at that price. But beginning with the Northern Pacific Grant of July 1, 1864, the minimum price was doubled, and private entry was permitted upon such lands whether previously offered or not. Commencing with 1866 the provision was again readjusted, permitting the settler to make entry under the preemption Act, at the price existing at the time of settlement, and of eighty acres under the regulations of the Homestead Act. The grants of 1869, as will be seen by the Acts now under consideration, annexed provisions requiring the lands granted to be disposed of to actual settlers, in quantities not greater than one quarter-section and at a price not above $2.50 per acre. This policy was subsequently adhered to. This latter class of provisions was the outgrowth of a widepsread and persistent agitation among the people of the nation against the further granting of large areas in aid of railroad construction, it being urged that what remained of the public domain should be set apart for occupancy and acquirement by actual settlers and home-seekers, with the privilege and right of acquiring small quantities of land in their own right. The appeal was made as a "measure of justice to the whole American people, as a rich legacy in trust" to the generation then existing and for those to come after, "never to be alienated." The legislation that followed was largely indicative of the reflex of public opinion pertaining to the subject.

Some allusion to the discussions in Congress immediately prior to and at the time these provisions were incorporated with the legislation making grants of public lands to railroad corporations, will not, I think, prove uninstructive; not that what members may have said while the bills were under consideration should be taken as characterizing the legislative intendment in adopting them, but as shedding light upon the conditions, historically, then attending the trend of public thought, and the vital need of such legislation to meet the public exigencies.

The idea was first advanced that, whenever it could be done, the lands proposed to be granted for railroad purposes should be set apart to the states in which they were situated, to be held in trust by them, to be disposed of to actual settlers only, with limitations as to acreage and a maximum price. Then it was urged that such granted lands should be administered by the Secretary of the Interior. This later idea came from Mr. Lawrence, of the House, by way of an amendment to the Denver Pacific bill, as follows:

> "And be it further enacted, That all lands which may be granted or conveyed under or by virtue of this Act or the Acts relating to said railroad company, shall be sold only to actual settlers in quantities not exceeding one quarter-section to any one person, and at a price not exceeding $2.50 an acre; and the Secretary of the Interior shall have power to prescribe rules and regulations for carrying this section into effect."

This was defeated. The discussion drifted to another plan, embodied in an amendment offered by Mr. Julian, also of the House, as follows:

"Provided, That the lands granted * * * shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one hundred and sixty acres to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre."

Speaking to the amendment, Mr. Julian had this to say:

"Under proper restrictions I would grant them public lands, and this House has already decided that these restrictions shall be such as I have proposed in the amendment I offered to this bill the other day, namely, that the lands shall be granted on the express condition that they shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one quarter-section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre. This will avoid the complete monopoly of the lands, as sanctioned by the old system of land grants, and at the same time devote to settlement and tillage the odd-numbered sections granted, while creating in this way established communities and a local business along the line of the road. This, sir, is the true policy, and the whole land-grant system of our country will be repudiated by the people, and ought to be repudiated, unless it shall be made to conform to the conditions I have stated."

Another plan was proposed by Mr. Logan, namely that all lands theretofore granted to aid in the construction of railroads along that portion then unfinished should be subject to entry at the Government Land Office at $2.50 per acre, the money to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as a sinking fund for the redemption or purchase of the bonds of the company, so far as it might be sufficient therefor. Mr. Lawrence's plan was, in effect, to make the railroad company the trustee of the lands, with administration by the Secretary of the Interior. Mr. Logan's plan was to make the Government trustee, as well as to subject the corpus of the estate to administration through its proper Land Department. Mr. Julian's amendment prevailed finally, and such in effect, by later enactment became the law attending the grants in question. Other grants took this form of legislation in the main. I speak specifically of the Coos Bay Wagon Road Grant of March 3, 1869 (15 Stat. 340); a revival of grant to the State of Alabama in aid of the construction of railroads (16 Stat. 45) and an Act extending the time for the construction of a railroad under grant to the state of Missouri and Arkansas. As to this latter grant the amendment was subsequently repealed.

The discussion along the line was varied, and the opinions of members of the two Houses of Congress did not agree as to the effect of the clause. Senator

Vickers was of the view that the grant was made "expressly on condition that the lands are to be sold to actual settlers"; that "If the lands are sold to actual settlers there is no forfeiture. If a portion of the land is sold to actual settlers, the portion unsold will be forfeited to the Government, if that condition is violated." Senator Thurman was doubtful whether the provision would be effective, and suggested, as it then occurred to him, that Congress could not engraft upon the grant a condition or a trust or a covenant of that kind in that indefinite and general way. Senator Williams, of Oregon, said:

> "The lands granted are as open, under the provisions of this bill, to actual settlers as they are under the pre-emption laws of the country. It simply provides that when settlers go upon these lands they may buy them of the company, and the proceeds shall be applied to assist in the construction of the road."

Senators Stewart and Casserly agreed with him in this view.

With this abbreviated review of the conditions and of the policy of the Government with reference to the public domain obtaining prior to and at the time of the adoption of the measures in question, we may proceed to the further discussion of the legislative intendment, considered from a legal standpoint, under the authorities.

There can be no two opinions about the literal meaning of the proviso. The language is so plain and explicit that it bears absolute impress upon the understanding. It constitutes a declaration that the granted lands shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one quarter-section, etc., which is easily comprehensible, and it would seem that a simple duty or obligation was imposed, so simple that anyone could, without taking further thought, readily discharge it. But the real question is, Are those provisions couched in such legal terms as to render them enforceable according to their letter and spirit? In other words, can the grantee be required to do what the language plainly directs shall be done; and what penalty, if any, is entailed by a failure or refusal to observe the plain wording of the provisos?

An estate upon condition is defined as "one which has a qualification annexed, by which, on the happening of a particular event, it may be created, enlarged or destroyed. If set forth, the condition is express; and if it allows the estate to vest, and then to be defeated in consequence of non-observance of the requirement, it is a condition subsequent."

Some general observations concerning conditions subsequent may be made in passing. They are not favored in law, and ordinarily are amenable to strict construction, for the reason that, if not observed according to their tenor, they entail forfeiture and a destruction of the estate. A mere declaration touching the particular purposes for which the grant it made, or that the grantee is to do or not to do certain things, will not evidence a condition. And, generally speaking, a condition in a grant should be created by apt and appropriate words—words which ex proprio vigore import a condition. Furthermore, if there be doubt as to whether the words create a condition subsequent, or a covenant, the breach of which may be compensated in damages, courts will construe them favorably to the latter.

Instances are not wanting, however, where words and terms appropriate to create a condition when read in connection with the context of the grant and the intention of the parties, have been disregarded in their technical sense, and construed as in harmony with a covenant, and conversely, the decision depending upon the real purpose and intent of the parties to the grant, as gathered from the manner and purpose of the conveyance and from the instrument itself, read in its entirety. And it has been held that, although a deed or conveyance contain a clause declaring the purpose for which it is intended the granted premises shall be used, if such purpose will not inure specially to the benefit of the grantor, but is in its nature general and public, and if there are no words in the grant indicating an intent that the grant is to be void if the declared purpose is not fulfilled, such a clause is not a condition subsequent.

Raley v. Umatilla County, 15 Or. 172;

Gilbert v. Peteler, 38 N. Y. 165;

Rawson v. Inhabitants of School District No. 5 in Uxbridge, 89 Mass. 125.

Recurring to the old law, which comes down to us as sound today as it was then, Sheppard's Touchstone (8 Ed. 121) has this upon the subject:

> "Conditions annexed to estates are sometimes so placed and confounded amongst covenants, sometimes so ambiguously drawn, and at all times have in their drawing so much affinity with limitations, that it is hard to discern and distinguish them. Know therefore that for the most part conditions have conditional words in their frontispiece, and do begin therewith; and that amongst these words there are three words that are most proper, which in and of their own nature and efficacy, without any addition of other words of re-entry in the conclusion of the condition, do make the estate conditional, as proviso, ita quod, and sub conditione. And therefore if A. grant lands to B. to have and to hold to him and his heirs, provided that, or so as, or under this condition, that B. do pay to A. ten pounds at Easter next; this is a good condition, and the estate is conditional without any more words. But there are other words, as Si, si contingat, and the like, that will make an estate conditional also, but then they must have other words joined with them, and added to them in the close of the condition, as that then the grantor shall re-enter, or that then the estate shall be void, or the like. And therefore if A. grants lands to B. to have and to hold to him and his heirs, and if, or but if it happen, the said B. do not pay to A. ten pound at Easter, without more words, this is no good condition; but if these or such like words be added, that then it shall be lawful for A. to re-enter, then it will be a good condition.

"But here note that these words proviso, ita quod and sub conditione, albeit they be the most proper words to make conditions, yet do they not always make the estate by the deed to be conditional, but sometimes do serve for other purposes; for the word proviso hath divers operations besides; for sometimes it doth serve for and work a qualification, or limitation, and sometimes it doth serve to make and work a covenant only. And then only (being inserted amongst the covenants of the deed) it doth make the estate conditional, when there are these things in the case:

"1. When the clause wherein it is hath no dependence upon any other sentence in the deed, nor doth participate with it, but stands originally by and of itself; 2. When it is compulsory to the feoffee, donee, &c. 3. When it comes on the part, and by the words of the feoffer, donor, lessor, &c. 4. When it is applied to the estate, and not to some other matter."

A few modern cases will illustrate the significance given technical words appropriate to the creation of a condition, and when their technical sense will be disregarded; also when a condition will be declared even where no technical words adapted to its creation attend it.

In Gray v. Blanchard, 8 Pickering 283, a deed contained the following provision: "Provided, however, this conveyance is upon the condition, that no windows shall be placed in the north wall of the house aforesaid, or of any house to be erected on the premises, within thirty years from the date hereof." It was objected to this conveyance that the words quoted did not constitute a condition, but evidenced a covenant only. Answering this objection, the Court, speaking through Parker, Chief Justice, says:

> "The words are apt to create a condition; there is no ambiguity, no room for construction; and they cannot be distorted so as to convey a different sense from that which was palpably the intent of the parties. The word 'provided' alone may constitute a condition, but here the very term is used which is often implied from the use of other terms. 'This conveyance is upon the condition,' can mean nothing more nor less than their natural import; and we can not help the folly of parties who consent to take estates upon onerous conditions, by converting conditions into covenants. It would be quite as well to say that the words mean nothing, and so ought to be rejected altogether. No authority has been cited which bears out this suggestion; indeed the authorities are all against it."

It was further insisted that, because there was no clause of re-entry for breach of condition in the deed, the provision was not strictly a condition going to the forfeiture of the estate, but the Court here also held to the contrary, saying:

> "The law seems to be clear the other way. A clause of re-entry is not necessary to make a condition. Proviso, ita quod, sub conditione, make the estate conditional. Com. Dig. Condition, A 2. Other words, such as si, si contingat, do not make a condition, which will work a forfeiture, without clause of re-entry. Lit. §331; Shep. Touch. 121."

In the case of Hooper v. Cummings, 45 Maine, 359, it appears that one Jonathan Cummings conveyed to Nathan Woodbury and others, a committee appointed to build a meeting-house in the town, certain acreage, and that in the deed, succeeding the covenants, were these words: "Providing the said committee and proprietors fence the said land and keep the same in repair." Deciding as to the effect of these words, the Court says:

> "We may assume that the proviso in the deed created a condition subsequent, and in this we are sustained by most, if not all, the authorities, ancient and modern; notwithstanding it is to be construed strictly and most strongly against the grantor to prevent, if possible, a forfeiture of the estate. 'If the word proviso be the speaking of the grantor, feoffer, donor, &c., and obliges the grantee, &c., to any act, it makes a condition, in whatever part of the deed it stands; and, though there be covenants before or after, is not material.' 3 Com. Dig. 84 (Condition)."

Sharon Iron Co. v. City of Erie, 41 Pa. St. 341, is a case where the City of Erie conveyed by deed a piece of realty to the Sharon Iron Company, subject to the conditions, provisions, and stipulations of certain resolutions. These resolutions provided, first, "That the alienees shall, 'within one year, erect a breakwater in front of each of said lots, under the direction of the city councils.' Second, That they shall 'within two years, erect a good and substantial bloomery thereon, or within the limits of the city.'" It being alleged that the iron company had failed to comply with these provisions, the city brought ejectment to recover the lots. The bloomery was not constructed as required by the resolutions, and the question came up as to whether the grantees had not forfeited the property by reason of the non-observance of the condition. Speaking to that subject, the Court says:

"The clause in the original resolution incorporated into the deed was a condition, not a covenant, and 'where the language imports a condition merely, and there are no words importing an agreement, it cannot be enforced as a covenant, but the only remedy is through a forfeiture of the estate.'" Quoting from Selden J., in Palmer v. Fort Plain and Cooperstown Plank Road Co., 1 Keenan 389.

In Wilson et ux. v. Wilson, 86 Ind. 472, a deed was executed by father to son upon the consideration of a certain covenant contained in a separate instrument executed by the son. Upon these facts it was held that the deed was upon condition, the Court saying:

> "There was no other valuable consideration for the deed, and, unless the instrument can operate as a defeasance, it is difficult to see how, in respect to some, at least, of its terms, it could be enforced, or be made effective in any way. It may be said that the covenants contained in the writing are personal covenants merely, but that cannot affect the conclusion that the deed was made on condition that they be faithfully kept and performed."

In Oliver Hayden et al. v. The Inhabitants of Stoughton, 5 Pick. 528, a devise of real estate to a town for the purpose of building a schoolhouse, "provided it is built within 100 rods of the place where the meeting-house now stands," was held to be upon a condition subsequent.

Says Lyon, Judge, in Horner v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y Co. et al., 38 Wis. 165, 173:

> "Although there are technical words which, if used in a conveyance, unmistakably create a condition, yet the use thereof is not absolutely essential to that end, and a valid condition may be expressed without employing these words."

And again:

> "It is not essential to a valid condition that, in case of a breach thereof, a right of re-entry be expressly reserved in the deed, or that it be expressed therein that the estate of the grantee shall terminate with a breach of the condition."

This was a case where the deed conveyed two parcels of land. After the description of the first parcel, and referring to it by the words "The aforesaid piece or parcel of land hereby conveyed to the party of the second part only for depot and other railroad purposes," and after description of the other parcel, which in terms is granted for a railway, the deed contains these words: "Both of said pieces or parcels being granted solely for said road purposes." The Court, speaking with reference to these clauses, says:

> "The words 'only' and 'solely' are words of restriction or exclusion. As used in this deed, their effect clearly is to prohibit the grantee from using the lands for any other than the specified purposes."

So it was said by Page, J., in Kilpatrick v. Mayor of Baltimore, 48 Am. St. 509, 511:

> "Technical words are not absolutely essential to create a condition, nor, on the other hand, does their use necessarily raise one; such words may be controlled by the context of the instrument in which they are used, so that sometimes they work a limitation and condition, and sometimes a covenant or a trust only."

In this case the deed was to the "Mayor and City Council of Baltimore and its successors," with habendum "To have and to hold * * * unto the Mayor," etc., "forever, as and for a street to be kept as a public highway." And it was held not to have been made upon condition.

Lurton, Circuit Judge, now a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, gave utterance to the principle in Board of Commissioners v. Young, 59 Fed. 96, 104. The deed under consideration contained neither technical words importing a conditional estate, nor any clause of re-entry. "Yet," says the distinguished jurist, "a condition subsequent may be so strongly and clearly implied from the whole tenor of the deed as to demand recognition, though not expressed in technical language." The deed in that case, however, was ultimately held not to have been executed upon condition.

In Stanley v. Colt, 5 Wall. 119, 166, the Court says:

> "It is true that the word 'proviso' is an appropriate one to constitute a common-law condition in a deed or will, but this is not the fixed and invariable meaning attached to it by the law in these instruments. On the contrary, it gives way to the intent of the parties as gathered from an examination of the whole instrument, and has frequently been thus explained and applied as expressing simply a covenant or limitation in trust."

Again, in Atlantic & Pacific Railroad v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 428, Mr. Justice Brown says:

> "It cannot be supposed that Congress intended to vest a title in the railway company to this enormous grant of lands without contemplating that the Government might in some way reacquire it in case of a failure of the company to comply with the conditions of the grant. No express provision for a forfeiture was required to fix the rights of the Government. If an estate be granted upon a condition subsequent, no express words of forfeiture or reinvestiture of title are necessary to authorize the grantor to re-enter in case of a breach of such conditions."

It is not unusual for the Crown or the Government to annex conditions subsequent to grants, and such grants are subject to forfeiture for failure to observe the conditions imposed, as private grants may be forfeited unless the breach is subsequently waived by Act of the grantor.

United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691;
United States v. Wiggins, 14 Pet. 334;
United States v. Repentigny, 5 Wall. 211.

Indeed, it is a thing quite common in some form attending grants in aid of railroads and other internal improvements.

Two authorities may now be noted which have discussed conditions, one of similar import and the other identical with these under consideration. The first is Nichols v. Southern Oregon Co., 135 Fed. 232, a case decided in this Court. By Act of March 3, 1869 (15 Stat. 340), a grant of lands was made to the State of Oregon in aid of the construction of a military wagon road, containing the following provision:

> "Provided, further, that the grant of land hereby made shall be upon the condition that the lands shall be sold to any one person only in quantities not greater than one quarter-section, and at a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre."

The defendant company succeeded to a portion of these lands, and the plaintiff sued to require it to convey to him a tract of 160 acres, after tendering the price thereof at the rate of $2.50 per acre, claiming that under the clause above quoted he was so entitled to purchase the land, and that the defendant was obligated to convey to him. Judge Bellinger, in disposing of the controversy, says:

> "The grant was not a law for the sale of the granted lands. It did not offer them for sale. That was left to the State, subject to restrictions as to the price at which they should be sold and the quantity that should be sold to any one person. These restrictions were mere incidents of the grant, mere regulations that the State was required to observe in selling the granted lands, at such time after they were earned as the State should conclude to sell them. The object to be accomplished in no wise depended upon them. Whatever rights existed in respect to these restrictions belong to the United States. No interest was created in the complainant. He is not a beneficiary in the grant, and he has no standing to complain that the State has violated its conditions in the manner in which it has disposed of the granted lands. That is a matter that can only be taken advantage of by the United States. Furthermore, above 30 years ago Congress authorized patents to issue to the State or to any corporation or corporations to which it had transferred its interest, and patents have been issued to the State's grantees in pursuance of that law. It is not necessary to consider whether this Act was a waiver by Congress of the conditions subsequent in the grant."

Three things seem to have been decided, namely, that the restrictions imposed by the clause quoted were mere incidents or regulations that the State was required to obey; that whatever rights vested in respect to such restrictions belonged to the United States; and that a third or outside party was not a beneficiary to the grant; and, incidentally, the conditions are spoken of as "conditions subsequent."

The other case is Warrior River Coal & Land Company v. Alabama State Land Company, 154 Ala. 185. The action was in ejectment, and involved a tract of land included in a grant by Congress to the State to aid in the construction of railroads. The grant, which was made by Act of June 3, 1856 (11 St. 17), seems to have lapsed in part, and a revival was accorded by Act of April 10, 1869 (16 St. 45), containing a clause identical with the one here under consideration amendatory of the Act of July 25, 1866. Speaking with reference to the clause, the Court says:

> "The legal title to the granted lands having vested in the State, and the beneficial interest in the railroad company having become individualized as to the land and the companies, respectively, the land here in controversy included, by the performance of all conditions precedent erected by the National Grant, the limitation quoted from the Act was, at most, a condition subsequent, a violation of which rendered the estate in the particular instance amenable to forfeiture by the appropriate action of the granting government, and by that only."

There is here the intimation that the clause might create a condition subsequent, but that if it did, the Court was of the view that the forfeiture could be insisted upon only by the general Government.

Without for the present concluding whether the provisions in question constitute a condition subsequent, the logical order requires that we first determine the contentions of cross-complainants and interveners.

The position of cross-complainants is that these provisions—the Settlers Clause—devolved upon the grantee an executory trust to be administered by it, and that when any citizen, qualified to take and hold lands in his own right, became an actual settler upon the land selected by him, he then became qualified as a cestui que trust, to whom the grantee was bound to sell at the rate of $2.50 per acre, and in due time to convey, and that equity will interpose its jurisdiction to enforce the trust. Under this theory, it is further asserted that it makes no difference that a cestui que trust was not in being and qualified as such at the time of the grant, but that the Act has in contemplation any such qualified person, who may at any time make settlement and, with a tender of the purchase price, demand a deed.

A word as to the signification of the term "covenant," before proceeding to the inquiry thus suggested. It is "An agreement between two or more persons, entered into by deed, whereby one of the parties promises the performance or non-performance of certain acts, or that a given state of things does or shall, or does or shall not, exist." Bouvier's Law Dictionary.

"In common parlance, however, the term is applied to any agreement whether under seal or not." 11 Cyc. 1043.

No specific or technical words are necessary to the creation of a covenant, nor is any particular or set form of expression, it being sufficient if, from the whole agreement, there appears upon any part of it an obligation or undertaking to do or not to do a particular thing or things. As stated in Sheppard's Touchstone, 161:

> "And there needs not in this case formal and orderly words, as covenant, promise, and the like, to make a covenant on which to ground an action of covenant; for a covenant may be had by any other words; and upon any part of an agreement in writing, in what words soever it be set down, for anything to be or not to be done, the party to or with whom the promise or agreement is made may have this action upon the breach of the agreement."

The case of Hale v. Finch, 104 U. S. 261, is instructive upon the subject. The controversy was relative to the proper construction of a bill of sale of a boat which recited that the sale was upon express condition, etc., it being claimed that there was liability in covenant. The bill of sale was not signed by the vendee, nor was it necessary in the form in which it was drawn for him to sign it. The Court, after observing that "Words of proviso and condition will be construed into words of covenant, when such is the apparent intention and meaning of the parties," quoting from 2 Parsons, Contracts, 23; and that "There are cases in which the instrument to be construed was held to contain both a condition and a covenant; as, 'If a man by indenture letteth lands for years, provided always, and it is covenanted and agreed between the said parties, that the lessee should not alien,' " which was adjudged to be " 'a condition by force of the proviso, and a covenant by force of the other words,' " citing Co. Litt. 203 b; and after further observing that there was in terms a covenant to defend the title of the boat, which was immediately followed by language implying an agreement that the sale was upon the express condition that neither the boat nor the machinery should be used within a prescribed time upon certain waters, held that, the vendor having expressly and the vendee impliedly agreed that the sale was upon an express condition stated in such form as to preclude the idea of personal responsibility upon the part of the vendee, effect should be given the intention thus distinctly declared, and hence that the writing created a condition and not a covenant.

In general a trust is "an obligation arising out of a confidence reposed in one who has the legal title to property conveyed to him, that he will faithfully apply and deal with such property according to the confidence reposed."

28 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, 858.

So, "For the creation of a valid trust, three circumstances must concur; first, a definite subject-matter within the disposal of the settlor; second, a lawful definite object to which the subject-matter is to be devoted; third, clear and unequivocal words or acts, devoting the subject matter to the object of the trust."

28 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law (2 Ed.) 865, 866.

But "The declaration of trust, whether written or oral, must be reasonably certain in its material terms; and this requisite of certainty includes the subject-matter or property embraced within the trust, the beneficiaries or persons in whose behalf it is created, the nature and quantity of interests which they are to have, and the manner in which the trust is to be performed. If the language is so vague, general, or equivocal, that any of these necessary elements of the trust is left in real uncertainty, then the trust must fail." 2 Pomeroy's Eq. Jr. §1009.

As it is with a covenant or condition subsequent, no particular form of words is essential whereby to create a trust. It depends wholly upon the intention of the person who it is avowed has made the settlement, and the intention is to be ascertained also, as in the other forms of obligation or condition, from all the words attending the instrument by which the relationship is claimed to have been established. So the inclination of construction, where it is doubtful whether a trust has been created or a condition subsequent has been imposed, is toward the trust relationship.

As to the Settlers' Clause, there is absolute certainty as it respects the subject-matter. It consists of the lands granted. But what is to be said of the beneficiaries, and of the nature and quality of interest each or any of them is to have?

It should be borne in mind that in most jurisdictions a marked and vital difference is maintained between ordinary and charitable trusts, as it pertains to the essentiality of the element of identity and certainty of the cestui que trust. Those jurisdictions which do not recognize the distinction hold that charitable trusts are governed, as it respects this element, by the same rules as are applicable to ordinary trusts. In the ordinary trust the cestuis que trust must not only be definitely and specifically designated so that there can ordinarily be no uncertainty as to their identity, but they must be capable of taking the estate or property which is the subject of the trust. They may not be in esse at the time of the creation of the trust, but there must not be uncertanty as to who is the beneficiary, whoever it may or shall be, whether he is in existence, or is to come into being at some future time. If there be a valuable consideration to support the trust, the Courts are solicitous to enforce it, to subserve the interest of the parties; but if the cestui que trust is not named, or so designated that he cannot be identified, the Courts are powerless to give effect to the trust, however clearly it may be created in other respects. Says the Court in Levy v. Levy, 33 N. Y. 97, 107:

> "If there be a single postulate of the common law, established by an unbroken line of decisions, it is, that a trust without a certain beneficiary who can claim its enforcement, is void, whether good or bad, wise or unwise."

On the other hand, it is not at all essential either that the beneficiaries of a charitable trust or use be ascertained, or any definite number thereof, for indefiniteness is said to be a characteristic of a legal charity (Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163), or capable of taking the legal title to the estate bestowed in trust. Says Mr. Beach:

> "In a private trust, if the beneficiary or beneficiaries are not definitely and positively named, the trust fails on account of indefiniteness. But in a charitable trust, the beneficiaries need not be definitely named, and even where there is no adequate designation of a cestue que trust, the trust will be enforced in equity if the intention of the settlor can be ascertained beyond a reasonable doubt."

Beach on Trusts and Trustees, §322.

See, further, §55 same work, and §§66, 95, Perry on Trusts.

For emphasis of the essentiality respecting certainty as to the beneficiary, I will make further reference to the authorities, and in doing so will cite from some of the jurisdictions which do not recognize the distinction noted between the two classes of trusts. The force of the authorities is not weakened because the distinction is not observed. In Weaver v. Spurr, 56 West Va. 95, 105, it is said:

> "There cannot be a trust without a cestui que trust; and if it cannot be ascertained who the cestui que trust is, it is the same thing as if there were none."

In an earlier case from the same State (Brown v. Caldwell, 23 W. Va. 187) a grant of land, upon trust that the trustee "shall at all times permit all the white religious societies of Christians and the members of such societies to use the land as a common burying-ground and for no other purpose," was held to be void for want of certainty as to the beneficiaries. Speaking of this alleged trust, the Court said:

> "It is difficult to conceive of anything more vague, indefinite and general in its character. The societies here designated are neither local nor fixed. They in fact embrace the whole Christian world, and are not only indefinite but unascertainable."

In Stonestreet v. Doyle, 75 Va. 356, a devise of land "to build a schoolhouse for the purpose of a free school, and further extending the education of poor children," was held inoperatvie and void for uncertainty as to the beneficiaries.

So it was held in Heiss, Executor, etc., v. Murphey et al., 40 Wis. 276, 292, that a devise "to the Roman Catholic oprhans," and empowering the Roman Catholic Bishop to sell the property and "use the proceeds for the benefit of the Roman Catholic orphans," was void for uncertainty in the description of the beneficiaries; the Court saying:

> "There are no ascertainable beneficiaries, either as a class or individuals, and therefore the trust cannot be effectually carried out."

A bequest as follows: "I leave the whole of said fund in the hands of my executor, to be by him applied to the support of missionaries in India," was held void in Board of Foreign Missions v. Mc-Master, Fed. Cas. No. 1586, because of uncertainty as to beneficiaries, the Court saying:

> "But whether there be a competent trustee or not, if the cestui que trusts are not clearly ascertained by the will, the devise or bequest is void."

So a bequest "to some disposition thereof which my executors may consider as promising most to benefit the town and trade of Alexandria, leaving the same entirely to their disposition of it, in such manner as appears to them promises to yield the greatest good," was held void in Wheeler v. Smith, 9 Howard, 55, the Court remarking, in the course of the opinion, that:

> "A trust is vested in the executors, but the beneficiaries of the trust are uncertain, and the mode of applying the bounty is indefinite."

Authorities are cited by counsel for interveners which are apparently oposed to the holding of these cases, but when examined with discrimination it will be found that they are not. Perin et al. v. Carey et al., 65 U. S. 465, and Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174, are fair illustrations of all. These two cases are based upon devises or bequests to charity, and it is a well-established principle of law that their validity is dependent upon the laws and the judicial interpretation thereof within the State; where the lands lie if real property be the subject, or where the testator had his domicile if personal property. And the Federal courts are controlled as well thereby. It was explicitly so held in the case last cited. That case arose in Georgia, and was declared to be subject to the laws of that State touching charitable uses, which are similar in purpose to the statute of 43 Elizabeth upon the subject. It is declared by such laws that "A Court of Chancery may, by approximation, effectuate the purpose (of the testator) in a manner most similar to that indicated by the testator." In a sense the cy pres doctrine is made to apply in such a case. The trust to charity was therefore sustained by reason of the controlling force of the local law. But in the case of Wheeler v. Smith, supra, coming from Virginia, where neither the statute of 43 Elizabeth nor any similar statute obtains, the cy pres doctrine was not applied, the Court saying that:

> "In Virginia, charitable bequests stand upon the same footing as other trusts, and consequently, require the same certainty as to the objects of the trust and the mode of its administration."

While in the case of Perin et al. v. Carey et al., supra, the State of Ohio being without a statute of charities, it was held that the courts of equity in that State had adopted the doctrine founded upon the statute of 43 Elizabeth, and that the doctrine was controlling, both locally and in the Federal courts. Such was the principle announced in the case of Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. 127.

It is a principle that in equity the absolute interest is vested in the cestui que trust, and the trustee is but an instrument for effectuating the trust, and, where executory, for carrying it into effect. Equity will not allow the trust to fail for want of a trustee. But if there is no cestui que trust susceptible of identification, the trust, other than for charity, is void absolutely, and equity is powerless to aid it in any way.

There is also a distinction between executed and executory trusts, but it does not consist in the fact that one is completely wound out and the other is in process of being carried into effect. It depends rather upon the manner in which the trust is declared. An executed trust is one wherein the limitations and conditions attending it are fully and perfectly declared. An executory trust is one where the limitations are imperfectly declared, the intent of the creator being expressed in general terms, leaving the manner in which his intent is to be carried into effect substantially in the discretion of the trustee. The distinction has been illustrated by the act of a testator, as follows: "Has the testator been what is called, and very properly called, his own conveyancer? Has he left it to the Court to make out from general expressions what his intention is, or has he so defined that intention that you have nothing to do but to take the limitations he has given to you and convert that into the legal estate?"

Nicoll v. Ogden et al, 29 Ill. 323, 385;

Neves v. Scott, 9 How. 196, 211.

When, therefore, counsel for cross-complainants urge that Congress has created an executory trust, with the railroad company as trustee, they must mean that there was left, through the want of precisely defined limitations, something of discretion in the trustee as to the manner in which the trust was to be carried into effect. If not this, it is perfectly plain that the actual settler is not vested with the equitable estate simply by the terms of the Act. If he were so vested, there would be nothing left for the trustee to do but to convey, on receipt of the $2.50 per acre, and that would be an executed trust. But even upon the theory of cross-complainants that the settler becomes a cestui que trust upon making settlement upon a tract of 160 acres of land and the tender of the price, there would be nothing left for the trustee to do but to convey the land. The trust would then be an executed one, and not executory. The question as to the nature of the trust, if one exists, is not material, but the discussion of it will serve to illumine the primary question touching the intendment of the Settlers' Clause. If there is nothing of a discretionary character for the railroad company to do in the disposal of these lands, nothing to settle as to when it shall convey, or when or in what manner it will convey, or for what price, the Act or grant executes itself, and the company is but an automaton, with nothing to do but to convey to actual settlers, whoever they may be, which would constitute a mere passive or dry trust, were it not that the trustee has a beneficial interest in the property.

Now, there is in this case no semblance of a charitable trust—not the remotest purpose manifest of bestowing any charitable gift or devise. Indeed the "actual settlers" designated can claim nothing, nor any particular tract of the grant, as a charity. Nor do I understand that they found their demand upon any such claim. They are standing on the law as creating a trust, with themselves as beneficiaries. Could it be more uncertain who it was intended the beneficiaries were to be, pursuing the theory that the grant created a trust? True, actual settlers may be termed a class of individuals who have set up and established homes upon specific tracts of land; but this is a very large class, and the term is very broad. The bounty, however, is not to the class as a whole, but to such actual settlers as may establish themselves upon some tract of this grant not exceeding 160 acres in area. There could be no actual settler until an actual habitation was established upon some specific parcel of this land. Logically, no one is a cestui que trust under the theory until and unless he becomes such a settler. This is a palpable demonstration of the uncertainty as to the beneficiary, for who, of the vast concourse of humanity, is going to come and claim the right and privilege of settling upon the land? Beyond this, the nature and quantity of interest is not specific or definite. The declaration of the law is—I call it a law because it is to be construed as a law as well as a grant or contract—that the grantee shall sell in quantities not greater than one quarter-section to one person. If this be a maximum limitation, it is surely not a minimum limitation, and the grantee might sell to one purchaser less than one quarter-section and be within the law; and so there is palpable uncertainty as to the amount of land each settler is entitled to demand under the supposed trust, he being the cestui que trust. It is clear to my mind that the theory of a trust must fail, because of uncertainty in these particulars, namely, as to the cestui que trust, and as to the quantity of interest he is entitled to receive.

Looking at the matter in all its phases, the Act lacks the elements of a trust whereby the railroad company is constituted a trustee for the administration of the granted lands, in any specific quantities, for the benefit or use of any definite or certain beneficiaries.

In arriving at this conclusion, I have not overlooked the cases, such as Rice v. Railroad Company, 1 Black 358; Mills County v. Railroad Companies, 107 U. S. 557; United States v. Des Moines, etc., Co., 142 U. S. 527, and Ashuelot Nat. Bank v. City of Keene, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.), 758, cited and relied upon by counsel for cross-complainants.

The Rice case was concerning a grant of land to the Territory of Minnesota to aid in the construction of a railroad, and it was held that the territory took the land in trust, without any beneficial interest therein, for disposal, and application of the proceeds to a specified public improvement. There was no cestui que trust, and none could enforce the trust except the general Government, being the grantor.

The Mills County case involved the construction of the proviso to the second section of the Swamp Land Act of September 28, 1850, requiring that the proceeds of the lands shall be applied exclusively, as far as necessary, to the purpose of reclaiming the same by levees and drains, and it was held that it imposed an obligation resting upon the good faith of the states. The State of Iowa granted its swamp-lands to the respective counties in which they were situated. A conflicting claim arose between Mills County and the B. & M. R. R. Co. In the litigation Mills County insisted that the lands in suit had been disposed of by the State contrary to the proviso above alluded to, and it was not only considered that the State was accorded a discretion as to the manner of disposal of such lands, but it was further determined that as to whether the State had faithfully performed its duty under the Act of Congress in the disposal of its swamp-lands to the counties was a question between the United States and the State and that the obligation imposed constituted neither a trust following the lands, nor a duty which private parties could enforce as against the State.

In the case of United States v. Des Moines, etc., Co., there was a grant to the Territory of Iowa, to aid in the improvement of the Des Moines River, and while the grant was not declared by the Court to be a trust, it was so treated; the territory, afterward the State of Iowa, becoming the trustee to see that the purposes of the grant were properly executed. No cestui que trust was intended, but the grant was to the territory, to be appropriated by it to the promotion of a specific improvement.

In Ashuelot Nat. Bank v. City of Keene, the Court construed the deed, with its accompanying contract, as a grant in trust rather than upon condition, considering all the terms of both instruments, in view of the circumstances under which they were executed. The transaction was, in effect, a conveyance for a charitable use. The city took no beneficial interest in the property, but took it upon trust, to devote the same to public use. The action was not by one claiming as a cestui que trust, but by the heirs of the grantor.

So it would seem that these authorities do not support the contention claimed for them.

This brings us to the contention made on the part of the intervenors, which is, that the grant is both a law and a contract—a contract as well as a law; that being such, there is a standing and continuing offer, to which the grantee is a party, to whomsoever may desire to become an actual settler and to purchase a tract of the granted lands not exceeding 160 acres; and that any such person, by a declaration of his purpose and a tender of the purchase price, namely $2.50 per acre, brings himself into relation to the contract, thus making himself a party thereto, and is entitled to the rights of a contracting party to enforce a conveyance to him from the grantee.

In this connection, it is strenuously urged that, by declaring his purpose to become an actual settler and tendering the purchase price, the intending purchaser acquires a vested right in the property, which not only the grantee but the Government also is bound to regard, and of which he can not be divested without his consent, thus entitling him in due course to a proper conveyance. This position is based upon a supposed analogy to the acquirement of vested rights against the Government by pursuing the acts and regulations established for the acquirement of pre-emption and homestead claims to tracts of the public domain. It is therefore well to determine first whether the analogy exists, and, second, whether a vested right can be acquired in some other way.

It is well settled, by a uniform line of decisions, that a settler under the pre-emption statutes of Congress does not acquire a vested right as against the general Government to appropriate the lands for other purposes, until he has done all that the law requires him to do, including the payment of the purchase money, to entitle him to a patent. When he has performed all these acts, observed all the requirements of the law, and nothing remains to perfect his title but the issuance of a patent, he becomes the equitable owner of the land settled upon, and, being the equitable owner, he is said to have acquired a vested right, of which he can not be divested even by the Government, much less by private parties in any capacity. One of the earlier cases upon the subject is Frisbie v. Whitney, 9 Wall. 187. It arose in the following manner: Certain supposed grants by the Mexican Government to one Vallejo, comprising a large tract of land in the State of California, were declared void by the Supreme Court. The land thereupon became public domain of the United States. Many persons were at the time occupants of the land, claiming right and title through Vallejo. In order to protect these occupants, Congress, on March 3, 1863, passed an Act for their benefit. Frisbie was an occupant and claimant under this Act. Whitney attempted to enter upon the same land, and claimed settlement thereon. This was prior to the Act of 1863. After his settlement he tendered to the land officers his declaration of intention to occupy and cultivate the land as a pre-emptioner, but was refused. The judgment of the Court followed on these facts, Whitney claiming that he had thus acquired such a right or interest in the land as could not be divested by the Government. After reference to the requirements of the pre-emption acts for acquiring public lands, the Court said:

> "When all these prerequisites are complied with, and the claimant has paid the price of the land, he is entitled to a certificate of entry from the register and receiver; and after a reasonable time, to enable the land officer to ascertain if there are superior claims, and if in other respects the claimant has made out his case, he is entitled to receive a patent, which for the first time invests him with the legal title to the land."

The Court quotes as authoritative, and with approval, the opinion of Attorney General Bates on the subject, as follows:

> "A mere entry upon land, with continued occupancy and improvement thereof, gives no vested interest in it. It may, however, give, under our National land system, a privilege of pre-emption. But this is only a privilege conferred on the settler to purchase land in preference to others. * * * His settlement protects him from intrusion or purchase by others, but confers no right against the Government."
> 10 Opinions of the Attorney General, 57.

The next case following Frisbie v. Whitney is The Yosemite Valley case, 15 Wall. 77. Mr. Justice Field, speaking of the requirements necessary to the acquirement of title under the pre-emption laws, at page 87, says:

> "When these prerequisites (including the payment of the purchase price) have been complied with, the settler for the first time acquires a vested interest in the premises occupied by him, of which he can not be subsequently deprived. * * * The United States by those acts enter into no contract with the settler, and incur no obligation to any one that the land occupied by him shall ever be put up for sale. They simply declare that in case any of their lands are thrown open for sale the privilege to purchase them in limited quantities, at fixed prices, shall be first given to parties who have settled upon and improved them. The legislation thus adopted for the benefit of settlers was not intended to deprive Congress of the power to make any other disposition of the lands before they are offered for sale, or to appropriate them to any public use."

Without following the line of authorities further, it is sufficient to say that the doctrine has since been several times reaffirmed.

> Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330;
> Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513;
> Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118.

This as between the settler and the Government.

As it relates to grants in aid of railroads and for internal improvements, there are numerous decisions determining when a pre-emption or homestead claim attaches, or at what period of time in the acquirement of such a claim the land has become appropriated, having in view the language of each particular Act, denoting the exceptions from the grants. Thus in Kansas Pacific Railway Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, it was held that the claim of homestead had attached when a homestead entry was made upon the land, and, having been made prior to the filing on the part of the railway company of its map of definite location, the land covered was excepted from the grant by the words "Not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States, and to which a pre-emption or homestead claim may not have attached."

A like ruling was had in Hastings, etc., Railroad Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, where the exception was of lands to which "the right of pre-emption or homestead settlement has attached." What is meant by a homestead entry is there explained. It is not a simple entering into possession or occupation of the land, but three things must concur to constitute an entry on public lands: First, the applicant must make an affidavit setting forth the facts which entitle him to make such an entry; second, he must make a formal application; and, third, he must make payment of the money required. "When," says the Court, "these three requisites are complied with, and the certificate of entry is executed and delivered to him, the entry is made—the land is entered." (12 St. 392.)

In Maddox v. Burnham, 156 U. S. 544, it was held that the mere occupation of public land, with a purpose at some subsequent time of entering it for a homestead, gave the party so occupying no rights against the railway company.

It is true that a man refused his right of entry by the officers of the local land office will not be deprived thereby of his priority in right. Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537. But the principle has no bearing upon the question as to what constitutes a valid homestead entry.

In Northern Pacific Railroad v. Colburn, 164 U. S. 383, 386, the Court says:

> "But frequent decisions of this Court have been to the effect that no pre-emption or homestead claim attaches to a tract until an entry in the local land office."

And further, quoting from Lansdale V. Daniels, 100 U. S. 113, 116:

> "Such a notice of claim or declaratory statement is indispensably necessary to give the claimant any standing as a pre-emptor, the rule being that his settlement alone is not sufficient for that purpose."

In Tarpey v. Madsen, 178 U. S. 215, 225, it was added:

> "And the acceptance of such declaratory statement, and noting the same on the books of the local land office, is the official recognition of the pre-emption claim."

So that it was finally adjudged that the question whether a homestead or pre-emption had attached as it respects the filing of a map of definite location must depend upon the record in the land office.

In line with the foregoing decisions, this Court has held (Eastern Oregon Land Co. v. Brosnan, 147 Fed. 807), that a mere settler, who had made no filing on the land under the land laws, was not an appropriator within the exception of the grant, but that where such a settler was in occupancy under a pre-emption or homestead claim duly filed, there was an "appropriation."

These authorities illustrate and determine the point of time when rights are acquired by settlers, that give them superiority over grants made in aid of railroads and internal improvements, under the usual exceptions from the grants. Whenever it occurs that there has been an entry of a homestead, or a proper notation in the land office of a pre-emption application, so that there appears a record of the initiatory steps to obtain such a claim, then it may properly be said that the claimant acquires a vested right as against the person or corporation claiming under such grants, but not until then.

So much for vested rights in this relation.

As between contesting claimants of homestead or pre-emption rights, a still different rule obtains. The first in occupancy of the land, with a bona fide intention or purpose of appropriating the same under the laws and regulations providing therefor, has the better and superior right. As was said in Atherton v. Fowler, supra:

> "During this preliminary period he had no vested right to the land; but, as we have elsewhere decided, he did thus acquire the right of preference in the purchase. That is to say, if he made the necessary settlement and improvement, and the necessary declaration in writing, no other person could buy the land until the period elapsed which the law gave him to pay the purchase-money."

And again in Tarpey v. Madsen, supra:

> "So that any controversy between two occupants of a tract open to pre-emption and homestead entry is not determined by the mere time of the filing of the respective claims in the land office, but by the fact of prior occupancy."

In a sense the prior occupant has a vested right, but only as against another claiming under the same statutes. And so "vested right" is a relative term, depending for its acquirement upon the particular claim that is put forth.

I have thus developed the subject for present application, but before coming to that, it will be instructive to examine another case confidently relied upon by counsel for interveners. It is Jumbo Cattle Co. v. Bacon, 17 S. W. 136. A statute of Texas, with its amendment, provided for the sale of State lands at fifty cents per acre to any responsible person who would make application therefor and survey the same. In pursuance thereof, parties made regular application to purchase certain State lands, caused survey to be made, paid the fees therefor, together with the fees for recording, and tendered the purchase price. Under this state of facts, it was determined that the applicants acquired a vested right in the land, and that their interest thus acquired was not affected by a subsequent act repealing the statute under which the applicants proceeded. In the course of the decision the Court said:

> "When there is an offer made by the Act of the Legislature, which is accepted by an individual, there is a contract which it is not within the power of the State to impair. * * * The expenses of the surveys, in connection with the price to be paid to perfect the title, are sufficient consideration to support the contract."

This case is truly illustrative. There must be an offer to sell on some terms, and there must be an acceptance of the offer on the terms proposed, before there can be a meeting of minds, or any contractual relations can arise. The Government has granted certain lands to the railroad company under a provision that the grantee shall sell to "actual settlers." The grant, however, is not accompanied by an offer to sell. Surely the Government makes no such offer. Being a law as well as a grant, the act directs that the grantee shall sell. But suppose the grantee refuses to obey the law, is there, notwithstanding, an offer on its part to sell? Does the law make the offer for it? There might perhaps have been some grounds for so holding if the railroad company had been accorded no discretion in the matter, and was simply required to perform a mere ministerial service in executing deeds to such actual settlers as should come and pay it the maximum price of $2.50 per acre. But it has a discretion. It may sell in less than 160 acre tracts and for less than $2.50 per acre. So who shall say that, by reason of the law alone, it has offered to sell in tracts of 160 acres, and for $2.50 per acre, so that any actual settler may purchase upon those terms. It has the right to sell upon those terms, but the law does not make any such offer for it. While the Act is a law unto the grantee, it binds no one else. It is not an offer to sell to actual settlers. The general Government withdrew these lands from the public domain, and from sale and settlement, under its administration, when it made the grant. Prior thereto the Government's offer of sale was through the pre-emption, homestead, and other acts providing for the disposal of the public domain. No party could acquire any vested right as against the Government, or as against railroad or other grantees, under exceptions favoring the settler, or as against adverse claimants, without a compliance with the acts and under the rules and regulations of the Land Department. The acts for the disposal of the public domain constitute standing offers of sale upon the terms designated, to any who are disposed to accept them and qualify themselves to become purchasers. But the acceptance consists in acceding to the terms of the offer, and no vested right can arise except by a compliance with the terms laid down.

For the due and orderly administration of the disposal of the public lands, through the pre-emption, homestead, and other acts according the privilege and right of purchase, regulations are established by the Land Department, and a code of rules adopted under authority of Congress, until a complete and thorough system of administration and judicatory has been established, by which to serve the demands of purchasers and claimants, and to determine and settle adverse interests as they arise. Experience has demonstrated the necessity for such a system of administration to subserve and preserve the interests and rights of purchasers. By the grant in question Congress has withdrawn a considerable body of the public domain from sale and disposal by the Government, so that those lands are no longer offered under the pre-emption, homestead, or any other law of Congress unless it be under the Act making the grant. But the grant, as we shall presently see, is one conveying title, so that the Government is without further right or power of disposal. Congress has not attempted to regulate the sale of this large body of land in any way, but has simply declared that the grantee shall sell to "actual settlers." Having thus withdrawn these lands from the public domain, and from sale and disposal through the Land Department, and having granted them to the railroad company with a bare declaration that the grantee shall so sell the lands, without attempting in any way to prescribe the manner of sale, or to provide rules or regulations for the administration of the disposition of the grant, seems to me plainly to evidence an intendment that the grantee should itself administer the disposal of the grant, and should proceed about it in its own way and manner. As previously observed, a command to the company that it shall sell, or even an agreement to sell by the company with the Government, cannot be construed in any way as an offer to third parties to sell. A breach of the law or obligation would entail its penalties as per the intendment of the law or contract, but the grantee would incur no liability to a person not a party to the compact.

It has been held that, where one party has paid money to another for the benefit of a third, or has paid a consideration for which a third party was to receive some benefit, the third party has a right of action directly against the party receiving the money or consideration. That rule can have no application here, because, if for no other reason, it is not known who the third party is. The land is to be disposed of to no specific person, but to actual settlers, in quantities not greater than 160 acres to each person—a great class of persons —and it was not intended that the bounty should be distributed among the entire class; no single third party can come forward and demand any specific tract of land from the company. This demonstrates the difficulty of selling to actual settlers without the adoption of some rule or regulation for determining who are actual settlers, and to test their good faith. In fact, in the administration of the sale of this grant, the grantee is given considerable discretion. It may require actual settlement upon the tract selected, it may require reasonable improvements; and it may require residence for a reasonable time to insure good faith. It might regulate the payments, requiring cash in hand, or deferred payments; it might regulate the quantity of land to be sold to each person, not exceeding 160 acres to any one person; and it might regulate the price, not to exceed $2.50 per acre. Indeed, it has a reasonable discretion as to when it shall open up the lands to occupancy and settlement, so that the lands may be disposed of to its advantage, as well as to the advantage of the settlers. How can it be said, then, that Congress has made the offer of sale, to which the grantee has acceded, and therefore that any one, coming forward asserting himself as intending actual settlement, and tendering the price, concludes a bargain with the grantee for the purchase of 160 acres of land? Such was not the intendment or purpose of Congress, and such is not the effect of the grant. Nor is the person claiming to be a settler, who has gone upon the land and is in occupancy of the tract selected, in any better position. There can be no purchase, either by right of settlement or otherwise, until the grantee or its successor has offered the lands for settlement and sale.

It is hardly to be questioned that the Act of 1866 in its original cast contemplated a granting to the railroad company designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, of the entire fee to these lands, accompanied with only two conditions, namely, that assent to the act should be filed with the Secretary of the Interior within one year from its passage, and that the road should be completed within the time designated in section six.

There were to be no other limitations of the estate in any way, and if the conditions mentioned were complied with, the railroad company would be vested absolutely with an unconditional title. This it could sell or dispose of as it saw fit, and in any way or manner that might seem best for its individual purposes. As the clause limiting sales to 160 acres to one person, etc., was not then in the minds of Congress, the intendment of the original act, of course, could not have been the same as with the amendment added. Amendments change intendment. That is the very purpose for which they are made—to give new or modified expression to the will and purpose of the Legislature. Amendments are not only effective for adding a new purpose to the old Act, but they may reach back and give new cast and intendment as well. The amendments becoming part of the Act itself, the whole must be construed together, as the original Act would have been construed as one, harmonizing any seeming repugnance or incongruity, if possible, and so expounding as to give effect to every part. Logically, therefore, the intendment of the entire Act as amended would differ from the original just so much as it was the legislative purpose to change it.

It is earnestly and stoutly urged that, as the lands were granted avowedly for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the railroad, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, munitions of war, etc., and it being specifically directed that such lands should be applied to the building of the road, the primary and paramount purpose of the grant was the construction of the road and telegraph line, and that th sale of the lands to settlers was meant to be secondary subordinate and subservient thereto. The lands them selves could not well aid in the construction, or be ap plied to the building, unless they could be disposed of o mortgaged, and the proceeds arising therefrom put t use in meeting the expense incident to such constructio or building. Therefore, it is argued that there was con ferred along with the grant the implied authority to se the granted lands, or any portion thereof, and the righ to mortgage the fee thereof for the purpose of obtai ing the means with which to carry on the work, and tha the provision relating to the sale of the lands to settler being subservient to the paramount purpose, was in tended as a directive regulation only, and not bindin upon the company either as a covenant or a conditio Reliance is placed upon Platt v. Union Pacific R. R. Co

99 U. S. 48, in support of this position. This case wa concerning the Union Pacific grant, made by Act o Congress of July 1, 1862, as amended by Act of July 1864. The grant there, as here, was for the purpose o aiding in the construction of a railroad, etc., but it con tained a provision that "All such lands so granted *
* which shall not be sold or disposed of by said com pany within three years after the entire road shall ha been completed, shall be subject to settlement and pr emption like other lands, at a price not exceeding $1.2 per acre to be paid to said company." The seventh se tion of the Act required the road to be completed b the first day of July, 1874. The road was so complete and patents to all the lands granted were directed to be issued to the company in November of that year. Long prior thereto, however, to wit, on April 16, 1867, the company executed a mortgage hypothecating all the lands granted to secure the payment of certain coupon bonds amounting to $10,400,000. The plaintiff in said cause filed his declaratory statement upon a quarter-section of the land as a pre-emptor, September 21, 1878, more than three years after the completion of the entire road, made proper proofs and tendered the purchase money, and the question presented for consideration was, whether he was entitled to such quarter-section as against the railroad company. The question turned upon the single inquiry whether the execution of the mortgage was a disposal of the land, and it was decided that it was, so that the quarter-section in question was not subject to pre-emption at the time of filing plaintiff's declaration thereon. On the argument, it seems to have been urged that the interpretation given by the Court to the words "sold and disposed of" was repugnant to the governmental policy of guarding against monopolies of public lands by single holdings. Answering this, it was conceded by the Court that Congress even then had that policy in view, when it declared that the lands not sold or disposed of within three years after the road was completed should be subject to settlement, but it was said that such policy "was manifestly subordinated to the higher object of having the road constructed, and constructed with the aid of the land grant." All this in support of the Court's position that a mortgaging of the lands was tantamount to a disposal thereof, and that this particular quarter-section had been disposed of within the intendment of the grant at the time it was attempted to pre-empt it. That is to say, the paramount object of Congress being to secure a construction of the road, it was rather to be assumed that it intended to permit the granted lands to be disposed of by mortgage, thereby providing the necessary funds for construction. There was no intimation that the clause providing for settlement and pre-emption was inoperative in any way as to any lands that might remain unsold or undisposed of for three years after the road was completed. Quite contrary was the conviction of the Court, for it declares that:

> "The construction gives full effect alike to the paramount and the subordinate purposes of the Act."

The grant, without words of restriction or limitation of title, would unquestionably authorize the grantee to sell, mortgage, or otherwise dispose of lands comprised thereby, as it might see fit, for a person is entitled to do as he pleases with his own, so that he does no wanton injury to another. But if the grant does carry with it a restriction or limitation, then it must needs be given effect accordingly. Such must have been the view of the Court in the Platt case, for it says, in further argument in support of its position as to the significance of the words "disposed of": which the company might sell to single associations, or single persons. It was left at liberty to sell, if it could, to any land association or private purchaser, the entire body of the lands or any lesser quantity, regardless of the general legislative policy. * * * With that power no pre-emptor was authorized to interfere." That is, if sold at any time within three years after the entire road was completed.

It is quite probable that the paramount purpose of Congress in making the grant in question was to secure the construction of the road, and we might well let it be so conceded. It by no means follows, however, that that purpose has rendered inoperative and nugatory for any effective use any succeeding clause in the Act, or that it renders any the less effective any limitation that may have been reserved as to title, or any restriction that may have been imposed as to sale of the lands. That the grant was in aid of the road, and to be applied to the construction thereof, does not argue that the lands were to pass in absolute fee simple, with no restriction or limitation. If Congress had so desired, it could have granted but half the amount of lands that it did, or could have granted the even sections instead of the odd, or could have withheld any indemnity for lands previously settled upon, or otherwise disposed of. It might have granted an estate for years only in the lands, or the timber thereon, reserving the lands, as it did in fact reserve the mineral lands. And so, without question, it might have made the grant upon any valid condition that it desired to annex, be it precedent or subsequent, and yet the estate, whatsoever it was that was in reality granted, would go in aid of construction, and the grantee would be bound so to apply it. It would simply have to deal with the estate, whatever its quality or quantity, that it had been given for raising funds with which to meet the expenses of building. So the fact that lands were granted in aid of construction, and were required to be applied in building the road, is not antagonistic to the idea of a condition subsequent attending the grant, if such was the purpose of Congress. Manifestly the fee simple absolute would have been a more valuable and available asset, but if Congress did not choose to grant such a bounty, believing that the lesser estate would be adequate for the purpose, that would end the controversy, and it is sufficient to find out the intendment of Congress in that relation.

In this connection, it should be noted that Congress fixed the price of Government lands lying within the limits of the grant, being the even numbered sections, at double the minimum price of public lands outside, and reduced the quantity of land to which the homestead settler was entitled to eighty acres. The Act of thus regulating the price of Government lands within the railroad limits was an incentive and inducement to the company to dispose of its lands to settlers also, and was in harmony with the provision later annexed by amendment requiring it to sell to actual settlers only, at a price not to exceed double the minimum namely, $2.50 per acre, while it was left at liberty to sell for less if at any time it so desired. Without the amendment, however, and whatever may be its effect, the company was not restricted in any way as to the manner of its disposal of the grant. But the intendment of an amended Act may be very different, as I have previously observed, from that which signalized the original.

It is worthy of remark in passing that the Government not only granted the lands, but gave the right of way over such of the public lands as the road might pass through, together with all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine shops, switches, etc., and so much of the timber on mineral lands as should be required to construct the road over said lands—not an inconsiderable bounty—and all in aid as well of the construction of the road and telegraph line.

The Government was to receive a consideration for its grant, namely the transportation of its mails, troops, munitions of war, etc. This in a purely private grant, where technical words appropriate to the creation of a condition subsequent are wanting, would evidence an intendment not to create such a condition. But where technical words are in fact employed, and the grant is by the Government, being public in nature, other considerations apply, and these facts should be taken into account, along with all other matters attending the adoption of the Act, in endeavoring to ascertain the intendment of Congress.

Patents were to be issued as the road was completed, section by section of twenty miles each, for the lands granted to the extent of and coterminous with the completed sections. This was another incident of the grant. The patents became simply evidentiary of title, while they operated as further assurances thereof. The grant, that is, the Act of Congress making it, yet remained the railroad company's primary and essential muniment of title, to which reference should always be had for the quantity and quality of the estate granted and the terms and conditions attending it. The provisions for patenting the grant are usual to most grants in aid of railroad construction, and throw no particular light upon the purpose of Congress in limiting the sale to settlers only.

Congress reserved the right and authority to enter into possession of the road in case the railroad company should fail at any time to keep the same in repair and fit for use, and, after assuming control, to repair it as needed. To meet the expenses thereof, it was empowered to devote the income of the road thereto, or it might fix pecuniary responsibility not to exceed the value of the lands granted. The purpose of this provision is plain. It was to insure the up-keep of the road, so that its use would be at all times available to the United States for the transportation of mails and troops, munitions of war, etc. This enhances the consideration which the Government received, and is continuously to receive for its bounty, and speaks favorably of an intendment to grant an absolute title, for the larger the consideration the greater one would assume would be the value of the thing given for it.

The requirement to operate the road throughout its two divisions without discrimination as to rates and time of service was simply meant to afford compensation, either to the Government or to the public for any damages sustained in this relation, and has no particular bearing upon the question in hand.

It was further required that the company should file its assent within one year, and complete the first section of twenty miles within two years (extended by the amendment of June 25, 1868, to eighteen months after the passage of that Act), completing the entire road on or before July 1, 1875 (extended by the amendment to July 1, 1880). These were conditions subsequent, rendering the Act null and void in case of failure to comply with the requirements, and subjecting the grant to reversion to the Government.

It is argued with much force that, having made such specific provisions for a forfeiture of the lands for non-observance of these provisions, Congress, if intending to annex a condition subsequent by the provisions of the amendment of April 10, 1869, under consideration, would have been equally specific in language, so that there would be no doubt as to its real purpose. To this argument, there are reasons contra. The amendment was adopted at another and a later session of Congress, when Congress was addressing itself specifically to the one object, while reviving the grant, that of devoting the lands ultimately to use and acquirement by actual settlers.

The provision contained in the amendment of April 10, 1869, that nothing therein should impair any rights previously acquired by any railroad company under the original Act, has been commented upon sufficiently heretofore, and its purpose expounded.

This epitome of the provisions of the Act of 1866, with its amendments, will suffice for inference and deduction as it respects the intendment of Congress in annexing the Actual Settlers' Clause.

At the time of the adoption of the Actual Settlers' Clause as an amendment, it was, as we have seen, the firm policy of Congress to dispose of its public lands to settlers, while as yet it had not entirely abandoned the policy of making donations in the way of grants to railroads. The purpose of Congress in requiring railroad grants as well as the public domain to be disposed of to actual settlers, is aptly and strongly emphasized by the clause under consideration; and can any one doubt that it designed to make its edict in that behalf effective? The debates in Congress while a like proviso was earlier under consideration show unmistakably what the individual members thought of it, and the course the legislation took, to my mind, indicates quite as clearly the intendment of Congress itself. It will be recalled that Mr. Lawrence, in moving an amendment to the Denver-Pacific Railroad bill, which is in effect the same as the one under consideration, in connection therewith proposed further that the Secretary of the Interior be authorized to prescribe rules for carrying the enactment into effect, while Mr. Logan purposed making the lands subject to entry at the Government Land Office, the price thereof at the rate of $2.50 per acre, to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as a sinking fund for the redemption or purchase of the bonds of the company, so far as it was adequate. Congress, however, declined to incorporate either of these ideas into its legislation, but did adopt the Julian amendment in their stead; and this identical amendment was later incorporated in the Act of July 25, 1866. The result was that the grantee company was liberated of all governmental control over the administration of the grant, and was left free to dispose of the lands in its own way, in pursuance of the terms of the amendment. This fact rather emphasizes than detracts from the obligation of the company to observe the letter of the law, and is in disparagement of the idea that it was to exercise a discretion only in the premises. It may have been, and presumably Congress was influenced by the thought, that the company had the discretion to dispose of these lands in less quantities than 160 acres, and at a price less than $2.50 per acre, if it should so desire. However this may be, the effect was to give such a discretion in that way. This was an advantage to the company, for it operated to enable it to dispose of the grant more expeditiously. Along with this idea was another operating to the benefit of the railroad company. Congress, while pursuing its policy of disposing of the public domain to settlers, increased the price under pre-emption, and decreased the amount by half that the homesteader was entitled to take, thus conceding to the company equal advantage with the Government, and even the privilege of underselling it. The legislation was, however, not without benefit to the Government also, for it was assumed that the construction of the road would open up the lands to settlement and occupation along its course, through the increased facilities for transportation that would thus be afforded. It is quite contrary to the purpose of both Congress and the company itself to say that actual settlement was not in contemplation of the parties. While a considerable portion of the Willamette Valley was then occupied by early settlers under the old Donation Act, yet it was with keenest anticipation of the settlement and upbuilding of the territory along the line that the road was authorized and constructed. Mr. Julian's words were strongly expressive of the purpose of the amendment, as well as of the expectation of those concerned, when he said:

> "This will avoid complete monopoly of the lands, as sanctioned by the old system of land grants, and at the same time devote to settlement and tillage the odd numbered sections granted, while creating in this way established communities and a local business along the line of the road."

The amendment was in its nature a revival of the grant, Congress and the promoters of the company both believing that the grant had lapsed; and as the original grant was of the fee, the revival was effective to restore it in fee, but with the provisions in question subjoined. This argues with conclusive force against the idea of a trust. Congress did not take the lands back and regrant them, but in effect revived the old grant with limitations. So that, taking into consideration the course of the legislation resulting in the adoption of this amendment, and viewing it in the light of contemporaneous conditions, it would seem that it was the firm purpose of Congress to impose upon the grantee a positive and mandatory obligation and duty to observe the behests of the amendment.

The amendment contains apt words of a condition subsequent, namely, "Provided that" and "only." It does not contain a clause of re-entry. It is quite sufficient, as we have seen, if it contains the one without the other, if from the entire Act the intendment to create a condition subsequent nevertheless appears. Indeed, neither words of condition nor a clause of re-entry is indispensable to the creation of a condition subsequent. It is yet sufficient if it otherwise appears that such was the purpose of Congress. In this relation, the Act is to be construed as a law, which is the voice of command, not of privilege or discretion, and the grant itself is to be construed most strongly against the grantee and in favor of the Government. The grant is a private one, and not by nature general and public, and the limitation placed upon the sale of the lands is in no way repugnant to the grant. These matters are to be considered along with all the provisions of the original act, as well as of the amendments, the analysis of which as it relates to the question in hand I have given. And upon the whole, giving efficacy to all the provisions of the grant, I conclude that the amendment in question imposed thereon a condition subsequent, for a breach of which on the part of the grantee company the lands would be subject to forfeiture to the United States. See Nicholas v. Southern Oregon Co., supra, and Warrior River Coal & Land Co. v. Alabama State Land Co., supra.

Further than this, either this provision is purely a covenant, or, as is contended by defendants' counsel, a mere directive regulative covenant carrying with it no duty or obligation on the part of the grantee to do what the terms of the grant or the law, or the contract if so termed, plainly declares it shall do, depending entirely upon its own volition, and discretion, or it is something more. As a covenant purely, the Government has no such interest therein as will afford it any relief whatsoever, as it could lose nothing by maladministration of the grant. Was such the intendment of Congress, that the Government should thus be left remediless, no matter how flagrant might be the violation of the terms of the provision? If so, the proviso might just as well have been omitted in toto, as it is thus rendered a dead letter, without force or effect, and with scarcely a purpose or design. It means nothing, and requires or compels nothing. In the case of Mills County v. Railroad Companies, supra, it is true the Supreme Court held, with relation to the swamp-land grant as extended to the State of Iowa, that it imposed an obligation and discretion, resting in the good faith of the State, as respects the application of such lands for the purposes designated in the grant. That, however, was a grant to the State, which had a purely public interest to subserve. I have been referred to no case where a purely private grant has been so construed, although in aid of the construction and maintenance of a public utility.

It is highly reasonable that Congress intended no such idle ceremony. Rather should we suppose that the proviso, annexed by specific amendment as it was, was designated to be a positive, efficient, and living condition, to be faithfully and punctiliously observed, with substantial and remedial consequences to follow a deliberate and wilful infraction thereof. This could only be, as the provision does not create a trust, by entailing forfeiture for the infraction. I am not making this deduction ab inconvenienti, but because it is impossible to believe that Congress intended anything else. Leaving itself remediless upon the hypothesis of a covenant, it must have intended that the general Government should have right of enforcement for non-compliance with the law by forfeiture of the grant.

It was the intendment of Congress that the railroad company should administer the grant in its own way, but that it should sell to actual settlers in quantities not greater than 160 acres to any one purchaser, and at a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre. It could sell in less quantities, and for a less price. The mandate of the law is that the "lands granted * * * shall be sold." This imposed upon the grantee the obligation to dispose of the lands, for it was the purpose that all the lands along the line of the road, both the granted lands and the public domain, should be opened to occupancy and settlement. Senator Williams and others were of the view, as it respects the West Side, that "The lands granted are as open under the provisions of this bill to actual settlers as they are under the pre-emption laws of the country." While Senator Vickers maintained that the grant "was expressly upon the condition that the lands are to be sold to actual settlers."

I am of the opinion, however, while it was designed that the lands covered by the grant should be opened to settlement, and this was made incumbent and compulsory upon the railroad company, that until it was done and the company offered the lands for sale, no one could acquire any vested right therein, because, as I believe, the administration of the grant in disposing of it to settlers was reposed wholly in the railroad company. No time is named when the lands shall be sold, but this does not detract from the obligation to sell—to put the land upon the market. The company was required to enter upon its administration of the grant under the Act within a reasonable time, taking into consideration the attending circumstances and conditions, and for a violation of duty in this regard the grant would be subject to forfeiture. Possibly the company could mortgage the grant in its entirety, but it would necessarily be subject to the condition subsequent attending it, and the mortgagee could acquire no greater interest.

These considerations render it unnecessary to consider further the defendants' eighth point of contention.

As it pertains to the West Side grant, or that of

May 4, 1870, while the provision relating to actual settlers does not contain the same words indicative of a condition subsequent as the amendment to the East Side Grant, the provisions of section five show very clearly the purpose of Congress. A sinking fund was there provided for, to consist of the net proceeds of the sales of the granted lands, which were to be set apart and appropriated, through a mortgage or deed of trust to two or more trustees, for the purchase from time to time, and the redemption at maturity, of the first mortgage construction bonds of the company, on the road, depots, stations, side-tracks, and wood-yards, not exceeding $30,000 per mile of road, payable in gold coin not longer than thirty years from date; and it was declared that no part of such fund should be applied to any other use until all of such bonds were purchased or redeemed and canceled. Thus it was contemplated that the lands were not to be hypothecated, with the road and its equipment, for raising funds generally, but were to be disposed of under the provisions of the Settlers' Clause, the proceeds thereof going into the sinking fund, to be disposed of as above indicated. In this way, and in this way only, the lands were to be used in aid of the construction of the railroad and telegraph line. As Senator Williams said in the Senate: "The entire object of this section is to make the grant insure the purpose contemplated by the bill, that is, to aid in the construction of the road, providing that the net proceeds of the land granted shall be invested and set apart to secure the bondholders who may advance money for its construction." This does not comport with the idea that the grant was of the entire fee, without condition, entitling the company to sell at any price, and to receive the proceeds to its own use, whether above or below the price fixed by the Act. It does not, therefore, seem reasonable that Congress designed that these provisions should be merely directive and regulative, to be observed or not within the discretion of the grantee.

Under the theory of counsel for defendants that the Settlers' Clause constitutes "a mere directive covenant," the Government would logically, and quite naturally, possess a nominal interest only in the grant, and hence could not enforce the obligation. The argument, while unsound, in my opinion, affords the most cogent reason for inducing the belief that Congress had no such purpose in view. Upon the other hand, it intended that the legislation should be effective, and in view of the rules of construction, which have been previously discussed, the known policy of Congress relative to the disposition of the public domain, and the attending conditions, I am firmly impressed that it was the intendment of Congress to impose a condition subsequent by the adoption of the Actual Settlers' Clause in this Act, as well as by the April 10, 1869, amendment to the Act of July 25, 1866.

We next come to the question urged that the suit cannot be maintained as one to enforce forfeiture nor to quiet title, because (1) the Government has not declared forfeiture; (2) the fact of forfeiture has not been adjudicated by a court of law; and (3) the defendant ilroad company holds the legal title and possession.

It is not, nor can it be, claimed that the Government as not the same rights and remedies accorded to a pri-ate person for a forfeiture of a grant for good cause xisting. Atlantic and Pacific Railroad v. Mingus, 165 . S. 413. The essential and particular contention of ounsel for defendants is, that they are entitled to a ommon law proceeding in the determination as to for-eiture, and that this contemplates a trial by jury and ot a proceeding in equity. Further, that equity is ithout jurisdiction to enforce a forfeiture, nor would exercise such jurisdiction.

It is wholly unnecessary that I trace the history of ffice found and determine with nicety its common law urposes, as the decisions of the Supreme Court have ealt with the subject by no uncertain deduction, and ut slight reference need be made to authorities beyond hese decisions. One thing is certain, that the jury there ummoned, and before whom the issues were ascertained nd determined, was not the common law jury before hom a citizen has right in law and under Magna harta, and under the Constitution of this Government, o demand trial where his liberties or his rights, whether f person or property, are drawn in question. It has o relation to the great and long revered right of trial y jury. Blackstone's definition of inquisition or office ound proves this. It is "an inquiry made by the king's fficer, his sheriff, coroner, or escheator, virtute officii, r by writ to them sent for that purpose, or by commis-ioners specially appointed, concerning any matter that entitles the king to the possession of lands or tenements, goods or chattels. This is done by a jury of no determinate number, being either twelve or less, or more. * * * These inquests of office were devised by law, as an authentic means to give the king his right by solemn matter of record; without which he, in general, can neither take nor part from anything. For," continues the author, "it is a part of the liberties of England, and greatly for the safety of the subject, that the king may not enter upon or seize any man's possessions upon bare surmises without the intervention of a jury."

It was a procedure peculiarly adapted for the king's use, and the important thing about it was that a record might be made and entered whereon the king could base his right to possess himself of the lands, goods, and chattels of his subject; and as it respects lands, the office found put him into immediate possession, without the necessity of a formal re-entry. Although its frequent use was for the determination of attainder, escheats, and breaches of conditions annexed to grants, and the like, the record was not conclusive, and the subject was yet entitled to a trial suitable at common law for the final determination of his rights. A good illustration is found in escheats, and the procedure is thus stated by Mr. Justice Gray, in Hamilton v. Brown, 161 U. S. 256, 263:

"The usual form of proceeding for this purpose was by an inquisition or inquest of office before a > jury, which was had upon a commission out of the Court of Chancery, but was really a proceeding at common law; and, if it resulted in favor of the King, then, by virtue of ancient statutes, any one claiming title in the lands might, by leave of that Court, file a traverse, in the nature of a plea or defense to the King's claim, and not in the nature of an original suit. * * * The inquest of office was a proceeding in rem; when there was a proper office found for the King, that was notice to all persons who had claims to come in and assert them; and, until so traversed, it was conclusive in the king's favor."

In this country, however, while the Government may invoke the proceeding by nature of inquisition or office found for declaring forfeiture and establishing re-entry, it is not necessary to do so. The same object may be as adequately accomplished by legislative declaration. In one of the earlier adjudications upon the subject of forfeiture in this country (United States v. Repentigny, 5 Wall. 211, 267), the Court says:

> "We agree that before a forfeiture or reunion with the public domain could take place, a judicial inquiry should be instituted, or, in the technical language of the common law, office found, or its legal equivalent. A legislative Act, directing the possession and appropriation of the land, is equivalent to office found. The mode of asserting or of assuming the forfeited grant is subject to the legislative authority of the Government. It may be after judicial investigation, or by taking possession directly, under the authority of the Government without these preliminary proceedings."

In a subsequent case it was declared that "Actual entry or office found is not necessary to enable the Government to take advantage of a condition broken."

McMicken v. United States, 97 U. S. 204, 217.

If a condition subsequent be broken, the circumstance does not, ipso facto, produce a reverter. The estate continues, notwithstanding, until proper and adequate steps be taken to consummate the forfeiture. Where, however, the grant is a public one, "the remedy," says Mr. Justice Brown, in Atlantic and Pacific Railroad v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 431, "is by an inquest of office or office found, a judicial proceeding but little used in this country, or by a legislative act directing the posesssion and appropriation of the land." After a discussion of the authorities in substantiation of the position, he concludes as follows:

"These cases are not put upon the ground that the United States reserved the right to declare a forfeiture, or even provided expressly for a reversion of title in case of a breach, but upon the general ground that the Government was vested with the same right as a private grantor, upon breach of a condition subsequent, though such right was, from the necessities of the case, to be exercised in a somewhat different manner, viz., by legislative act instead of re-entry."

"But while we think the practice of forfeiting by legislative act is too well settled to be now disturbed, we do not wish to be understood as saying that this power may be arbitrarily exercised, or that the grantee may not set up in defense any facts which he might lay before a jury in a judicial inquisition. It would comport neither with the dignity of the Government nor with the constitutional rights of the grantee, to hold that the Government by an arbitrary act might divest the latter of his title when there had been no breach of the conditions subsequent, or when the Government itself had been manifestly in default in the performance of its stipulations. The inquiry in each case is a judicial one, whether there has been, upon either side, a failure to perform, and it makes but little practical difference whether such inquiry precedes or follows the re-entry or act of forfeiture."

In a later case—New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 24, the same eminent jurist says:

"A distinction is drawn by the authorities between the case of a private grantor, who may reenter in the case of the breach of a condition subsequent, and the Government, which can only repossess itself of lands by legislative or judicial action."

In Columbia Valley R. Co. v. Portland & S. Ry. Co., 162 Fed. 603, 606, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, speaking through Gilbert, Circuit Judge, of the purpose of legislative action, says:

> "It is the 'legislative assertion of ownership of the property for breach of condition.' It is itself the entry of the grantor for condition broken."

See further:

Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 63;

Farnsworth et al, v. Minn. & Pac. R. R. Co., 92 U. S. 49, 66;

McMicken v. United States, 97 U. S. 204, 217;

Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360, 368;

Bybee v. Oregon & California R'd Co., 139 U. S. 663, 674;

United States v. Tennessee & Coosa R'd, 176 U. S. 242, 256;

United States v. Northern Pacific Ry. Co., 177 U. S. 435, 441.

Office found for the King put him into immediate possession, without the necessity of a formal entry. So it seems in case of a legislative declaration of forfeiture for breach of condition subsequent, "It is itself the entry of the grantor." But, notwithstanding the entry, whether through office found or by legislative edict, the grantee is by no means precluded. It may be that it has the effect to change the manner of further procedure by putting the grantor into possession, so that it would have to proceed in equity to quiet title, rather than by action in ejectment; but the grantee resisting, it needs yet the adjudication of a Court of competent jurisdiction to terminate the controversy as to the right of forfeiture. The legislative edict determines no fact, except that it is an assertion of an election to re-enter for breach, and adjudicates nothing.

Now, the Government not having re-entered for breach of condition subsequent, it is urged that the defendants are entitled to a jury trial as to the fact of breach and forfeiture, and that equity will not entertain cognizance to enforce a forfeiture. Further than this, that equity is without jurisdiction to determine the cause, because the Government has an adequate remedy at law, by ejectment, for possession.

Answering the first proposition, it is quite true that the right to have controverted questions of fact, in common law causes, decided by a jury remains, but it is none the less true that matters cognizable in equity may be and generally are tried without the interposition of a jury.

> North Pa. Coal Co. v. Snowden, 42 Pa. St. 488, 492.

And I see no reason why, if equitable jurisdiction is called into requisition upon some well established equitable ground, the Court may not try the fact of breach and forfeiture as well as any other fact in the case. We have seen that the jury trial incident to inquisition or office found is not the common law jury trial preserved by Magna Charta and the Constitution of this Government. If equity has jurisdiction to entertain the suit at bar, it has jurisdiction as well to determine whether breach has been suffered which entails the forfeiture by election of the Government.

There can be no quarrel as to the proposition that the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity is rigidly miantained in the Federal courts. Anglo-American Land, M. & A. Co. v. Lombard, 132 Fed. 721, 731.

It is quite strongly stated by many of the authorities that equity will not interpose its jurisdiction to enforce either a penalty or a forfeiture, and such may be said to be the general rule. Some of the expressions to be found are as follows:

> "It is a universal rule in equity never to enforce either a penalty or a forfeiture. Therefore Courts of Equity will never aid in the devesting of an estate for a breach of a covenant on a condition subsequent, although they will often interfere to prevent the devesting of an estate for a breach of a covenant or condition."
> Story's Eq. Jur. (13 Ed.) Sec. 1319.
> "It is a well-settled and familiar doctrine that a Court of Equity will not interfere on behalf of the party entitled thereto, and enforce a forfeiture, but will leave him to his legal remedies, if any, even though the case might be one in which no equitable relief would be given to the defaulting party against the forfeiture."
> Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (3 Ed.) Sec. 459.
> "Equity never, under any circumstances, lends its aid to enforce a forfeiture or penalty, or anything in the nature of either."

Marshall v. Vicksburg, 15 Wall. 146, 149.

"Equity abhors forfeitures, and will not lend its aid to enforce them."

Jones v. Guaranty & Indemnity Co., 101 U. S. 622, 628.

In the last case cited it is further said:

"Nor will the Court be induced to depart from its uniform course, and take cognizance of that question because the jurisdiction is sought on the ground of removal of clouds from the title for the right of the complainants to a dispersion of the cloud is dependent upon a favorable adjudication of the estate, by reason of a breach of the condition."

Yet, notwithstanding these strong statements, there is in the rule a flexibility which the Supreme Court has recognized, for it says, in Henderson v. Carbondale Coal & Coke Co., 140 U. S. 25, 33:

"Equity always leans against them (forfeitures), and only decrees in their favor when there is full, clear and strict proof of a legal right thereto."

In the case of Brewster v. Lanyon Zinc Co., 140

Fed. 801, determined in the Court of Appeals Eighth Circuit, which was a suit in equity to establish as matter of record the forfeiture of an oil and gas lease, and to cancel the same as a cloud upon complainant's title, in an exhaustive and very able opinion rendered by Mr. Justice Van Devanter, it was declared that:

> "The better view is that the rule is not absolute or inflexible, any more than is every forfeiture harsh and oppressive; that its influence and operation do not extend beyond the reasons which underlie it; and that in cases, otherwise properly cognizable in equity, there is no insuperable objection to the enforcement of a forfeiture when that is more consonant with the principles of right, justice, and morality than to withhold equitable relief."

In Westbrook v. Schmaus, 51 Kan. 558 (33 Pac. 306), the Court entertained a suit to quiet title, where forfeiture was declared proper; and in Edwards v. Iola Gas Co., 65 Kan. 362 (69 Pac. 350), the Court recognized the principle. So in Brown v. Vandergrift, 80 Pa. 142, 148, which was for the forfeiture of an oil lease, the Court said:

> "In a case like this equity follows the law, and will enforce the covenant of forfeiture, as essential to do justice. It is true as a general statement that equity abhors a forfeiture; but this is when it works a loss that is contrary to equity, not when it works equity and protects the landowner against the indifference and laches of the lessee and prevents a great mischief."

As said by Story, Eq. Jur., Sec. 439:

> "The beautiful character or pervading excellence, if one may so say, of equity jurisprudence is that it varies its adjustments and proportions so as to meet the very form and pressure of each particular case in all its complex habitudes."

The Supreme Court has announced practically the same rule. In Farnsworth et al. v. Minn. & Pac. R. R. Co., 92 U. S. 49, 68, that Court says:

> "But it is said that provisions for forfeiture are regarded with disfavor and construed with strictness, and that Courts of Equity will lean against their enforcement. This, as a general rule, is true when applied to cases of contract, and the forfeiture relates to a matter of admitting of compensation or restoration; but there can be no leaning of the Court against a forfeiture which is intended to secure the construction of a work, in which the public is interested, where compensation cannot be made for the default of the party, nor where the forfeiture is imposed by positive law."

A little later the Court quotes from Lord Macles-field, in Peachy v. The Duke of Somerset, 1st Strange, as follows:

> "Cases of agreement and conditions of the party and of the laws are certainly to be distinguished. You can never say that the law has determined hardly; but you may say that the party has made a hard bargain."

Chandler v. Crawford, 7 Ala. 506;

Lafayette County v. Hall, 70 Miss. 678.

Beyond this, the Federal courts have entertained jurisdiction in equity to forfeit land grants.

United States v. Dalles Military Road Co., 140 U. S. 599;

United States v. California &c. Land Co., 148 U. S. 31;

United States v. Oregon &c. Railroad, 164 U. S. 526;

United States v. Tennessee & Coosa R'd., 176 U. S. 242.

In the case cited next to the last the statement shows that it was instituted by bill to quiet title to about 90,000 acres of land in Oregon; and in the last cited that the suit was brought "to forfeit a land grant made to the State of Alabama in aid of the construction of the railroad."

If it be said as to these cases that the Government, by legislative declaration through acts of Congress, had forfeited the grant to all lands lying opposite the unconstructed portions of the roads, whether wagon roads or railroads, and therefore had resumed title and with it possession, so that the Government was in a position, by being in possession, to interpose its relief by quieting title or removing a cloud, it may be anwered that the grantee's possession was scarcely more than fiction of law, if indeed the Government was not in possession prior to the declaration of forfeiture.

But without this, and conceding that the Government is not in possession of the lands in controversy here, it is scarcely to be argued that the railroad company has possession other than such as may follow any grant. The company is not in absolute or actual possession. It has not planted its feet upon the soil in what is termed pedis possessio. The lands in the main are wild and unoccupied, and are such that with reference to them the Government may maintain a suit to quiet the title thereto, or to remove a cloud affecting them injuriously to the Government. The bill of complaint shows quite sufficient for this.

Section 516 of the statutes of Oregon, B. & C. Comp., provides as follows:

> "Any person claiming an interest or estate in real estate not in the actual possession of another may maintain a suit in equity against another who claims an interest or estate therein adverse to him, for the purpose of determining such conflicting or adverse claims, interests or estates."

Under the construction given to the statute by the State Supreme Court, if the plaintiff be not himself in possession, he must allege and prove that the property is not in the possession of another; otherwise he will be relegated to a court of law, where he has an adequate remedy by action in ejectment. Moore v. Shofner, 40 Or. 488, 492. And the possession that another holds, to deprive the plaintiff of his suit must be actual as distinguished from constructive possession, the latter being such as follows the delivery of a deed merely. O'Hara v. Parker, 27 Or. 156, 167.

The equitable relief afforded by State statutes of this nature might be availed of in the Federal courts if they do not go to the extent of depriving the defendant of his right of trial by jury. If, however, plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, he is compelled to resort to the law forum for his relief. Without a statute, bills quia timet, or to remove cloud from a legal title, cannot be brought by one not in possession, because the law provides a remedy by ejectment, which is plain, adequate, and complete. United States v. Wilson, 118 U. S. 86, 89.

In Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15, the Supreme Court sustained a suit to quiet title under a statute that permitted the same to be instituted by any person, "whether in actual possession or not," the subject of the suit being "unoccupied, wild and uncultivated land."

In a later case, Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, the Court, having under consideration an Iowa statute which purported to enlarge the jurisdiction of equity to quiet title, held that such enlarged jurisdiction, if sought to be availed of in a Federal Court sitting within the State, could only be exercised subject to the constitutional provision entitling parties to trial by jury, and to the provision in R. S. Sec. 723, prohibiting suits in equity when a plain, complete, and adequate remedy at law exists. But the principle announced in the case of Holland v. Challen was not disturbed, where neither party was in possession, the subject of the suit being wild and uninhabited land. So that the Oregon statute does not go beyond the principle adhered to in the Federal courts, that the suit will not lie if the plaintiff has a complete and adequate remedy at law.

Further discussion of the subject will be found in Frost v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 552, and Whitehead v. Shattuck, 138 U. S. 146.

The remedy at law which will suffice to deprive a Court of Equity of jurisdiction must be as "certain, prompt, and efficient to the ends of justice as the remedy in equity."

Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 514;

Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 349;

Davis v. Wakelee 156 U. S. 680, 688.

The remedy sought here includes the cancellation of a number of patents, as well as the determination of the question of forfeiture by the railroad Company, and it must be conceded that the remedy at law is not as complete and adequate as in equity.

This brings us to the authority given by Congress for the institution of this suit. The Attorney General was "authorized and directed to institute and prosecute any and all suits in equity, actions at law, and other proceedings which he may deem adequate and appropriate to enforce any and all rights and remedies of the United States of America in any manner arising or growing out of or pertaining to" the acts in question granting lands, etc., "and in and by any and all such suits, actions, or proceedings, * * * in such manner as he shall deem appropriate, assert all rights and remedies existing in favor of the United States relating to the subject of such suits, actions, and proceedings, including the claim on behalf of the United States that the lands granted by each of said Acts, respectively, or any part thereof, have been and are forfeited to the United States by reason of any breaches or violations of any of the terms or conditions of either or any of said Acts which may be alleged and established in any such suits, actions, or proceedings; it not being intended hereby to determine the right of the United States to any such forfeiture or forfeitures, but it being intended to fully authorize the Attorney General in and by such suits, actions, or proceedings to assert on behalf of the United States and the Court or Courts before which such suits, actions, or proceedings may be instituted or pending to entertain, consider and adjudicate the claim and right of the United States to such forfeiture or forfeitures, and if found to enforce the same."

It is plain that Congress did not, by the resolution, declare any of the lands in suit forfeited. It disclaimed any intention of so doing. But it is equally plain that it did authorize the Attorney General to institute such suit, action or proceeding, as he might deem appropriate to determine the vital question as to whether a forfeiture had been incurred. That is a question that necessarily would have to be litigated in an appropriate proceeding in any event, whether Congress declared a forfeiture in the first instance or not; the railroad company resisting. The declaration of forfeiture does not make it so in fact; and if made contrary to the fact of forfeiture, it could not stand. Otherwise, it would be the most objectionable kind of taking of property without due process of law. The declaration might be effective as a resumption of the grant, and therefore tantamount to a re-entry, so that a suit must recognize the relative positions of the parties as it respects possession; that is to say, that the Government is in possession and the railroad company out. But this rests upon fiction; no such transportation of possession has taken place in fact. However, an election on the part of the Government to forfeit, and thus to resume its grant, may be signified by the bringing of an action or suit for the purpose. The language of Mr. Justice Harlan, in Schlesinger v. Kansas City &c Railway Co., 152 U. S. 444, 452, is pertinent.

> "In the case of a public grant, the right of the Government to repossess itself of the estate granted may be asserted through judicial proceedings, or by some Legislative Act showing an assertion of ownership on account of the breach of the condition upon which the original grant was made."

In Ruch v. Rock Island, 97 U. S. 693, 697, it is said:

> "Bringing suit for the premises by the proper party is sufficient to authorize a recovery, without actual entry or a previous demand of possession."

See, also, Colwell v. Springs Company, 100 U. S. 55; Union Pacific Ry. Co. v. Cook, 98 Fed. 281, 284; Cornelius v. Ivins, 26 N. J. L. 376.

True, these cases arise in ejectment, and were between private parties. But suppose ejectment had been brought here, the parties being so situated as to possession that it was proper, could there be any question that the institution of the action was sufficient as an election to forfeit the grant and to resume possession on that ground? So it is that, the plaintiff having its remedy in equity, the bringing of the suit is tantamount to an election to forfeit, and to resume possession on account thereof.

The real question, as has been previously indicated, is whether any forfeiture has been incurred for breach of condition subsequent, and that is for judicial cognizance, and for judicial inquiry and determination. As said by Mr. Justice Brown in Atlantic and Pacific Railroad v. Mingus, supra:

> "The inquiry in each case is a judicial one, whether there has been upon either side, a failure to perform, and it makes but little practical difference whether such inquiry precedes or follows the reentry or Act of forfeiture."

In the present case, the judicial inquiry simply precedes the act of re-entry or forfeiture, and its cardinal purpose is to determine the fact of forfeiture.

Further disposition of the property will follow the adjudication.

While Congress has not declared a forfeiture leaving the judicial inquiry to follow, it has clothed the Attorney General with ample authority to institute a suit for determining whether forfeiture has been incurred or not, and the facts being such that equity may entertain jurisdiction of the cause, there remains no reason why it should not be maintained.

In view of these considerations, the demurrer to the bill of complaint must be overruled, and the demurrers to the cross-complaint and bills of intervention will be sustained, and it is so ordered.

(Endorsed).

Opinion filed April 24, 1911.

Clerk.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 22nd day of August, 1911, the same being the.....Judicial day of the regular April, 1911, term of said Court; present: the Honorable Chas. E. Wolverton, United States District Judge presiding, the following proceedings were had in said cause, to-wit:

[ORDER EXTENDING TIME FOR DEFENDANTS TO ANSWER]

[TITLE]

Now, at this day, upon stipulation filed herein, it is Ordered that the defendants, Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage be, and they are hereby, allowed fifteen days from August 24, 1911, within which to serve and file their answer herein.

CHAS. E. WOLVERTON,

Judge.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 8th day of December, 1911, there was duly filed in said Court, an Order in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

[ORDER ALLOWING AMENDMENT TO ANSWER OF O. & C. R. R. et al., TO BILL OF COMPLAINT]

[TITLE]

Now, at this day, come the plaintiff by Mr. Burdette D. Townsend, of counsel, and the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage by Mr. William D. Fenton, of counsel and the defendants Union Trust Company by Mr. John M. Gearin, of counsel; whereupon on motion of said defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage, It is Ordered that they be and they are hereby, allowed to file an amendment to their answer filed herein; and thereupon said plaintiff moves the court for an order designating a special examiner to take the testimony to be adduced in this cause, whereupon it is Ordered that Miss M. A. Fleming, of Portland, Oregon, be, and she is hereby, appointed a special examiner of this court to take and report to this court the testimony of all of the parties hereto.

CHAS. E. WOLVERTON,
Judge.

(Endorsed) Order allowing amendment to answer, filed December 8, 1911.

G. H. MARSH,
Clerk.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 28th day of April, 1913, there was duly filed in said Court, an Order in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

[ORDER ALLOWING SECOND AMENDMENT TO ANSWER OF O. & C. R. R. et al., TO BILL OF COMPLAINT]

[TITLE]

This cause came on regularly at this time for final hearing; Mr. B. D. Townsend, special Assistant to the Attorney General appearing as attorney for the United States and Messrs. W. D. Fenton, James E. Fenton and Peter Dunne appearing as attorneys for the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage as Trustee, Mr. John M. Gearin appearing as attorney for the defendant Union Trust Company; whereupon upon motion of attorneys for respective defendants, attorney for the United States consenting thereto, it is Ordered that leave be and hereby is granted defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage, individually and as trustee, to file an amendment to their answer herein and it is further ordered that leave be and hereby is granted Union Trust Company to file an amendment to its answer herein and thereupon upon consent of attorneys for respective parties, it is Ordered that this cause be and the same hereby is submitted without argument and it is further ordered that testimony taken and exhibits introduced before the examiner herein be received and filed.

CHAS. E. WOLVERTON,
Judge.

(Endorsed) Order allowing amendment filed April 28, 1913.

A. M. CANNON,
Clerk.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 5th day of September, 1911, there was duly filed in said Court, an Answer in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

[JOINT AND SEVERAL ANSWER OF DEFENDANTS O. & C. R. R., SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY AND STEPHEN T. GAGE]

[TITLE]

JOINT AND SEVERAL ANSWER

Of Defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage, to Bill of Complaint of the United States, in the Above-entitled Case, as Amended, September 8, 1911, and April 28, 1913.

The defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage, respectively, now and at all times saving to themselves all and all manner of benefit and advantage of exception, or otherwise, that can or may be had or taken to the many errors, uncertainties and imperfections in complainant's Bill of Complaint (hereinafter called "the Bill") contained, for answer thereto, or to so much and such parts thereof as they are advised it is material or necessary for them or any of them to make answer to, jointly and severally answering, say:

I.

These defendants say that the following allegations made in subdivision "1" of the Bill are true, and they admit that:

(a). The defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company now is, and at all the times mentioned in the Bill as to it was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Oregon, and a resident and citizen of that State.

(b). The defendant Southern Pacific Company now is, and at all the times mentioned in the Bill as to it was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kentucky, and a resident and citizen of that State.

(c). The defendant Stephen T. Gage is a resident and citizen of the City of Oakland (not of the City of San Francisco, as alleged in the Bill), and is sued in his own right, and also as sole surviving Trustee under a certain Deed of Trust described in the Bill.

(d). The defendant Union Trust Company now is, and at all the times mentioned in the Bill as to it was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, and a resident and citizen of that State, and is sued in its own right, and also as Trustee under a certain Mortgage Deed described in the Bill.

These defendants say that they have no knowledge or information as to the truth of any of the allegations made in the said subdivision "1" of the Bill respecting the following matters and things, and on that ground deny each of the said allegations; that is to say:

(a). They deny that each, or any, of the defendants John L. Snyder, Julius F. Prahl, Albert E. Thompson, James Barr, Fred Witte, W. A. Anderson, W. H. Anderson, O. M. Anderson, F. E. Williams, Paul Birkenfeld, J. H. Lewis, Francis S. Wiser, W. E. Anderson, Albert Arms, Joseph A. Maxwell, Isaac McKay, J. R. Peterson, S. MacLafferty, Edgar MacLafferty, V. V. McAboy, George C. MacLafferty, George Edgar MacLafferty, E. L. MacLafferty, B. N. MacLafferty, Enos M. Fluhrer, F. W. Floeter, and S. Shryock is a resident or citizen of the County of Columbia, in the State of Oregon, or a resident or citizen of the State of Oregon.

(b). Deny that each, or any, of the defendants Sidney Ben Smith, Orrin J. Lawrence, Robert G. Balderree, Oscar E. Smith, Egbert C. Lake, C. W. Sloat, Jesse F. Holbrook, A. E. Haudenschield, S. H. Montgomery, and W. A. Noland is a resident or citizen of the County of Lane, in the State of Oregon, or a resident or citizen of the State of Oregon.

(c). Deny that each, or any, of the defendants John H. Haggett, Charles W. Mead, William Otterstrom, Angus MacDonald, John T. Moan, Joseph D. Hadley, Henry C. Ott, Fred L. Freebing, William Cain, R. T. Aldrich, and James C. O'Neill is a resident or citizen of the County of Multnomah, in the State of Oregon, or is a resident or citizen of the State of Oregon.

(d). Deny that each, or any, of the defendants Alexander Fauske, Francis Wiest, Cordelia Michael, John B. Wiest, Cyrus Wiest, John Wiest, Thomas Manley Hill, Otto Nelson, Jasper L. Hewitt, B. L. Porter, and Frank Wells is a resident or citizen of the County of Clackamas, in the State of Oregon, or is a resident or citizen of the State of Oregon.

(e). Deny that each, or any, of the defendants C. P. Wells, I. H. Ingram, L. G. Reeves, and W. W. Wells is a resident or citizen of the County of Polk, in the State of Oregon, or is a resident of the State of Oregon.

(f). Deny that the defendant F. M. Rhoades is a resident or citizen of the County of Douglas, in the State of Oregon, or is a resident or citizen of the State of Oregon.

(g). Deny that the defendant Marvin Martin is a resident or citizen of the County of Linn, in the State of Oregon, or is a resident or citizen of the State of Oregon.

(h). Deny that the defendant Roy W. Minkler is a resident or citizen of the County of Clarke, in the State of Washington, or is a resident or citizen of the State of Washington; and

(i). Deny that certain of said defendants are described otherwise than by Christian name for the reason that the Christian name of each or any of said defendants is to complainant unknown.

II.

These defendants admit that Congress passed an Act entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland in Oregon," which was approved and became operative on July 25th, 1866; and they admit that the copy of said Act setforth on pages 5 to 10 of the Bill is a correct copy thereof.

They admit that the said Act of July 25th, 1866, was amended by an Act of Congress approved June 25th, 1868, entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland in Oregon' "; and that the copy of said amendatory Act setforth on page 10 of the Bill, is a correct copy thereof.

III.

These defendants deny that no right, title or interest in or to any of the grants, franchises or other benefits in the State of Oregon, provided for by said Act of Congress approved July 25th, 1866, was ever acquired by any corporation or person or otherwise, except at the time, in the manner, and upon the terms and condtiions setforth in the Bill; and in this behalf they say that, as will be hereinafter shown, certain rights, titles and interests in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits in the State of Oregon, provided for by the said Act, were acquired by these defendants and other persons and corporations, otherwise than at the times, in the manner or upon the terms or conditions setforth in the Bill.

They admit that on or about October 6th, 1866, proceedings were had by which certain persons attempted to organize, under the general incorporation laws of the State of Oregon, a corporation bearing the corporate name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal office at the City of Portland, in the State of Oregon; (On September 8, 1911, by order of court the following words were added by way of amendment:

But in this behalf they say that the incorporation of said Railroad Company was not nor was its organization perfected until after October 10, 1866.)

They admit that the said Oregon Central Railroad Company projected its said railroad line from the City of Portland in a westerly direction through the village of Forest Grove, and thence southerly to and beyond the village of McMinnville, on the westerly side of the Willamette River; and they admit that thereafter the said Company was known as the "West Side" Company and the said railroad was known as the "West Side" Railroad.

They admit that on October 10th, 1866, the Legislature of the State of Oregon adopted, and the Governor of the State of Oregon approved, a Joint Resolution; and that the copy of said Joint Resolution setforth on pages 11 and 12 of the Bill, is a true copy thereof.

They admit that the said West Side Company, assuming itself to have been lawfully designated therefor, on or about May 25th, 1867, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in terms assenting to the provisions of the said Act of Congress of July 25th, 1866, and on or about July 6th, 1867, filed an authenticated copy thereof, together with a certified copy of its Articles of Incorporation, and a certified copy of the said Joint Resolution of October 10th, 1866, in the office of the Secretary of Interior; and they admit and say that on or about August 20th, 1868, said West Side Company filed in the office of the Secretary of Interior a map of survey of its projected line of railroad under the said Act of July 25th, 1866, from Portland by way of Forest Grove and McMinnville, thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys for connection with the California & Oregon railroad on the southern boundary line of Oregon.

These defendants admit and say that on or about April 22nd, 1867, certain persons, residents of the State of Oregon, then and thereafter contending that the said West Side Company was never lawfully incorporated or organized, and designing to secure the several grants, franchises and other benefits of the said Act of Congress approved July 25th, 1866, caused certain proceedings to be had and taken which were intended to incorporate and organize, under the general incorporation laws of Oregon, a corporation bearing the corporate name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal place of business at the City of Salem, in Oregon; which last-named Company projected its railroad from Portland southerly, along the easterly side of the Willamette River, and was thereafter known as the "East Side Company" and its said railroad was thereafter known as the "East Side" railroad.

They admit that the East Side Company, in furtherance of its said design, on October 20th, 1868, procured to be adopted by the Legislature, and approved by the Governor, of Oregon, the Joint Resolution a correct copy of which is setforth on pages 13 and 14 of the Bill.

They admit that a controversy arose between the West Side Company and the East Side Company as to which Company was entitled to the grants, franchises and privileges made and provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, which controversy continued until about January, 1870; but these defendants say that said controversy arose at or about the time of the incorporation (on April 22nd, 1867) of the East Side Company, and did not first arise out of, nor at the time of the adoption of, the said Joint Resolution of October 20th, 1868.

These defendants deny that the said Act of July

25th, 1866, prescribed as a condition precedent to the vesting of any of the grants contained therein, that the Company designated by the Legislature of Oregon should file in the Interior Department, within one year thereafter, or at all, its assent to said Act or any terms or conditions thereof.

They deny that the time within which to file an assent as aforesaid, had expired prior to the designation of the East Side Company by the Legislature of Oregon on October 20th, 1868, or otherwise than as provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, to which reference is hereby made; and they deny that because of any premises setforth in the Bill, otherwise or at all, the East Side Company did apply to Congress during the session thereof commencing in December, 1868, or at any time, for an extension of the time within which to file its assent, as setforth in the Bill; they deny that in that behalf, or at all, the East Side Company did lay before Congress the said Joint Resolution of the Legislature of Oregon, or in that behalf, or at all, did represent that all or any of the recitals thereof were true; and they deny that because of any premises setforth in the Bill, otherwise or at all, the several or any of the grants, franchises or privileges of the said Act of July 25th, 1866, had lapsed, or the or any benefits thereof would be wholly, or at all, lost to the State of Oregon unless revived by Congress in the, or any manner, setforth in the Bill, otherwise or at all.

In this behalf they say, that the said Act of July 25th, 1866, authorized and empowered the California & Oregon Railroad Company and such Company (if any) organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of that State should designate, or either of said Companies, to construct a continuous railroad from Portland in Oregon to connection, on the same track gauge, with the Ceneral Pacific railroad in California; that under and pursuant to the provisions of the said Act the said California & Oregon Railroad Company duly filed its assent to the said Act on or about October 8th, 1866, and duly completed the first 20-mile section of the said railroad from its connection with the Central Pacific railroad northerly through the Sacramento Valley to the town of Wheatland on or about October 28th, 1867; and thereafter, prior to December, 1887, the said California & Oregon Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, its successor by amalgamation and consolidation, completed construction of the railroad in California provided for by the said Act of Congress, and aided the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company to complete its railroad from Ashland in Oregon to connection with the said California & Oregon railroad, at or near the Southern boundary line of Oregon. And these defendants say they are advised by counsel and believe, that the said filing of assent and construction, and subsequent acceptance by the United States of the said railroad as constructed, constituted such full and specific performance of the requirements of the said Act of 1866 as that none of the provisions of section 8 thereof were at any time operative, wholly or in part.

They deny that during consideration by Congress of any application of the East Side Company for further time, the West Side Company appeared before Congress or opposed said alleged or any application of said East Side Company, or in that behalf contended before Congress that the several or any grants, franchises or privileges of said Act of July 25th 1866 had theretofore become or then were vested in said West Side Company.

They admit that Congress had under consideration the Act of Congress approved April 10th 1869 entitled as in the Bill setforth, and did approve said Act on April 10th 1869; but deny that Congress by such Act or otherwise granted any application in respect thereto of said East Side Company, or granted any such application upon the express or any condition that the lands granted as alleged should be sold to actual settlers only in quantities not greater than one quarter-section to one purchaser and at a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre, or granted any application in that behalf of the said East Side Company upon any condition or at all. They admit that the said last-mentioned Act of Congress is correctly setforth in the Bill at pages 15 and 16 thereof.

They admit that on or about June 8th 1869 the Board of Directors of the East Side Company adopted the resolution copied on pages 16 and 17 of the Bill; and that on or about June 24th 1869 a certified copy of the said Resolution was filed in the office of the Secretary of Interior.

They admit that on or about October 29th 1869 the East Side Company filed in the Secretary of Interior's office a map of survey and location of the first sixty miles of its projected railroad; that on December 24th 1869 the said Company completed construction of the first twenty miles of the said railroad commencing at Portland; and that on December 31st 1869 the said twenty miles of constructed railroad was examined and approved by Commissioners appointed by the President of the United States pursuant to the provisions of section 4 of the said Act of July 25th 1866.

These defendants deny that the West Side Company did not complete the construction of any part of its line of railroad pursuant to the terms and conditions of said Acts of Congress, or that at any time said West Side Company acquiesced in the substitution of said East Side Company as alleged in the Bill, or that there was any substitution as alleged of said East Side Company. And they say that the West Side Company applied for, obtained and accepted a grant of lands, franchises and benefits pertaining to so much of its aforesaid projected railroad as extended from Portland by way of Forest Grove to McMinnville, and pertaining to a contemplated railroad from Forest Grove northerly to Astoria, conferred by the Act of Congress approved May 4th 1870, copied on pages 22 to 25 of the Bill. But they deny that said West Side Company ever abandoned or waived all or any claim to the said grants, privileges or franchises of which the said East Side Company became and was the recipient, or that the grant of lands or franchises or any other benefits conferred on said West Side Company by the said Act of May 4th 1870 was applied for, obtained, accepted or made in lieu of any grant of lands or franchises or benefits provided by the Act of July 25th 1866.

They deny that no right, title or interest in or to any grants, franchises or other benefits provided by the said Act of July 25th 1866 was ever acquired by, through or under the West Side Company; and they deny that no right, title or interest in or to any grants, franchises or other benefits provided by the said Act of July 25th 1866, were ever acquired by, through or under the East Side Company except by virtue of or expressly subject to terms or conditions imposed by the said Act of April 10th 1869. In this behalf they say, that no condition or conditions was or were, expressly or otherwise, imposed by the said Act of April 10th 1869; and they say, further, that all the grants, franchises and other benefits in Oregon provided by the said Act of July 25th 1866 were acquired by the East Side Company and these defendants, and that they were so acquired otherwise than by virtue of or subject to any provisions of the said Act of April 10th 1869.

They admit that the East Side Company became involved in litigation questioning its right to use its corporate name, but deny that the said Company became involved in any litigation questioning the validity of its incorporation or organization; they admit that on or about March 17th 1870 the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company was organized under the general incorporation laws of Oregon, and that on the same day its Articles of Incorporation were executed in triplicate and filed, one in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon, one in the office of the Clerk of Multnomah County, Oregon (being the County in which the principal office of said Company was located), and one in the office of the Secretary of the said Company, at Portland, Oregon; but these defendants deny that the Oregon & California Railroad Company was organized by the promoters, officers, or stockholders of the East Side Company.

They deny that the principal object of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company in fact or as stated in its aforesaid Articles of Incorporation, was to become the successor of the East Side Company, or as such to receive or exercise the grants, franchises or privileges of the said Act of July 25th 1866 or Acts amendatory thereof; and they say that the principal object of the Oregon & California Railroad, in fact and as stated in its said Articles of Incorporation, was to construct, operate and maintain a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, in Oregon, southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys to connect on the southern boundary of Oregon with the railroad and telegraph line then being constructed northerly through California by the California & Oregon Railroad Company.

They admit that on or about March 29th 1870 the East Side Company executed and delivered to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company a certain instrument in writing, copied as "Exhibit B" to the Bill on pages 74 to 97 thereof, purporting to and which did sell and convey unto the said defendant all property of the East Side Company, including the last-named Company's right, title and interest in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits provided by the said Act of July 25th 1866 and the Acts amendatory thereof; and that thereafter, during March and April 1870, the said instrument was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several Counties in which was situated any of the lands granted by the said Act of July 25th 1866.

These defendants say that the purpose, intent and effect of the said instrument was, as appears on the face thereof, to operate as a sale and conveyance of all property therein described; they admit and say that the said instrument did constitute the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company the grantee, by purchase and deed of conveyance, of the East Side Company, of all property and rights of the East Side Company, including the right to construct, complete, equip and maintain the railroad provided for by the said Act of July 25th 1866, and in aid thereof to receive and exercise the grants, franchises and other benefits in that behalf offered and extended as aforesaid, upon all the terms and conditions provided in the said Act of July 25th 1866. These defendants deny that the purpose, intent or effect of the said instrument was not to operate as a sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by the aforesaid Acts of Congress; and deny that the purpose, intent, or effect thereof was to constitute the Oregon & California Railroad Company the successor of the East Side Company to construct, complete or equip the said line of railroad, otherwise than as grantee by purchase and under the said deed of conveyance; and they deny that by reason of the said instrument, or otherwise, the Oregon & California Railroad Company became or was in anywise obligated by the terms and provisions of the said Act of April 10th 1869.

They deny that the East Side Company became or was dissolved on or about March 29th 1870, or that said Company has not exercised any corporate powers or franchises since that date.

They admit that on or about April 4th 1870, the Board of Directors of the Oregon and California Railroad Company passed the resolution copied on pages 20 and 21 of the Bill; and they admit that on or about April 28th 1870, the Oregon and California Railroad Company filed an authenticated copy of the said resolution, together with a certified copy of the said deed of conveyance of March 29th 1870 ("Exhibit B" to the Bill) in the office of the Secretary of the Interior; and they admit and say that continuously since April 28th 1870, the Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed to be, and the United States has recognized and treated it as, the successor in interest by purchase and deed of conveyance of the East Side Company, of and to all the rights and property described in the said deed of March 29th 1870.

IV.

These defendants deny that the West Side Company at any time abandoned or waived all or any claim to any of the grants, franchises or other benefits of the said Act of July 25th 1866, or importuned Congress to extend to it in lieu thereof or otherwise or at all any grant of lands, or franchises, or other benefits pertaining to its said projected line of railroad known as the West Side Line or otherwise or at all, or that in such behalf Congress passed the Act approved May 4th 1870, copied on pages 22 to 25 of said Bill; but they admit that Congress did pass said Act.

They admit that by the words "Oregon Central Railroad Company," in the said Act of May 4th 1870, Congress intended to and did refer to and mean the West Side Company. They admit and say that the line of railroad specified in the Act of May 4th 1870, in so far as it extends from Portland to McMinnville by way of Forest Grove, is substantially the same as but deny that it is identical with the line of railroad theretofore projected by the West Side Company, between the said points; and they say that the line of railroad from Forest Grove to Astoria, described in and contemplated by the said Act of May 4th 1870, is not identical with nor along the course of any line of railroad theretofore projected by the West Side Company.

They admit that on or about July 2nd 1870, the Board of Directors of the West Side Company adopted a resolution assenting to the said Act of May 4th 1870; and they admit that on or about July 20th 1870, the West Side Company filed an authenticated copy of that resolution in the office of the Secretary of Interior.

These defendants deny that on or about August 15th 1870, or at any time or at all, all or any of the capital stock of the West Side Company was acquired by the then or any owners of the capital stock of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, or that thereafter or at any time or at all, all or any of the capital stock of both of said Companies was held by a single interest, or that the affairs of the two Companies were conducted virtually or at all as a single enterprise, until the dissolution of said West Side Company, otherwise or at all.

V.

These defendants deny that all of the original capital stock of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, or that substantially all of the capital stock of the West Side Company, was issued without consideration, or that by reason of the premises or otherwise neither of said Companies had any original capital or other funds for construction or other purposes, except such as was borrowed therefor.

They admit and say that by the issuance or negotiation or pledge of mortgage bonds, but not otherwise, approximately $8,000,000 was, during the year 1870, procured by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and approximately $1,000,000 was during the year 1871 procured by the West Side Company; and that with the funds thus procured the work of further constructing the East Side railroad and West Side railroad was prosecuted continuously until about January 1873. They admit and say that prior to January 1873 (but not wholly "during said period of construction" as alleged on page 26 of the Bill), the East Side railroad was constructed and extended from Portland to a point near Roseburg distant approximately 197 miles from Portland and that prior to January 1873, and during said period of construction, the West Side railroad was completed from Portland to McMinnville, by way of Forest Grove, a distance of approximately 47 miles. In this behalf these defendants say, that construction of the East Side railroad was commenced during the month of April 1868, and the construction of the part thereof which begins at Portland and ends at a point distant 20 miles southerly therefrom, was completed in December 1869; that prior to the year 1870 a portion of the next 20-mile section of the East Side railroad, extending southerly from the last-mentioned point, was constructed; and that the remainder of said 197 miles of railroad was constructed during the years 1870, 1871 and 1872.

They admit that about January 1873, the funds of each of the said Companies became exhausted, and that because thereof further construction of both railroads was temporarily suspended; that the East Side Company did not resume construction of its railroad until about June 1881; and that the West Side Company never did resume construction of its railroad. But these defendants deny that further construction of either railroad was abandoned at any time.

They admit that on or about July 24th 1874, direction and control of the financial affairs of each of said Companies were assumed and thereafter exercised by the creditors thereof, organized under the name "Bondholders' Committee"; and that on or about February 29th 1876, all of the capital stock of both Companies was acquired by said Bondholders' Committee and thereafter, for several years, the affairs of said two Companies were conducted by and under direction and control of the said Bondholders' Committee. But these defendants deny that all of the capital stock of both of said Companies was acquired by the Bondholders' Committee for virtually a nominal consideration.

They admit and say that on or about October 6th, 1880, the West Side Company executed and delivered unto the Oregon and California Railroad Company, an instrument in writing purporting to and which did grant, bargain, sell, assign, transfer and convey (not to merely "assign, transfer and convey," as stated on page 27 of the Bill) unto the Oregon and California Railroad Company, all franchises, rights, privileges and property then owned or possessed by the West Side Company, including the right, title and interest of the West Side Company in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits of the said Act of Congress approved May 4th 1870—as more fully appears by reference to the said instrument, a copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit C"—a duly authenticated copy of which deed of conveyance was filed in the Department of Interior on or about October 20th 1880. But these defendants deny that the said instrument was executed or delivered for the purpose of merging the West Side Company into the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or for any purpose other than that therein stated and apparent on the face thereof.

These defendants say that the said instrument was and is a sincere and bona fide deed of sale and conveyance, the true meaning, purpose and intent of which is set forth and stated therein. They deny that the purpose, intent or effect thereof was or is not to operate as a sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by the said Act of Congress approved May 4th 1870, but to constitute the Oregon and California Railroad Company the successor of the West Side Company to construct, complete and equip the line of railroad aforesaid, and particularly that part thereof extending from Forest Grove to Astoria, or in aid thereof to receive or exercise the grants, franchises or other benefits in that behalf extended by Congress as aforesaid, or upon all of the terms aforesaid, and not otherwise; but in this behalf they say that the said instrument did constitute the Oregon and California Railroad Company the grantee of the West Side Company by sale and deed of conveyance as aforesaid, of all the rights and property therein described.

They deny that on or about October 6th 1880, the West Side Company became and was dissolved; but they admit and say that at all times since the execution and delivery of the said deed of conveyance, the Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed to be, and the United States has recognized and treated it as, the successor in interest by purchase and deed of conveyance of the West Side Company, of, in and to all franchises, rights and property described in the said deed.

They admit that some, but deny that all, transactions set forth in the Bill as of date subsequent to October 6th 1880, relate to or affect both of said grants of land.

VI.

These defendants admit and say that on or about May 7th 1881, the financial affairs of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were adjusted, substantially but not wholly, as follows: All of the capital stock was by action of its Board of Directors and its Stockholders canceled; but they deny that said stock was so canceled for reasons set forth in the Bill. They admit that the amount of capital stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company was then established at, has ever since remained and still is of, the total par value of $19,000,000, consisting of $12,000,000 preferred stock and $7,000,000 common stock; and that in payment of its then existing indebtedness, with accrued interest thereon, all of the said new capital stock was then issued, and ever since has been and still is outstanding. They admit and say that by the issuance of the new capital stock, and use of a part of the proceeds of the new bond issue referred to on page 30 of the Bill all of the then existing indebtedness of the Oregon and California Railroad Company was fully paid and discharged, and the several mortgages and instruments purporting to secure the same were canceled and satisfied.

They admit that on June 2nd 1881, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered to Henry Villard, Robert Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees for the owners and holders of the said preferred stock, an instrument in writing which purported to and did convey to said Trustees all of the lands of both of the said land grants, in trust to secure to the owners of the said preferred stock a right and interest (not merely "some pretended right or interest," as is alleged on page 29 of this Bill) in and to the lands of the said land-grants, as more particularly appears in the said instrument, a copy of which is attached to the Bill (pages 104 to 129) as "Exhibit D" and made part thereof. In this behalf these defendants say, that the said "Exhibit D" was made, executed and delivered subject to the prior Trust Mortgage of June 1st, 1881, referred to and described in the first paragraph on page 110 of the Bill, as is expressly stated by the said Trust Mortgage ("Exhibit D" to the Bill) in the second paragraph on page 114 of the Bill.

They admit and say, that "Exhibit D" purports to convey by way of mortgage, and purports to authorize said Trustees and their successors, in case of grantor's failure to make the payments therein provided for, to sell and convey the mortgaged lands to persons other than actual settlers, and in quantities greater than one quarter-section to one purchaser, and for a price exceeding $2.50 per acre. But these defendants deny that the said instrument purports to convey or that it purports to authorize the Trustees to convey, the said lands for purposes other than those prescribed in or by the said land-grants, respectively; and they deny that the said instrument was or is in violation or breach of any terms or conditions of each or either of the said land-grants.

They admit that on or about June 28th 1881, said trust mortgage was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, Oregon, in Book 27 of Mortgages at page 179; and that thereafter, and about the same time, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several Counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by either of said land-grants.

They admit that thereafter such proceedings were had and taken under the provisions of the said instrument "Exhibit D" to the Bill, by and with the consent and co-operation of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, that the defendant Stephen T. Gage became the sole surviving Trustee thereunder; and they admit and say that the said Stephen T. Gage as such Trustee (but not individually), and that the defendant Southern Pacific Company as present owner of the said preferred stock, claim and assert a lien upon the said lands, under and by virtue of the said Trust Mortgage, in accordance with the terms and provisions thereof; and deny that neither of said defendants have any right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon all or any part of the said lands.

They admit that by the issuance and negotiations of its corporate bonds, bearing date June 1st 1881, and May 26th, 1883, respectively, known and designated as "First Mortgage Bonds" and "Second Mortgage Bonds," respectively, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company provided approximately $5,000,000 further construction funds; and admit that on or about June 1st 1881, the work of constructing the East Side railroad was resumed and thereafter continued until about January 1884; and they admit that between June 1st 1881, and January 1884, the East Side railroad was constructed and extended from Roseburg to a point about 1½ miles southerly from Ashland, in the State of Oregon, a distance of approximately 145 miles.

These defendants admit that about January 1884, the last-mentioned construction funds became exhausted, and the work of construction was discontinued until about April 1887, when it was resumed; but they deny that the work of construction was at any time abandoned.

They admit and say that on or about January 19th

1885, default having been made in the payment of interest on the said First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds, a suit was brought in the United States Circuit Court for the District of Oregon, by holders of said Bonds, against the Oregon & California Railroad Company and others as defendants; in which suit, and on or about January 19th 1885, the railroads and other property of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were, by order of the said Court, placed in the hands of a Receiver appointed for that purpose.

They deny that on or about May 12th 1887, or during the pendency of said receivership, the defendant Southern Pacific Company acquired, or thereafter exercised, ownership or control of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, except that about the year 1901 the defendant Southern Pacific Company acquired certain capital stock of the Oregon & California Railroad Company and thereafter exercised the ordinary rights and privileges as such stockholder; and they deny that during the pendency of said receivership, or at any time, any breach or violation of any condition or conditions of the said land-grants or either of them was or were committeed under the direction or influence of the said Southern Pacific Company, or at all.

These defendants admit and say, that on May 12th 1887, the general status of the said land-grants was as follows:

Under the East Side grant, during the years 1871 to 1877, inclusive, patents for 323,078.68 acres of land (being land contiguous to the first 125 miles of the East Side railroad) were applied for by and issued to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company as owner of the East Side grant under and by virtue of the said Deed of March 29th 1870 ("Exhibit B" to Bill); and admit that no patents were issued for lands of the East Side grant prior to the year 1898, except the said patents issued during the years 1871 to 1877, inclusive; but they deny that the said patents were applied for by or issued to the Oregon & California Railroad Company as the successor of the East Side Company (as alleged in the Bill), except as owner of the East Side grant by and under the said deed from the East Side Company.

No patents under the West Side grant were issued prior to the year 1895.

The total length of the East Side railroad is, approximately, 367 miles; with the exception of the northerly 197 miles thereof no part of the East Side railroad was constructed within the times prescribed by the terms of the said East Side grant; and on May 12th 1887, the portion thereof extending from Ashland to the southern boundary line of the State of Oregon, remained unconstructed. That part of the West Side railroad extending from Forest Grove to Astoria was never constructed, and because thereof the granted lands contiguous to said unconstructed railroad were, by Act of Congress approved January 31st 1885 and entitled "An Act to declare forfeiture of certain lands granted to aid in the construction of a railroad in Oregon.", forfeited to and the ownership thereof resumed by the United States.

Of the aforesaid granted lands, 164,992.48 acres (not "approximately 250,000 acres" as stated in the Bill) were sold by the Oregon and California Railroad Company prior to May 12th 1887. Nearly all of said lands were sold to actual settlers, and in small quantities, although in a few instances in quantities exceeding 160 acres to a single person and for prices slightly in excess of $2.50 per acre; but such sales were so made for the reasons hereinafter setforth, and not because of any provisions in the said Joint Resolution of April 10th 1869, or section 4 of the said Act of May 4th 1870.

VII.

These defendants deny that about the month of January 1885, or at any time, a certain railroad syndicate known as the "Southern Pacific System," controlling substantially all railroad lines in the southwestern part of the United States and particularly on the Pacific Coast south of the State of Oregon, including the Central Pacific Railroad Company, organized under the general incorporation laws of the State of Kentucky, or otherwise, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as a general holding Company for the said or any syndicate; and they deny that about the month of March, 1885, or at any time, the defendant Southern Pacific Company acquired or ever since has exercised a controlling or any interest in each of the corporations constituting said "Southern Pacific System"; and deny that at about the same, or at any, time the Southern Pacific Company became or ever since has been the lessee of each of said corporations, whereby it came into possession of, or at all or any times has operated all of said railroad lines.

They deny that several of the constituent Companies of the said "Southern Pacific System" held lands granted by the United States in aid of the construction of their respective lines of railroad, aggregating many millions of acres of land, or that there is or ever was such organization or syndicate as "Southern Pacific System"; and they deny that shortly after its organization, or at any time, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, established a general, or any, Land Department, with offices at the City of San Francisco, in the State of California, or elsewhere, under the charge of a person known as its Land Agent, or otherwise, or that thereupon or thereafter the Southern Pacific Company assumed or exercised through such Land Agent, control over the handling or disposing of all or any lands of its constituent Companies.

They deny that shortly after the affairs of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company were placed in the hands of a Receiver as aforesaid, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, designing to extend its aforesaid or any railroad system or its aforesaid or any land holdings by acquiring ownership or control of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, in that behalf, or otherwise entered into negotiations with the Oregon & California Railroad Company or the Bondholders or Stockholders thereof or other parties named in the Bill; but admit and say that the Stockholders of the Oregon and California Railroad Company became and were organized under the name "Stockholders' Committee," and that certain of the owners of the aforesaid Morgtage Bonds became and were organized under the name "Frankfort Bondholders' Committee," and that certain other of the owners of said bonds became and were organized under the name "London Bondholders' Committee"—said Bondholders' Committees representing the owners of substantially all of the aforesaid First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds; but they deny that any of the said Committees was or were organized for any of the purposes setforth in the Bill.

These defendants admit that on or about March 28th 1887, a certain contract in writing was made and entered into by and between the parties therein named, a copy of which contract, marked "Exhibit E," is attached to the Bill.

They deny that by virtue of the said contract or otherwise, all or any corporate securities of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company was or were acquired by the defendant Southern Pacific Company; and deny that the general or any purpose or effect of the said contract was such that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company or its said lines of railroad, were absorbed by, or merged into, said Southern Pacific System, or that the independent corporate existence of the Oregon & California Railroad Company ceased, virtually or at all. They deny that it appears from the subsequent conduct of the Southern Pacific Company, or otherwise, or that it is in anywise true, that at the time of the negotiation and execution of the said contract, or at any time, it was the purpose or design of the defendant Southern Pacific Company to secure control of the aforesaid land grants, or either of them, or to divert the same from the aforesaid or any lawful uses or purposes thereof, to the exclusive or any use, benefit or enrichment of the Southern Pacific Company, or at all; and they deny that the said contract was by the parties thereto so conditioned, or the conditions, options or provisions thereof were so exercised or performed, that the Southern Pacific Company did thereafter, or at any time, maintain the Oregon and California Railroad Company, a corporation in name or form only, as a mere instrumentality or device, to accomplish or at the same time to conceal its aforesaid, or any, purpose or design, or in that behalf, or otherwise, to obtain or dispose of said lands in the name of or under the guise or pretense of administration or exercise of the aforesaid land-grants, or either of them, by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company; and they deny that to that end certain or any proceedings were had or transactions entered into, including that certain contract or lease, or that certain mortgage deed, hereinafter setforth.

These defendants admit that on or about May 12th 1887, all of the capital stock and all of the Second Mortgage Bonds of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, were transferred, assigned and delivered unto the said Pacific Improvement Company; and all of the said First Mortgage Bonds were transferred, assigned and delivered unto the defendant Southern Pacific Company; but deny that such or any of such transfers, assignments or delivery were made wholly pursuant to the said contract. In this behalf they say that the said contract of March 28th 1887, was made and entered into pursuant to the provisions of, and for the reasons set forth in, the Agreement dated October 11th 1886, between the Central Pacific Railroad Company, Pacific Improvement Company, and Southern Pacific Company, a copy of which is attached to this Answer, marked "Exhibit No. 1," and made part hereof.

They admit that during all times mentioned in the Bill as to it, the Pacific Improvement Company was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California; but they deny that the said Company was wholly owned, controlled or directed by the owners of a majority of the capital stock of the defendant Southern Pacific Company. They deny that the defendant Southern Pacific Company was the actual purchaser of the said capital stock or Second Mortgage Bonds or any thereof, or paid the purchase price therefor, or any thereof; and deny that the Pacific Improvement Company never had any beneficial interest therein. They deny that under the direction or influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, the Pacific Improvement Company was made a nominal party to the said contract of March 28th 1887, for the purpose of concealing the true facts in the premises; and say that the Pacific Improvement Company was a real, and not in anywise a nominal, party to the said contract.

These defendants deny that the Pacific Improvement Company held the said capital stock of the Oregon & California Railroad Company, or any thereof, for the use or benefit of the Southern Pacific Company until on or about April 9th 1901, or at any time; but admit that on or about April 9th 1901, all of the said capital stock then held by the Pacific Improvement Company was sold and transferred to the Southern Pacific Company, which last-named Company has ever since remained the owner and holder thereof. They deny that at all, or any, times since May 12th 1887, the defendant Southern Pacific Company has controlled or directed the election of directors or officers of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, or has directed or controlled the management or conduct or corporate acts of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, including all or any of the transactions or proceedings setforth in the Bill.

They admit and say that on or about January 3rd 1888, the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company made and entered into the Lease a copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit F," whereby all of the railroads and other property of the Oregon and California Railroad Company used in connection with and for the operating purposes of said railroads (but not including any lands of either of said land-grants) were leased to the Southern Pacific Company for the term of forty years; and they admit that the said lease remained in full force and effect until on or about August 1st 1893, when the same defendants entered into a similar Lease of the same property for the term of thirty-four years, a copy of which last-mentioned lease is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit G"; and they admit that the Southern Pacific Company entered into possession of the leased property on or about June 6th 1888, under the first-mentioned lease, and at all times since has been, and still is, in possession thereof, operating the said railroads and enjoying all benefits and profits to which it is entitled, as such lessee.

These defendants say, that on or about February 17th 1885, the Central Pacific Railroad Company duly leased unto the defendant Southern Pacific Company, its railroad from Ogden to San Francisco and from Roseville Junction to Delta, for the consideration and according to the provisions of said Lease, a copy of which, marked "Exhibit No. 2," is hereto attached, and made part of this Answer; and on or about January 1st 1888, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company duly leased unto the said Southern Pacific Company, its railroad from Delta to connection with the Oregon & California Railroad Company at the southern boundary line of Oregon, a copy of which, marked "Exhibit No. 3," is hereto attached, and made part of this Answer; and under and in virtue of which Leases, "Exhibit F" and "Exhibit G" to the Bill, "Exhibit No. 2" and "Exhibit No.

3" to this Answer, the defendant Southern Pacific Company has continuously since on or about January 3rd 1888, maintained and operated the said railroad from Portland to Roseville Junction as one continuous connected railroad, in conjunction with the said railroad from Ogden to San Francisco.

They admit and say that on or about January 3rd 1888, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company executed and delivered unto the defendant Union Trust Company, that certain instrument in writing dated July 1st 1887, a copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit H," purporting to and which did mortgage and convey in trust unto the Union Trust Company, lands and property of the Oregon & California Railroad Company therein described, for the uses and purposes therein setforth, and among other things to secure the payment of certain bonds to be issued and sold by and in the name of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company; but they deny that the said instrument was executed under the direction or influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company.

These defendants admit that by the provision in the last-mentioned instrument "And all the property, real, personal or mixed, which on the 12th day of May, 1887, was covered by the mortgage securing the then existing First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon & California Railroad Company", reference was had and intended to be had to a certain deed of trust executed by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Brether-ton, as Trustees, dated June 1st 1881, a copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit I"; and they admit that on January 18th 1888, the said Mortgage Deed of July 1st 1887, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, in Book 63 of Mortgages, at page 287 (not page 437, as stated in the Bill), and about the same time was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of each of the several Counties in which was situated any of the lands granted by either of said land-grants.

They admit and say that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company executed and delivered, and that the said defendant (but not the Southern Pacific Company, or Union Trust Company, as stated in the Bill) sold and delivered certain of the bonds provided for by the said Mortgage Deed of July 1st 1887, of which approximately $17,500,000 in amount are still outstanding; and they admit that the proceeds of said bonds were used to pay the cost of constructing, completing and improving the said Oregon and California Railroad Company's railroads; and they admit that payment of the said bonds, both as to principal and interest, was and is guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company's endorsement. But they deny that any proceeds from the sale of the said bonds were used by the defendant Southern Pacific Company to purchase securities of the Oregon & California Railroad Company; or that the said bonds inured to the exclusive or any benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company; or that the outstanding bonds in fact, or at all, represent or constitute the or any indebtedness of defendant Southern Pacific Company. They admit that the said Mortgage Deed of July 1st 1887, purports to convey by way of mortgage to secure payment of the said bonds, and in case of default in payment thereof authorizes the defendant Union Trust Company to convey at public auction to satisfy the amount due by reason of such default, the said lands, without express limitations or restriction on such sales as to persons, quantity of land or price; but they deny that the said Mortgage Deed purports to convey or authorize the defendant Union Trust Company to convey the said land, or any thereof, for any purpose or purposes other than those prescribed in and intended by the said land-grants, respectively; and they also deny that the said Mortgage Deed was or is in violation or breach of any terms or conditions of each or either of the said land-grants.

They admit and say that the defendant Union Trust Company, as Trustee for the owners and holders of the said bonds, claims and has a lien in, to and upon said granted lands, under and by virtue of said Mortgage Deed of July 1st 1887, according to the terms thereof; and deny that the defendant Union Trust Company has no right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon any of said lands either in its own behalf or as such Trustee.

They admit and say, that during the year 1887 the last section of the East Side railroad, extending from a point near Ashland to the southern boundary line of Oregon, was constructed by the said Pacific Improvement Company, under a contract with the Oregon & California Railroad Company, executed on or about June 6th 1887, by the terms of which the last-named Company agreed to pay for the said work of construction in its bonds thereafter to be issued and guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company; and they admit and say that a small part, but deny that a large part of the said section of railroad was constructed prior to execution of the said contract. And they deny that the said construction or any part thereof was under some or any form of contract with the defendant Southern Pacific Company, other than the said Agreement of October 11th 1886, a copy of which is hereto attached as "Exhibit No. 1"; or that in furtherance of any purpose or design setforth in the Bill, otherwise or at all, the Southern Pacific Company, on or about June 6th 1887 or at any time, instigated or caused the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company or the Pacific Improvement Company to enter into the said contract, except as setforth in said Exhibit No. 1."

They admit that on or about June 6th 1888, the aforesaid receivership proceedings were dismissed and the Receiver was discharged, and all of the said First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds (not including the bonds issued under the Mortgage Deed of July 1st 1887), together with all Mortgages and Trust Deeds securing payment thereof, were canceled and discharged; and they admit and say that thereupon and ever since the defendant Southern Pacific Company has continued in possession, pursuant to the hereinbefore mentioned Lease ("Exhibit F" to the Bill), of all property of the Oregon & California Railroad Company described in the said Lease.

VIII.

These defendants deny that immediately after June 6th 1888, or at any time, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, through its aforesaid Land Department, or otherwise, assumed or at all or any times thereafter exercised, absolute or any control over the disposition or sale of the aforesaid granted lands of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, or any thereof, conducting all or any business, however, in the name of the latter Company, or otherwise; and in this behalf they say that the Southern Pacific Company has not now nor did it at any time have, a Land Department.

They admit that until the year 1893, and say that continuously thereafter, there was no marked change in the manner of the disposition of said lands; and deny that in the meantime, or at any time, under the direction or influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, or at all, preparations were made for future exploitation of the said land-grants or for any examination or administration thereof otherwise than by the Oregon & California Railroad Company in the same but not in any different manner or way than the said lands had been theretofore exploited, examined and administered by the said Company.

They admit and say that long prior to but not about the month of June 1888, a sufficient but not a large force of land examiners and timber cruisers were employed by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, and that such force was kept employed for many years before and after June 1888, and until considerable but not all of the said lands had been examined and prices fixed thereon; but they deny that as to at least eighty per cent of all of said granted lands the first or any sale price as fixed thereon, or that the lowest price for which the same were ever offered for sale, was greatly or at all, in excess of the sum of $2.50 per acre.

They deny that during the years 1891 and 1892, or at any time, anticipating or seeking to evade responsibility for contemplated violations of any terms or conditions of said grants, or under the direction or influence of the Southern Pacific Company, the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company or Union Trust Company adopted quit-claim form of contracts or conveyances for use in making sales of said lands, or thereafter refused to contract for or give any other form of conveyance, except in execution of former contracts providing for a different conveyance.

In this behalf these defendants say, that during the years 1891 and 1892 the Land Department of the Central Pacific Railroad Company (owner of the land-grant in California made by the Act of July 25th 1866), and Oregon & California Railroad Company standardized their forms of contracts and deeds for the sale and conveyance of their land-grant lands, so as to establish a uniform system, and in that way the Oregon & California Railroad Company adopted certain forms of contracts and deeds then and for a long time theretofore in use by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, including a quit-claim form of contract and deed for use only in the sale of such right, title or interest as the Railroad Company had in such unpatented lands as were unsurveyed, interdicted mineral, or covered by pretended adverse claims; and that on or about the same time, and for the same reason, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company adopted and thereafter used the other forms of contracts and deeds in use by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, including the form generally known as "grant, bargain and sale" form, of contracts and deeds for the sale of patented lands.

These defendants admit and say, that lands of the East Side grant to the amount of 2,442,708.42 acres were patented to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company between the years 1893 and 1906, both years inclusive; and that lands of the West Side grant to the amount of 128,618.13 acres were patented to the said Company between the years 1895 and 1903, both years inclusive. But they say that the said patents were issued from time to time between said dates pursuant to applications therefor made from time to time, as the lands were surveyed and became susceptible of such applications, between the years 1876 and 1906; but they deny that no patent has been issued under either of said land-grants since the year 1906.

They deny that, in the meantime the defendant

Southern Pacific Company was engaged in developing a market or demand for said lands among wealthy land speculators or timber men, or at all, aided by the said Company's well-equipped organization therefor, or otherwise, or by an extensive or other acquaintance previously established by its, or any, Land Department, in the sale or disposition of other holdings in the Bill mentioned, or otherwise; but they admit and say that an increasing, but not a sudden, demand for the lands of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, arising out of and caused by the completion of its East Side road and connection thereof with the Central Pacific railroad, commenced about 1889 or 1890, and has continued ever since.

These defendants deny that, taking advantage of the opportunity to violate the terms or conditions of said land-grants, or either thereof, promoted or developed as alleged in the Bill, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, under the direction or influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, or otherwise, from about the year 1894 until about January 1st 1903, or at any time, sold or disposed of said granted lands, or any thereof, in manner or upon terms in violation or breach of the aforesaid terms or conditions of the said land-grants, or either thereof, or with the sole object of securing the greatest possible financial benefit therefrom, otherwise, or at all; and they deny in that behalf a large quantity of said land was sold to speculators or others for speculation. They admit that some of said land was sold to persons who were not actual settlers thereon and did not purchase the same for purposes of actual settlement, in quantities exceeding one quarter-section to one purchaser, and at prices exceeding $2.50 per acre. They say it is not true, as alleged in the Bill, that the said lands were sold generally in quantities of 1,000 to 45,000 acres to single purchasers at prices from $5.00 to $40.00 per acre; but they admit that in several instances lands in quantities of from 1,000 to 20,000 acres were sold to one purchaser at prices ranging from $5.00 to $20.00 per acre, in one instance at $35.00 per acre, and in one instance at $40.00 per acre, and in one instance a sale in excess of 20,000 acres and of 45,000 acres at $7.00 per acre, was made to a single purchaser; but in this behalf they say, as will be hereinafter more fully shown, that the average quantity sold to one purchaser of said lands is (approximately) 150 acres, the average gross price received therefor is (approximately) $5.00 per acre, and the average net price (after deducting taxes, costs of survey, patenting and administration)is (approximately) $1.50 per acre.

They admit that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has heretofore made approximately 5,306 sales, aggregating approximately 820,000 acres (being approximately 150 acres to each purchaser) ; and they admit that approximately 4,930 of said sales were for quantities not exceeding one quarter-section to one purchaser, aggregating 296,000 acres; and that approximately 376 of said sales were for quantities exceeding one quarter-section to one purchaser, aggregating ap-

They admit and say that, substantially, all of the said 524,000 acres (but deny that a considerable portion of the said 296,000 acres) were sold to persons other than actual settlers, who purchased the land for timber growing and not for settlement thereon, and at gross (but not at net) prices in excess of $2.50 per acre; and they admit that approximately, 478,000 acres of the said 524,000 acres were sold since the year 1897; and they also admit that approximately 370,000 acres thereof were sold to 38 purchasers in quantities exceeding 2,000 acres to each purchaser.

They admit that many, but deny that "nearly all," of the said sales were made by contracts providing for payment of purchase price in from five to ten equal annual installments, and execution of conveyance upon final payment; and they admit that in some instances, but deny that in many instances, conveyances under said contracts were executed after January 1st, 1903; and they admit that a few, but deny that many, of said contracts were still pending at the time this suit was brought.

They admit and say, that of the total sales made as aforesaid, 4,508 have been fully executed and conveyances given, aggregating 740,002.45 acres; and that 571 executory contracts are still pending, aggregating 81,684.31 acres.

These defendants say, that the true facts and particulars respecting the matters and things setforth in the first three paragraphs on page 44 of the Bill, are as follows: Many of the said sales by executed conveyances, were made in pursuance of two or more executory contracts issued to one or several persons and assigned by such person or persons to the person to whom the executed conveyances were given; hence, while as setforth in the next preceding paragraph of this Answer, 4,508 executory sales aggregating 740,002.45 acres of land, have been made, the records and files of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company do not show, nor can it now be ascertained, how many executed conveyances were issued in pursuance of such executory contracts, or to how many individuals such conveyances were made. In this behalf they say, for the reasons given, "Exhibit J" attached to the Bill is erroneous and misleading; and that "Exhibit No. 4" attached to and made part of this Answer as a substitute for and in correction of the said "Exhibit J," is true and correct according to the information and belief of these defendants.

They admit and say that as betwen the parties thereto, and in fact and law, the said Mortgage Deed bearing date July 1st 1887, to the defendant Union Trust Company, has been treated as and is a lien upon all of said granted lands which remained unsold on May 12th 1887. They admit and say that all proceeds from the sale of the lands of the last described class which have been sold since May 12th 1887, have been paid over to and received by the Union Trust Company, and that the Union Trust Company, has joined in the execution of all of such executed conveyances; and they deny that the proceeds of all or any sales made since May 12th 1887, or at any time, inured to the exclusive or any benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, by application in payment of the aforesaid bonds or otherwise, except in so far as that by the payment of said bonds the Southern Pacific Company was to that extent released of liability as a guarantor.

IX.

These defendants deny that in the month of October 1901, or at any time, the defendant Southern Pacific Company, with all or any of its constituent lines, became merged into that certain railroad system known as the "Harriman Lines"; and they deny that a railroad system known as the "Harriman Lines," at all times thereafter or at any time held a monopoly of railroad transportation affecting a large or any part of the United States, or particularly or otherwise in the State of Oregon south of Portland.

They deny that thereupon or at any time, a Land Department was organized or established at the City of San Francisco, or elsewhere, to handle, exploit or manipulate all or any lands of the constituent or any Companies of said "Harriman Lines," including the aforesaid, or either, land-grants of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company; but they admit and say that all transactions concerning the last-named grants were conducted as before in the name of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company; and they admit that sales were continued as before until on or about January 1st 1903.

These defendants say that on April 30th 1911, there remained unsold of said granted lands 2,361,152.41 acres, of which 2,076,326.05 acres were theretofore patented, and 284,826.36 acres thereof at that time remained unpatented; all of which lands are now claimed by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company under and by virtue of the said land-grants. But they say that owing to the loss of certain original records by the April 1906, fire in San Francisco, withdrawn during the years 1904 or 1905 from the Land Department of the Oregon & California Railroad Company in Portland for the purpose of investigations then pending, these defendants are unable to say what quantity of said unsold lands, patented or unpatented, remained unsold on January 1st 1903; and, having no knowledge or information on the subject except as above stated, they deny that on January 1st 1903, there remained unsold of said granted lands aproximately 2,373,000 acres, consisting of approximately 2,080,000 acres which had been theretofore patented under said land-grants, and approximately 293,000 acres of unpatented lands which are now claimed by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company under and by virtue of the said land-grants.

They admit and say that approximately 1,800,000 acres of said unsold lands are situated southerly from Eugene, and constitute approximately one-third (but not "nearly one-half," as stated in the Bill) of the lands lying within twenty miles on each side of said line of railroad from Eugene to the southern boundary line of Oregon; and admit that only a small portion of the granted lands in that portion of the East Side grant have ever been sold; but deny that the territory in which said unsold lands are situated was or is wholly dependent on the railroad lines of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company now operated by the defendant Southern Pacific Company. They admit and say, that since January 1st 1903, and principally since the passage. on or about February 14th 1907, by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, of the Memorial a copy of which is attached as "Exhibit L" to the Bill, communications have been received by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, purporting to be the several applications of persons exceeding 1,000 in number, to purchase certain of said unsold lands, generally designated and described in such communications as a single 160-acre tract or quarter-section subdivision to each person named; but they deny that said applicants intended or desired to purchase the lands so applied for by them or in their names, respectively, for the purpose of actually settling thereupon or making a permanent or any home thereon; and they deny that several of said applicants had actually settled or established a permanent or any home upon the land so applied for by them or in their names, respectively; and they deny that at the time of said applications to purchase each of said applicants did actually tender to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company the sum of $2.50 for each acre so applied for, as the purchase price thereof.

They deny that in addition to the said applicants to purchase, a large or any number of persons are ready or willing to settle upon said lands or to purchase the same for the purpose of actually settling thereupon or of making a permanent or any home thereon, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres to each person, or for the price of $2.50 per acre, or upon any terms prescribed by the said land-grants, or are deterred therefrom by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, as stated in the Bill, or at all; and in this behalf they say that the said lands, generally, are essentially timber-lands, not susceptible of actual settlement, or the establishment of permanent or any homes upon; and they say, further, that all lands of the said land-grants now or at any time susceptible or capable of actual settlement or the establishment of homes upon at no time exceeded (approxmately) 300,000 acres, consisting of small and widely separated tracts, all or nearly all of which were sold to actual settlers or persons claiming to be such during construction and prior to completion, respectively, of said railroads, in quantities of 160 acres or less to a single purchaser, at prices not exceeding $2.50 per acre.

These defendants further say that the said applications to purchase said lands, referred to in the two next preceding paragraphs hereof, were made by persons desiring to obtain title to said respective quarter-sections on account of the timber thereon and not otherwise, and for the purpose of speculation only and not in good faith as actual or any settlers; and that the said lands were chiefly, and in most instances solely, of value because of the timber thereon and were not arable, fit for, susceptible or capable of, actual settlement.

They admit and say, that on or about January 1st 1903, pending examination into the records and affairs of its Land Department, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company withdrew from sale all of the said unsold lands; but deny that in violation or breach of any terms or conditions of said land-grants, or either of them, respectively, the Oregon & California Railroad Company, under the direction or influence of the defendant Southern Pacific Company as one of the constituent Companies of said "Harriman Lines," or otherwise, on or about January 1st 1903, or at any time, withdrew from sale all or any of said unsold lands; and they deny that at all the times thereafter the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has refused or still refuses to sell any part of said unsold lands to actual settlers, or for purposes of actual settlement, or in quantities or for prices as prescribed by any terms of the said land-grants, or either of them, or at all. They admit that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has at all times refused, and still, refuses to entertain any of the aforesaid pretended applications to purchase, or to sell any of the timber-lands applied for as aforesaid, to the persons who made or in whose names were made the said pretended applications, upon any terms offered or made under or pursuant to the said pretended applications; but they deny that ever since January 1st 1903, or at any time, the defendant

Oregon & California Railroad Company has failed or neglected to encourage or promote the settlement of any of the said lands which are susceptible to settlement for the establishment of homes upon, or the purchase thereof by actual settlers for the purpose of actual settlement; and they deny that by divers, or any, means or methods the Oregon & California Railroad Company has at all or any times discouraged, obstructed, forbidden or prevented the settlement of any of said lands which are susceptible of settlement, or the purchase thereof, or any part thereof, upon terms prescribed by the said land-grants, or either thereof, by actual settlers, or for the purpose of actual settlement.

They admit and say that since January 1st 1903, and at all times theretofore, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company assumed and asserted and has assumed and asserted an absolute and unconditional estate in and to all of said unsold lands; but deny that it at any time attempted, or is attempting, to convert any conditional estate into an unconditional estate, in violation or breach of any terms or conditions of the said land-grants, or at all. And they deny that by reason of any nominal character of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, or of any other premises setforth in the Bill, or at all, the unconditional estate in the said lands so asserted and claimed by and in the name of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, has inured to the benefit of or has been exercised by the defendant Southern Pacific Company as one of the constituent Companies of the said "Harriman Lines," or otherwise; and they deny that the practical, or any, effect of the premises is the same as if all or any part of said unsold lands had been conveyed to the defendant Southern Pacific Company for the use or benefit of said (so-called) "Railroad Syndicate," or otherwise.

These defendants deny that by virtue of the premises or in violation of the express terms or conditions as well as the plain or any intendment of the said land-grants, respectively, or otherwise, all or any of the said unsold lands or the full or any value thereof has or have been converted to the use or benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company, as one of the constituent Companies of the (so-called) "Harriman Lines," or otherwise; and deny that a virtual, or any, land monopoly has been created, or ever since January 1st 1903, or at any time, has been maintained, or hereafter will be maintained, for the selfish or any uses or purposes of the defendant Southern Pacific Company or said (so-called) "Railroad Syndicate," or otherwise, enabling said (so-called) "Railroad Syndicate," among other things, or at all, to control or restrict commercial or industrial development of the territory tributary to said line of railroad, or otherwise, or thereby prevent the construction or establishment of competing railroad lines which would naturally or otherwise, be attracted by the increase in production that would attend a normal or unrestricted development of industrial or commercial resources, if said granted land should be sold to actual settlers or for the purpose of actual settlement, pursuant to any terms or conditions of said land-grants, or otherwise.

They deny that because of the premises, or otherwise, the industrial or commercial or any development of those portions of the State of Oregon wherein are situated the said unsold lands, or any part thereof, has been or will continue to be seriously, or at all, retarded or completely, or otherwise, checked.

They admit that except as otherwise specifically stated, all statements contained in the Bill concerning the withdrawal of said lands from sale, the circumstances, purposes and effects thereof, together with the subsequent opportunities to sell said lands to actual settlers and for the purposes of actual settlement, and the conduct of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company in relation thereto, are by the Bill said to, but these defendants deny that they do, apply to each or either of said land-grants.

These defendants have no knowledge or information as to how, or from what sources, "Exhibit K" to the Bill was made or prepared, but to speed the cause admit that it was prepared and made from the returns and in the manner alleged in the third paragraph on page 49 of the Bill; and they admit that the said "Exhibit K" to the Bill contains a full and correct description of all unsold patented lands of the said grant, excepting as to the errors thereof and omissions therefrom particularly setforth in "Exhibit No. 5" attached to and made part of this Answer. For answer to the discovery asked by the last sentence of the said paragraph on page 49 of the Bill, a full and correct statement is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit No. 6," of all unsold, unpatented primary lands, and of all unsold selected but unpatented indemnity lands, claimed by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company under said land-grants.

They deny that none of said unsold lands have ever been reduced to possession, or in any way improved, unless it be by persons claiming to have settled thereupon, or seeking to purchase the same, as in the Bill stated; and deny that the reasonable present value of said unsold lands exceeds the sum of $40,000,000.

These defendants say, that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has at all times since the year 1870, been and still is in open and notorious possession of and dominion over the said lands, as follows: The said Company has at all said times openly and notoriously claimed, and prior to about the time of the commencement of this suit was recognized as and admitted by all to be such owner thereof; has, at all times, openly and publicly mortgaged, leased and offered for sale, the said lands; has at all times, caused the said lands to be protected by field-agents who traveled over and protected the same against depredation and waste; has, at all times paid the taxes levied and assessed upon and against the said lands—which payments amount, in all, to $1,827,234.10; and in divers other ways has openly and notoriously proclaimed and asserted, and been in, possession of, the said lands. Besides, large and different portions of said lands have been reduced to possession and improved, from year to year, by persons holding leases thereof for grazing and other purposes, from the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company; and other large portions of the said lands have been reduced to possession as right of way, station-grounds, depot-grounds, and the like for the railroad purposes of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, as is hereinafter more particularly shown.

These defendants deny that none of said unsold lands now are, or ever were, necessary to reserve for depots, stations, side-tracks, wood-sheds, standing-ground, or any other needful uses in operating any of said railroad lines or any part thereof; and deny that no part of said lands ever was reserved or used, or now is reserved or used, or is intended to be reserved or used, for any of said purposes. And in this behalf these defendants say that all the lands described in "Exhibit No. 7," hereto attached and made part of this Answer, are and at the time this suit was brought were necessary to reserve and were reserved for depots, stations, side-tracks, wood-sheds, standing-ground, and other needful uses in operating the said railroads; and they say that all the lands described in "Exhibit No. 8," attached to and made part of this Answer, now are and at the time this suit was brought were necesary to reserve and were reserved for the other needful uses in operating the said railroads particularly setforth in the said "Exhibit No. 8."

Answering the allegations made, and giving the discovery sought, by subdivision "X" on pages 50 and 51 of the Bill, these defendants say: That the following is a full and correct statement of the total amounts received by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, and disbursed by the said Company, from and in the sale and disposition of the lands of the East Side and West Side grants, from April 1st 1870, to April 30th 1911:

Received, from the sale of lands, ...		$4,338,822.53
Received, from the sale of timber on lands, ...		18,850.25
Received, from timber depredation settlements, ..		10,687.92
Disbursed, for advertising,	$34,784.85
Disbursed, for Law expenses, ...	218,415.25
Disbursed, for Grading lands, ...	142,651.40
Disbursed by U. S., surveying, &c.	145,977.26
Disbursed, salaries and office expenses, ...	624,344.19
Disbursed, stationery and printing, ...	18,369.89
Disbursed, taxes on lands,	1,827,234.10
Bal. net amount received.	1,356,583.76
Totals, ...	$4,368,360.70	$4,368,360.70

In addition to the said amounts, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company received the following amounts between April 1st 1870, and April 30th 1911, for which no land nor interest in land was disposed of or parted with; and in most instances such receipts were related to and arose out of the same lands accounted for above as disposed of:

Received, from forfeitures under contracts,	$ 88,205.06
Received, for interest on contracts,	1,025,922.89
Received, for land leases,	5,532.07
Total,	$1,119,660.02

They deny that in divers, or in any other ways, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has received or enjoyed financial benefits on account of said granted lands, the particulars concerning which are known or unknown to the complainant.

These defendants deny that any allegation or statement made in the said subdivision "X" of the Bill, contrary to or contradictory of the foregoing statement, is true wholly or in part; and in this behalf they say, that all moneys received, as aforesaid, from the sale or disposition of the said lands, were applied to cost of construction as the work thereof progressed, or to repay moneys procured under the mortgages hereinbefore setforth and used for the construction of, the East Side and West Side railroads.

XI.

These defendants deny that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has repeatedly threatened, or threatened at all, or still threatens, to or will unless restrained therefrom, sell, contract for sale, or in any manner encumber or impair the title of said unsold lands, or any part thereof, in violation of any terms or conditions of the said land-grants, or either of them; and they deny that the said defendant has heretofore cut large or any quantities of timber growing on said unsold lands or has otherwise committed waste thereon, or by contract or otherwise has permitted or invited others so to do, except as accounted for in subdivision "X" hereof; and they deny that the said Company threatens to, or will unless restrained therefrom by this Court, continue to commit waste upon said unsold lands, or any thereof, or particularly as to the timber or other natural products thereof, or will continue to permit, contract for or invite others so to do, to the great or irreparable or any injury of complainant in the premises.

XII.

These defendants admit and say, that prior to the completion of the construction of the Oregon & California Railroad and its connection with the California & Oregon Railroad at the Oregon-California boundary line, and thereafter until about the year 1890 (but not until the year 1894, as stated in the Bill) there was substantially no demand for said granted lands, except for the purpose of settlement or by persons of limited means able to purchase said lands only in small quantities and at reasonable prices; and they admit that nearly all sales made prior to the year1894 were of that character, to persons who purchased lands subject of settlement, and upon or adjacent to which they had established homes; and herein they admit and say that prior to the completion of the said railroad, timber lands, not being susceptible of settlement or the establishing of homes upon, had but little, if any, market value, and could not be sold at any price to any person. They admit that during a large part of said period the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company maintained an immigration bureau, engaged in inducing immigration and settlement upon such of said lands as were susceptible of actual settlement in good faith, but deny that said Company was not otherwise engaged in soliciting or promoting sales; and they deny that by reason of the premises, or otherwise, the occasional or any violations of terms or conditions of said land-grants or either of them during the said period were concealed or generally unknown, until ascertained by complainant as stated in the Bill; and in this behalf they say that the Oregon & California Railroad Company at all times, openly and to the actual knowledge of all persons concerned, including complainant, disposed of its said lands at the best price obtainable, in quantities desired by applicants to purchase; giving preference to actual settlers in quantities claimed and applied for by them, in the interest of railroad transportation and traffic—but not because of any provision in the said Joint Resolution of April 10th 1869, or Act of May 4th 1870.

They deny that a sudden demand arose for said lands commencing about the year 1894, among wealthy speculators or timber-men; but admit that the greater part of the so-called wrongs and violations complained of in the Bill transpired subsequent to that date. In this behalf they say, that nearly all of the said lands remaining unsold at the time of the completion of the construction of the East Side railroad and its connection with the Central Pacific railroad as aforesaid, were timber-lands, having small market value, and for which there was substantially no demand by purchasers at that time; but soon after transportation for lumber was opened by the completion and connection of the said railroads, the intermediate even-numbered Sections were entered by persons under the Timber-land Act and the commutation provisions of the Homestead Acts, who thereupon conveyed the lands so entered to single holders of many such adjoining tracts; and the increase in value of the Oregon & California Railroad Company's intermediate odd-sections of timber-land, arose out of the said completion and connection of railroads, and the demand therefor at increased and gradually increasing prices arose out of the need of ownership of the odd-sections by the owners of the intermediate even sections, who desired or sought to procure sufficiently large single timber-land holdings to justify the establishment and equipment of lumber mills and factories, to mill and market the timber product of said lands.

They deny that nearly all or that any except a few of the sales consummated after that time were made by executory contracts of sale which were not placed of record or which did not merge into deeds for many years thereafter, or otherwise than shortly thereafter, or that a considerable or other than a small portion thereof are still pending, or that any conveyances for excessive quantities of said lands were not placed of record until recently except as to a few or that many are still unrecorded except a few thereof. And in this behalf, they say that the conveyances relating to the transfer of the said lands both before and after the year 1894 and from the beginning were in the main and in substantial entirety made matters of open, public and continuing record and were matter of general and public knowledge and notoriety, at and about the time of the several and successive conveyances in which the transactions and dealings in respect to the said lands from the beginning were embodied, and continuously ever since, and were well known at all of such times to the Government and Land Department of the United States, and many and most of the contracts of sale, said contracts of sale being followed by such conveyances, were likewise made and continued to be matter of public record and knowledge and within the knowledge of the Government and Land Department of the United States; and they deny that in any instances of sales in excessive quantities (that term being understood herein to mean quantities in excess of 160 acres) the lands were conveyed or attempted to be conveyed by several deeds, each for a small quantity of land, or that thereby the true facts were concealed or that any such or any device of concealment was resorted to; and they say that, on the contrary, while no deed was issued for a lesser quantity than the sale in execution of which it was made, many deeds were issued to assignees of several contracts, in execution by a single deed of several or many executory contracts by apparently one transaction.

They admit and say that on or about January 1st 1903, all of said unsold lands were withdrawn from sale, pending investigation of Land Department transactions of the Oregon & California Railroad Company; but they deny that the said lands, or any thereof, were thereafter converted to certain or any wrongful or unlawful uses or purposes setforth in the Bill, or at all. They deny that, designing to conceal the premises from complainant or the general public, or at all, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, from time to time, or at all, falsely or deceitfully represented that said lands were withdrawn from sale for divers or other temporary reasons, or with the intention of resuming the sale thereof; and they deny that the alleged confusion of the records of said Land Department, or that the alleged destruction of the said records during the San Francisco fire, or other similar or any excuses were used successively, or at all, to conceal the true character of said transaction.

XIII.

These defendants deny that by reason of the premises, otherwise or at all, the several, or any, transactions characterized in the Bill as, or in fact, wrongful or unlawful, were concealed from or unknown to complainant until ascertained as stated in the Bill; and in this behalf they say that all of said transactions were open and notorious, and many if not all thereof actually known to complainant at the times thereof, respectively, or, soon thereafter, and complainant also had constructive notice of all or substantially all of the said transactions at or about the times thereof, respectively, commencing as early as March 1870, and continuously thereafter to the present time. They say that complainant at all times acquiesced in all, and in many instances expressly approved and ratified certain, of the said transactions; a few of the many instances of such acquiescence, approval and ratification, other than those hereinbefore and hereinafter setforth, are shown by "Exhibit No. 9" and "Exhibit No. 10," hereto attached and made part of this Answer. (On September 8, 1911, by order of court the following words were added by way of amendment: And by "Exhibit A" attached to and made a part of this amendment.

They admit that "Exhibit L" to the Bill is a correct copy of the original Memorial passed by the Legislature of Oregon on or about February 14th 1907; but say that it does not purport to, and does not, disclose any concealments made or said to have been made by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, and did not and could not have given complainant notice of any of the transactions characterized in the first paragraph on page 53 of the Bill as "concealed from and wholly unknown to" complainant; and in this behalf they say that all such transactions were conducted and made in the usual manner of conducting and making transactions of such character, and no concealment whatever was made or attempted to be made of any thereof. They deny that the said Memorial was made because of any injury inflicted upon the commercial or industrial conditions of the State of Oregon, or because of its having become manifest or of its being in anywise true that any representations made by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, were false; and in this behalf they say that the said Memorial was imposed and procured to be passed by the Oregon Legislature by a few influential politicians for interests personal to themselves and other persons, the facts respecting which are not disclosed therein, nor by the Bill.

They admit that on April 30th 1908, Congress passed the Joint Resolution, a copy of which is setforth on pages 53 and 54 of the Bill, in pursuance of and influenced by the said Memorial; and they admit that this suit was instituted pursuant to the said Joint Resolution; but in making this admission they do not concede, or admit, but on the contrary deny, that this is a suit brought in accordance with the provisions of the said Joint Resolution, or intent of Congress in adopting said Joint Resolution, or is one that the Attorney General has authority to bring in this Court under or in pursuance of the said Joint Resolution, or at all; and they deny that the Bill presents or shows any cause of suit or action which may be properly considered by a Court of Equity.

XIV.

These defendants deny that, because of the several, or any, breaches or violations of any terms, conditions or provisions of the said land-grants, respectively, either of them, or at all, certain or any of the said granted lands or estates therein, have been or are forfeited to the United States, free from any or all right, title, interest, lien or claim of these defendants or of the defendant Union Trust Company, or persons claiming by, through or under them or any of them, otherwise or at all; and in this behalf they say that they (these defendants), and all persons claiming through and under them, have an absolute and indefeasible right and title to all of the said lands and interests in lands described in the said Acts of July 25th 1866, and May 4th, 1870, as granted, or intended to be granted, by them, respectively.

They admit that the Attorney General, but deny that the United States, does by the Bill in this case assert title to lands and estates in lands described on page 55 of the Bill, by reason of alleged forfeiture thereof unto the United States; but they say that the assertion so made has no foundation in fact, nor authority in law; and they deny that the United States has resumed, or has lawful authority to resume, title to all or any of the said lands or interest in lands, pursuant to the said Joint Resolution of April 30th 1908, by the filing of said Bill, or otherwise. They say, upon advice of counsel which they believe to be correct, that were it in anywise true in fact or law, that the said lands or any thereof, or any interest therein, had or have become forfeited unto the United States for breach or violation of some or any condition in grant, the United States has a speedy, adequate and complete remedy at law respecting the same, and no question of fact as to such forfeiture can be enquired into or found, nor can such forfeiture be in anywise enforced, by this Court. Wherefore these defendants, reasserting their demurrer for no equity shown by the Bill, and denying especially the jurisdiction of this Court to hear or determine this cause in so far as it is, or purports to be, a suit to ascertain, determine, or enforce a forfeiture, file this Answer upon protest, and protesting against this Court's jurisdiction submit to trial because they must, under this Court's ruling on demurrer.

They deny that any estates or interests in lands other than the said unsold lands, described or referred to on page 55 of the Bill, have been sold in violation of any term or condition of the said land grants, or either of them; and they deny that any estate or interest therein which has or have been forfeited to the United States is not included in this suit because sold, contracted for sale, or disposed of in violation of any terms or conditions of said land-grants, otherwise or at all, to a large or any number of persons, or because such transactions, or any thereof, include alleged or any rights of succession by purchase, conveyance, mortgage, descent, devise or otherwise, or more than 3,000 or any number of persons, firms or corporations residing in divers or any parts of the United States or other parts of the World, who or which now assert or have some right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon any lands sold, contracted for sale or conveyed in violation of the or any terms or conditions of the said land-grants, or either of them. They say that they have no knowledge or information on the subject, and on that ground deny that the names or places of residence of only a few of the persons, firms or corporations referred to in the Bill are or were known to complainant; and on the same ground they deny that because of multiciplicity or complexity of said or any transactions, complainant was unable to ascertain them, any or all of them, in time to include said parties and all of them in this suit; and they deny that the said lands were sold or purchased, or that alleged subesquent rights have been acquired therein, as alleged in the Bill, or at all; and they deny that because of the premises, or at all, it would be inequitable to secure an adjudication of the rights of all or any of said parties by making only a few of them parties defendant as representatives of all or any thereof; and they deny that, to require the making of all of said persons, firms or corporations parties to this suit, or to otherwise require an adjudication herein of their or any of their respective rights in the premises, would indefinitely postpone or ultimately defeat the or any rights, equities or remedies of complainant pertaining to said unsold lands, or any lands; and they deny that the, or any, public interests require a speedy, or complete, or any, adjudication or enforcement, of any relief prayed, asked or suggested by the Bill; and they deny that this suit was brought in a sincere belief or expectation that complainant was entitled to, or could or would obtain the, or any, relief prayed for.

They deny that to the end that justice or equity may be suitably administered in the premises, or at all, this suit was instituted for the purpose of obtaining without unnecessary delay, or at all, an adjudication or enforcement of any rights, equities or remedies of complainant against these defendants, or any of them, pertaining to the said unsold lands, or at all; but say that since the bringing of this suit forty-five separate and further suits have been instituted in this Court by complainant against these defendants and others, for the pretended purpose of asserting and enforcing pretended rights, equities or remedies pertaining to certain of said granted lands duly sold or conveyed by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company to such other defendants, in alleged violation of some terms or conditions of the said land-grants, respectively.

XV.

These defendants admit and say, that the property described in the said mortgage deed of July 1st 1887, from the Oregon & California Railroad Company to the Union Trust Company, covered and included all lands granted by the said land-grants which remained unsold on May 12th 1887; and that the property described in said mortgage deed, including the said lands, exceeds in value the amount of bonded indebtedness secured thereby; but they deny that the said property exclusive of the said lands, exceeded in value the amount of said bonded debt, or was ample security therefor, at the time the said mortgage deed was given, or at any time prior thereto.

XVI.

These defendants admit and say, that pursuant to the rules and regulations of the Department of Interior in that behalf duly adopted and in force, all of the aforesaid patents were issued and based upon applications in writing therefor, from time to time filed in the proper land offices of the United States by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, as the assignee (but not as the "successor" otherwise than assignee by deeds of conveyance) of the East Side Company and West Side Company, respectively, by the aforesaid deeds of conveyance; and they admit that each of the said applications contained descriptive lists of the lands so applied for, and an affidavit of the duly authorized Land Agent of the said Company, sworn to by him, alleging that all of the lands so applied for were of the character contemplated by the grant under which they were claimed, and for which patents were applied for as aforesaid; and they admit that the patenting officers of the United States believed the statements made in the said applications and affidavits to be true. But they deny that the said patents, or any of them, were issued solely because of such statements, or affidavits, or belief of any officers of the United States therein; and say that the said patents, and all thereof, were duly issued pursuant to the records of the local and general land offices of the United States, and pursuant to due and diligent inquiry, investigation, report and determination by the proper officers of the United States, as to the true facts and particulars in that behalf which authorized and made it the duty of the said officers to issue the said patents, under and pursuant to the provisions of the said Acts of July 25th 1866, and May 4th 1870, respectively.

XVII.

These defendants say, that the true facts and particulars respecting the matters and things set forth in subdivision "XVII" of the Bill, are as follows:

For the purpose of reserving the right of way, and incidental grants, made by section 3 of the said Act of Congress of July 25th, 1866, and by the first section of the said Act of Congress of May 4th, 1870, and to protect the Oregon & California Railroad Company against such, if any, reservation as was made by the United States by inserting a clause in patents issued to said Company containing a clause "excepting and excluding all mineral land should any be found in the tracts aforesaid," the contracts and conveyances issued by the said

Company prior to about the year 1894, contained (substantially) the following reservation:

> "Reserving, however, a strip of land 100 feet wide, to be used by the Oregon and California Railroad Company for right of way or other railroad purposes, when the railroad of said Oregon and California Railroad Company or any of its branches is or shall be located upon the premises, and the right to use all water needed for the operating and repair of said railroad, and also reserving all claim of the United States to the same as mineral land."

By the case of Davis' Adm'r vs. Weibold, reported in 139 U. S. 507 et seq., the United States Supreme Court held (in effect) the said clause in patent "excepting and reserving all mineral lands" to be void and of no effect; and the same Court, on May 26th 1894, in Barden vs. Nor. Pac., reported in 154 U. S. 288 et seq., held (in effect) that minerals discovered in railroad land-grant lands after the issuance of patent therefor inured to the benefit of the Railroad Company under and by virtue of such patent. Thereupon the last clause of the above-quoted reservation, in contracts and conveyances issued by said Company, was changed by striking out the words "and also reserving all claim of the United States to the same as mineral land," and thereafter, but not until about the year 1902, the words: "and also reserving and excepting from said described premises so much thereof as may be mineral lands" was substituted for the said stricken out words.

They deny that said reservation, or any thereof, create a permanent estate or permanent estates in favor of the Oregon & California Railroad Company or these defendants in or to a large or any part of said granted lands in violation or breach of any terms or conditions of the said land-grants, or either of them, or that they or either or any of them are in anywise null or void. They admit and say that the Oregon & California Railroad Company claims absolute and indefeasible ownership (but not merely "some inchoate right, title or interest") in and to the premises so reserved; and deny that such ownership, or any right, title, or interest therein, is subject to the or any right of forfeiture or right, equity or remedy of complainant set forth in the bill, or which complainant has or at any time since the making of said grants, respectively, had.

XVIII.

These defendants admit and say that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company is, and claims to be, the owner of all of the said granted lands, patented and unpatented, not heretofore sold and transferred by its deeds of conveyance, together with all right of way and other rights and property granted by Section 3 of the said Act of July 25th 1866 and the first section of the said Act of May 4th 1870, and all rights and property reserved as aforesaid for any and all railroad purposes, and the improvements upon all of the said lands and property; and they admit and say that all of the said land and property is subject to the lien of the aforesaid Union Trust Company mortgage deed of July 1st 1887. They deny that any or all of such rights, titles, interests or liens were, or are, subject to any right of forfeiture, or to any other rights, equities or remedies of complainant, asserted or attempted to be asserted by the Bill herein, or which complainant has or at any time since the making of said grants, respectively, had.

XIX.

These defendants admit that "Exhibit M" attached to the Bill is, substantially, correct, in a general way, except that (a) the map of definite location from Jefferson to the south line of Township 27 South, Range 6 West, was filed on March 26th 1870, instead of March 29th 1870, as therein stated; (b) the map of definite location from the last-mentioned point to a point in Township 30 South, Range 5 West was filed on January 7th 1871, instead of March 2nd 1871, as therein stated; and (c) the map of definite location from the last-mentioned point to connection with the California & Oregon railroad was filed on August 18th 1884, instead of August 20th 1884, as therein stated.

They admit and say that "Exhibit N" attached to the Bill is, substantially, correct, in a general way, except that (a) the Commissioners' favorable report on the 7th, 8th and 9th sections of the East Side railroad was made on December 27th 1876, instead of July 10th 1878, as stated therein; (b) that the Commissioners' favorable report on the 10th section of the said railroad was made on August 6th 1883, instead of August 29th

1883 as stated therein; (c) that the Commissioners' report on the 11th section of said railroad was approved on January 3rd 1887, instead of January 29th 1887, as stated therein; and (d) that the Commissioners' report on the last section of said railroad was approved on April 18th 1889, instead of November 8th 1889, as therein stated.

They say that "Exhibit O" attached to the Bill is incorrect in so many particulars that "Exhibit No. 11" is hereto attached, and made part hereof, in correction thereof; and in this behalf they say that all the facts and figures given in "Exhibit No. 11" to this Answer are true and correct, according to the records of the Land Department of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, and information and belief of these defendants.

XX.

These defendants admit that "Exhibit P" attached to the Bill gives a correct list of the suits referred to, and that in so far as relevant or material to the purposes or requirements of this Answer subdivision "XX" of the Bill sufficiently states with reasonable accuracy the allegations and substance of the complainants filed in those suits. In this behalf they say that on or about December ———— 1908, all of the said suits other than the one brought by Roy W. Minkler were consolidated with this suit No. 3340; that thereafter, on or about January 15th 1909, all the persons other than the said Roy W. Minkler named as complainants in "Exhibit P" to the Bill, filed herein their cross-complaints, each and all of which was and were dismissed by the order of this Court made and entered on April 24th, 1911; and that on or about June 9th 1910, the said suit brought by Roy W. Minkler was duly dismissed by mutual consent of the parties thereto.

XXI.

These defendants say, that from the time of the making of said grants of land to the East Side Company and West Side Company, owned by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company since 1870 as to the East Side grant and since 1880 as to the West Side grant, about forty years has elapsed during which the United States has had actual and constructive notice, as hereinbefore set forth, of sales of lands thereof in quantities in excess of 160 acres to one purchaser other than an actual settler, at prices in excess of $2.50 per acre; during all of which time the United States, as hereinbefore stated, remained silent and apparently acquiesced in such sales.

During all of said time the United States has accepted and approved the said railroads as constructed, and has demanded and accepted (since as well as at all times before commencement of this suit) the free use and benefit of the said railroads in the transportation of troops and munitions of war, of the approximate total value of $1,000,000.

Because of the said acceptance, approval and use of the said railroads, and relying on the acquiscence of the United States in such sales, the defendant Oregon &

California has paid taxes on the said unsold lands to the amount of $1,827,234.10 as aforesaid, and the other costs and expenses set forth in subdivision "X" hereof, including the payment of $145,977.26 unto the United States for the costs of surveying and patenting of the said lands; no part of any of which sums has been paid, repaid or tendered to these defendants, or any of them.

And because of the said acceptance, approval and use of the said railroads, and reliance on the said acquiescence of the United States, the defendant Southern Pacific Company guaranteed the payment of (approximately) $17,500,000 in bonds still outstanding, issued and sold under the Trust Mortgage of July 1st, 1887, covering the said lands, as hereinbefore set forth.

XXII.

These defendants say that any and all causes of suit or action setforth in the Bill, are barred as follows:

(a). By section 391 of Lord's Oregon Laws.

(b). By section 8 of the Act of Congress approved March 3rd 1891, entitled "An Act to amend section 8 of an Act approved March 3rd 1891, entitled 'An Act to repeal Timber-culture laws, and for other purposes.'" published in Vol. 26, U. S. Statutes at Large, page 1093.

(c). By the first section of the Act of Congress approved March 2nd 1896, entitled "An Act to provide for the extension of time within which suits may be brought to vacate and annul land patents, and for other purposes," published in Vol. 29, U. S. Statutes at Large, page 42.

(d). By acquiescence, and laches, of complainant.

(Amendment allowed by leave of court, April 28, 1913, as follows:

That during all the times mentioned in the Bill of Complaint, and particularly from and after the 20th day of May, 1872, down to April 30, 1908, the United States well knew that the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and its predecessors in interest, had continuously and uniformly claimed to own said land grants in fee simple without any condition as to the sale of said lands, and as earned by construction of said roads, and had sold, mortgaged and conveyed the same to secure funds for the construction of said roads, and to refund said indebtedness for said construction funds, by the execution of certain of the mortgages described in said Bill of Complaint, and other mortgages, and the negotiation and sale of bonds issued thereunder, and that the said present outstanding stock of the said Oregon and California Railroad Company was issued and delivered to the owners and holders of the mortgage bonds issued and sold under said mortgage of April 15, 1870, and in satisfaction of said mortgage, and that the proceeds of said bonds were used in the construction of the first 198 miles of the East Side road and of said 47½ miles of said West Side road, and the United States during all said time from May 20, 1872, down to April 30, 1908, well knew the way and manner in which said Oregon and California Railroad Company continuously and uniformly was administering and had administered said land grants, and was selling and had sold said land granted by said Acts of Congress, and during all said times well knew that said company was selling and had sold said lands so sold by it without any particular regard to the alleged limitations or restrictions of said Act of April 10, 1869, or said Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, except insofar as the same may be construed to apply to actual settlers upon any of said lands prior to completion of the separate sections of said roads and the acceptance thereof by the United States, as provided by said Act of July 25, 1866, and said act of May 4, 1870, and the direction of the President to issue patents for the lands so earned, and that notwithstanding such knowledge during all said time between May 20, 1872, and April 30, 1908, of all said matters. and of all the matters and things alleged in the Bill of Complaint as pretended breaches of the provisions of said Act of April 10, 1869, and Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, and notwithstanding such knowledge during all said time of all the matters and things alleged in the Joint and Several Answer of the defendants, as heretofore filed and amended, the United States, from said May 20, 1872, to April 30, 1908, asserted no claim of any breach, made no objection to the execution of said deeds, mortgages or conveyances, or to any action of the company in respect to the administration of said grants, or either of them, or the sale of any lands thereby granted, and in no wise asserted any claim that the company was at any time misconstruing said acts, or either thereof, or in any way was violating or had violated said Act of April 10, 1869, or said Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, but on the contrary the United States permitted and allowed the company to mortgage said lands to secure said construction funds so borrowed and used, as aforesaid, and permitted and allowed the company to expend large sums of money in surveying fees and other fees paid to the United States, and to expend large sums of money in taxes upon said lands, and in advertising said lands for sale, and in examining, cruising and grading said lands as timber lands, and also large sums of money in completing said railroad in the first instance from Portland to Roseburg, Oregon, and next in extending the same from Roseburg to Ashland, Oregon, and finally in completing the same to the Oregon and California State line, and also in completing said railroad from Portland to McMinnville, Oregon, and during all said times the United States exacted from said company, and said company furnished, the free transportation of the troops and property of the United States, as required by said Act of July 25, 1866, at the cost and expense of said company, aggregating a sum in excess of $600,000.00; that relying upon the acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, the Oregon and California Railroad Company expended all said sums, as aforesaid, incurred all said liabilities, and so mortgaged, sold and conveyed said lands, claiming to own the same in fee simple without any condition; applied for, accepted and placed of record all the patents issued by the United States for such lands, and so sold and conveyed to purchasers such portions of said granted lands as alleged in said Bill of Complaint, and has applied the proceeds of said sales, and of all sales of said lands, to the redemption of said bonds so issued to secure said construction funds:

That on the 31st day of July, 1885, the Oregon and California Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company, relying upon the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, executed and delivered the agreement of that date, identified as Exhibit No. 9 to the Stipulation as to the Facts on file herein and which is made a part hereof, and to which reference is made as if the same were fully written herein; and on October 11, 1886, said Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Pacific Improvement Company, and the Southern Pacific Company, relying upon the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, executed and delivered the agreement of that date, identified as Exhibit No. 1 to the Joint and Several Answer of the defendants herein and which is made a part hereof, and to which reference is made as if the same were fully written herein; and on March 28, 1887, the Stockholders' Reconstruction Committee of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the London Bondholders' Committee, the Frankfort Bondholders' Committee, the Southern Pacific Company and the Union Trust Company, relying upon the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, executed and delivered the agreement of that date, identified as Exhibit "E" to the Bill of Complaint, and which is made a part hereof, and to which reference is made as if the same were fully written herein, and thereafter the parties to all said agreements, relying upon the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, consummated, carried out and performed said several agreements, and in pursuance thereof, and in reliance upon said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, the said Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered, on January 3, 1888, its said mortgage and trust deed of date July 1, 1887, to the Union Trust Company, and issued and delivered its bonds thereunder to the amount of $20,000,000.00, and said Southern Pacific Company, being the owner of all the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, caused said Pacific Improvement Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company to purchase the said stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for its benefit, and otherwise carried out said agreements, and then and there guaranteed to pay the principal and interest of all said bonds so issued and to be issued by said Oregon and California Railroad Company; that in reliance upon said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, the Southern Pacific Company thereby purchased and became the owner of all said stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and assumed the debts and liabilities of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and caused said railroad to be constructed to the Oregon and California state line, and thereby guaranteed to pay all said bonds, principal and interest, and became the beneficial owner of all said granted lands then unsold, and but for said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, said Southern Pacific Company would not have purchased said stock nor assumed said debts and liabilities nor caused said road to be constructed to completion nor guaranteed said bonds, principal or interest, and the Oregon and California Railroad Company would have been unable to sell or dispose of its railroad or said land grants, or either of them, or completed said railroad, as required by said Act of Congress, and its creditors would have been compelled to foreclose said existing mortgage securing the then outstanding bonds and sell all said property, to the great injury and loss of said company and its creditors, and to the great injury and loss of the United States. That the United States, from July 31, 1885, up to April 30, 1908, and during all said time, well knew of the existence of all of said agreements, including the said mortgage of date July 1, 1887, and of the purpose and intention of all the parties thereto, and of all the matters and things hereinbefore set out, and notwithstanding such knowledge during all of said time from July 31, 1885, to April 30, 1908, and of all the matters and things alleged in the Bill of Complaint as pretended breaches of the provisions of said Act of April 10, 1869, and Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, asserted no claim of any breach, made no objection to the execution or performance of either of said contracts or of the execution of said mortgage of date July 1, 1887, or to any action of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in respect to the administration of said grants, or either of them, or the sale of the lands thereby granted, and in no wise asserted any claim that the company was at any time misconstruing said acts, or either of them, or was in any way violating or had violated said Act of April 10, 1869, or said Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870.

That from time to time the United States caused to be enacted divers and various statutes affecting said Act of July 25, 1866, as amended April 10, 1869, and said Act of May 4, 1870, some of which are the Act of May 3, 1879, (20 Stat. 472) by which homestead settlers on the even sections within the limits of said grant, could enter 160 acres instead of 80 acres; the Timber and Stone Act of June 3, 1878, (20 Stat. 89) by which the lands of the United States in the even sections within the limits of the grant, could be purchased at $2.50 per acre, in quantities of 160 acres, without any settlement, by any citizens, or any person who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States; and the Act of March 3, 1891, (26 Stat. 1097) by which the pre-emption laws were repealed; and the act of June 4, 1897, (30 Stat. 1136) by which lands owned by any one within forest reserves of the United States, could be reconveyed to the United States, and thereby exchanged for the even sections within the limits of said grants, without any settlement thereon; and the Act of February 10, 1909, (35 Stat. 639); and the Act of June 17, 1910, (36 Stat. 531); and the Act of June 6, 1912, (37

Stat. 123), all amending the Homestead Act of May 20, 1862, (12 Stat. 392); that said statutes and the due administration of the same, as applied to the character and class of lands involved in this suit, which are chiefly valuable for timber and are unfit for settlement, and all lands belonging to the company now unsold, have prevented the company from further compliance with the provisions of said Act of April 10, 1869, or said Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, than as alleged in the Bill of Complaint.

That on August 20, 1912, Congress passed an Act, Public No. 278, H. R. 22002, approved that date, entitled, "An Act supplementing the Joint Resolution of Congress, approved April 30, 1908, entitled, 'Joint Resolution instructing the Attorney General to institute certain proceedings, etc.,'" whereby the United States, in substance and effect, waived the alleged breaches of said Act of April 10, 1869, and Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, as to all the lands described in the Bill of Complaint and now owned by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and particularly as to all said lands sold to persons other than actual settlers, in quantities of 1000 acres or more, and aggregating about 400,000 acres, and particularly described in forty-five suits brought by the United States against said purchasers and these defendants in this court, to which said suits and the proceedings therein, reference is here made as if the same were fully written herein and made a part hereof, and whereby the United States has agreed to convey by patent all said lands to said so-called innocent purchasers in said suits for $2.50 per acre, and whereby the United States has so waived said alleged breaches and so agreed to sell and convey said lands because said lands are and were at the time of such sales so made by the company, unfit for settlement or cultivation and not adapted to entry or settlement under the settlement laws of the United States or under said Act of April 10, 1869, or Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, and because said lands are and were at the time of such sales, chiefly valuable for timber.

That but for the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, said Oregon and California Railroad Company would not have expended said sums, as aforesaid, or otherwise done as it has done, as aforesaid.

And the defendants therefore say and allege that by reason of all the matters, things and acts hereinafter set out, and by reason of the matters and things in the premises, alleged in their said Joint and Several Answer, as heretofore amended and now herein amended, the United States has fully, effectually and finally exercised and waived any and all right it may have had at any time to claim or assert forfeiture of any lands of the said grants, and is and of right ought to be estopped from having or asserting any such or any claim of forfeiture.)

These defendants further say, that by reason of the matters, things and premises aforesaid, and by reason of the passage by Congress of the Act approved January 31st, 1885, entitled "An Act to declare forfeiture of certain lands granted to aid in the construction of a railroad in Oregon," made part of this Answer by reference to it as published in Vol. 23, U. S. Statutes at Large, page 296, and the passage by Congress of the Act approved September 29th, 1890, entitled "An Act to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes," made part of this Answer by reference to it as published in Vol. 26, U. S. Statutes at Large, page 496 and following, the United States fully and finally exercised and waived any and all right it may have had to claim or assert forfeiture of any lands of the said East Side grant or West Side grant, and is thereby estopped from having or asserting any such claim or forfeiture.

Wherefore, these defendants having fully answered, confessed, traversed and avoided or denied all the material matters in said Bill according to their best knowledge, information and belief, pray that they may be hence dismissed, with their reasonable costs and charges so unjustly sustained.

Exhibit No. 1

This Agreement, made and entered into on the eleventh day of October, 1886, between the Central Pacific Railroad Company, party of the first part, the Pacific Improvement Company, party of the second part, and the Southern Pacific Company, party of the third part, Witnesseth:

That Whereas: The Central Pacific Railroad Company is the succesor in interest of the California and Oregon Railroad Company, mentioned in the act of Congress of July 25, 1866, entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from the Central Pacific Railroad, in California to Portland, in Oregon"; and

W*hereas,* the said Central Pacific Railroad Company has constructed a portion of the line contemplated by said Act of Congress, to-wit, that portion between Roseville Junction on the Central Pacific Railroad, and the town of Delta; and

Whereas, about one hundred and four miles of the line between Roseville Junction and the Southern boundary line of Oregon, as contemplated in said Act of Congress has not been constructed; and

Whereas, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, charged by said Act of Congress with the construction of that portion of the said line of railroad between Portland in Oregon, and the Northern boundary line of California, has been in an embarrassed condition, and has been unable to complete its road to said boundary line; and

Whereas, until the whole of said line is completed making a through connection between Portland in Oregon and the City of San Francisco in California, no part of said line can be advantageously or profitably operated, nor the Act of Congress in relation thereto be carried into effect according to the spirit and intent thereof, to wit, the construction and maintenance of a continuous Railroad between the said Cities, which the Government of the United States may use for the transportation of its property, troops and munitions of war when necessary, and to aid in the construction of which has granted quantities of the Public lands; and

Whereas, the completion by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company of its own road to the Southern boundary line of Oregon without assurance of the completion of that portion of the road from Portland to said boundary line would be a waste of money, the road having to be constructed through a rugged and mountainous country at great expense and without sustaining local traffic; and

Whereas, it is of the greatest importance to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, that it should have an opening into Oregon both for local traffic and the through business of the two Cities and also to furnish business for its entire line from Ogden. Now Therefore:

for the purpose of completing its said road, and of securing the completion of the road between the California State Line and Portland, Oregon, thus making a through line between said Cities of Portland and San Francisco, and a connection with the Union Pacific Railroad at Ogden, and in order to secure the business of the Northern portion of the State of California and as much as possible of the business of the State of Oregon and to bring such business to its line from Ogden, and for the purpose and with the intent of carrying into effect the provisions of said Act of Congress, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, hereby covenants and agrees with the said Pacific Improvement Company;

First: That the said Pacific Improvement Company shall in a good workmanlike manner construct, finish, furnish and complete the Railroad and Telegraph Line of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, commencing at a point near the said town of Delta and running thence in a general Northerly direction by the most practicable route to a point on the Southern boundary line of Oregon, there to connect with the road of the said Oregon and California Company a distance of one hundred and four miles, as near as may be together with the rolling stock, buildings, instruments, and fixtures thereof; that is to say, to construct, finish and complete all the clearing, grading, excavations, embankments, ditches, drains, masonry, culverts, bridges, trestling and necessary fencing, and furnish all the ties, timber, rails, all the chairs, fish-plates, spikes, frogs and switches, lay and complete all the main line of track and all side tracks, spur-tracks, and turnout necessary, usual and proper for a single track railroad; also all necessary and proper buildings and erections for stations, freight and passenger depots, water-tanks, turntables, engine houses, section houses, work and repair shops, with all the tools, furniture and implements necessary and proper therefor, also to furnish and place on said railroad all necessary and proper rolling stock instruments and equipments, including locomotives, passenger, box, freight, baggage, platform, dump and hand cars, for the proper and successful working and repairing of said Railroad and Telegraph Line, said rolling stock to be furnished and delivered, as the same may be required by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company not to exceed the following quantity and proportion, namely, one locomotive for every eight miles of road constructed under the contract; one passenger car for every five miles of road, three box and flat cars for every mile of road; the proportion of each to be determined by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, one hand car for every six miles of road; such number of dump cars as may be required for maintaining the line, said railroad to be constructed and complete to a point at or near Klamath River within twelve months from the date hereof, and to the Southern boundary line of Oregon as soon as the said Oregon and California Railroad is completed to said line.

Second: That the said Pacific Improvement Company, shall furnish and pay for all the engineer service necessary or requisite for the location and construction of said railroad and its appurtenances, such location and construction to be subject to the approval of the President or Chief Engineer of said Central Pacific Railroad Company, who may direct such changes to be made as they may deem proper; But, the salary of the Chief Engineer shall be paid by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company.

Third: That the said Pacific Improvement Company, will pay all the costs, damages and other expenses incurred in obtaining right of way for the construction of said road and to that end the Central Pacific Railroad Company agrees that it may use the name of the said Company in any legal steps found necessary to be taken in securing such right of way.

Fourth: That the said Pacific Improvement Company will within a reasonable time and as soon as it can be done to the best advantage purchase, obtain possession and control of the said Oregon and California Railroad, or, that it will within a reasonable time purchase the whole of, or a majority of the shares of the Capital Stock of said Oregon and California Railroad Company, and in either event will within a reasonable time complete or cause to be completed, the said Oregon and California Railroad, to a connection with the Central Pacific Railroad at a point on the boundary line between California and Oregon, and as the case may be will enter into or will cause the said Oregon and California Railroad Company to enter into a contract perpetual with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, its successors or assigns, that the said Oregon and California Railroad shall be operated in harmony with the said Central Pacific Ralroad, prorating for services and covenanting therein never to give to any other railroad company any better terms for through traffic and for the interchange of business than it gives to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, its successors or assigns.

Fifth: That the said Pacific Improvement Company shall and will repay to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company within one hundred and twenty days from the date hereof all sums of money with interest thereon, at the rate of six per cent per annum heretofore by the said railroad company expended upon that portion of its aforesaid line of Railroad and Telegraph Line lying north of Delta, and that if said railroad company has not fully paid all the costs and expenses incurred as aforesaid, the said improvement company will assume the whole thereof and will upon demand pay off and discharge the same, or that if the said railroad company is compelled to pay the same or any part thereof the said Improvement Company will within one hundred and twenty days after notice thereof, repay to the said railroad company the full amount of any such payment or payments, with interest at the rate aforesaid; and

nants and agrees with the other parties to this contract that in consideration of the advantages to be derived by it from the bringing of business to the main lines of the Central Pacific Railroad, it will when said through line is completed, finished and ready for operation enter into an agreement in writing with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company whereby it shall lease from said Company that portion of said line between Roseville Junction and the State Line not now included within its lease and will increase the consideration of twelve hundred thousand dollars, guaranteed rental mentioned in the existing lease as much in proportion as eighty thousand shares of the Capital Stock of said Central Pacific Road shall bear to the whole amount of capital of said company now issued, and will also increase the limit of the maximum rental of thirty-six hundred thousand dollars therein provided for in like proportion, and that it will transport and convey free of charge over the lines operated by it in California north of San Francisco all agents, laborers and employes and all provisions, tools, iron and other materials and all other property employed or used, or to be employed or used in and about the construction of said Railroad and Telegraph Line, and their appurtenances by or for said Pacific Improvement Company; and

The said Central Pacific Railroad Company hereby covenants and agrees to and with the said Pacific Improvement Company that in consideration of the premises and of the faithful performance of the covenants herein contained to be kept, observed and performed by said Pacific Improvement Company, it will upon the execution of this agreement issue and deliver to said company eighty thousand shares of its capital stock and in addition thereto it will pay to said Pacific Improvement Company four million five hundred thousand dollars, in mortgage bonds as follows: when one-half of the work on said road between Delta and the Oregon Line is completed, it will pay and deliver to said Pacific Improvement Company all of its first mortgage bonds now un-issued part of an issue by it heretofore provided for, to be used toward the construction of its railroad between Roseville Junction and said Oregon Line, and that it will pay to said Pacific Improvement Company the balance of said four million five hundred thousand dollars of bonds in its mortgage bonds, part of an issue by it provided for an Indenture of mortgage by it made to William E. Brown, and Frank S. Douty, bearing date October First, 1886, and that it will make said last mentioned payment as the work on said road progresses, and sections of not less than ten miles between Delta and the Oregon State Line are completed and in the proportion which the completed section shall bear to the whole length of the road between the points last aforesaid.

In Testimony Whereof, The parties hereto have caused these presents to be signed by the respective Presidents and Secretaries, and their corporate seals to be hereunto affixed. Done in triplicate the day and year first herein written.

This Agreement, made and entered into this seventeenth (17) day of February, 1885, between the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky, and now doing business in the State of California, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation duly formed and existing under the laws of the State of California and the United States, witnesseth:

That Whereas part of the through business heretofore done by the Central Pacific Railroad Company's line from Ogden to the waters of the Pacific has been diverted by the Northern Pacific, Atlantic and Pacific, and Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroads;

And Whereas the Union Pacific Railroad Company has secured the control of the road known as the Oregon Short Line, and thereby secured an outlet to the Pacific, other than over the Central Pacific Railroad, and thus in that respect placed itself in opposition to the interests of the Central Pacific;

And Whereas it now appears that the through business, hitherto done by the Central Pacific Railroad, will thereby be further diverted; and that it is not only to the best interests of, but absolutely necessary that, the Central Pacific Railroad Company, in order to maintain itself against these diversions, should be operated in connection with a friendly through line to the waters of the Atlantic;

And Whereas the said Southern Pacific Company has a line of railroad under its control, for a period of ninety-nine years extending continuously from the Pacific Ocean to the Atlantic Ocean;

And Whereas the lines of each company are doing a large local traffic, and it is important to both that the same should be conducted in harmony;

And Whereas the said Southern Pacific Company is willing to enter into an agreement with the Central Pacific Railroad Company where its line and the line of the said Southern Pacific Company shall be operated so as to secure their just rights to each without the one gaining any benefit or advantage at the expense of the other, and whereby the Central Pacific Railroad Company may for a long term of years be assured of protection against the diversion of its traffic and be relieved of the disadvantages flowing from lack of harmonious connections;

And Whereas by reason of the facts before recited it is mutually advantageous to the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company to make such agreement;

And Whereas both companies contract in the knowledge that the future development of the country may change materially the relations of the companies to each other in respect to railroad traffic, and may in the future render any agreement now made, however fair in its terms in view of existing conditions, advantageous to one at the expense of the other, and thereby defeat the purposes which said companies desire and intend to accomplish by making this agreement;

And Whereas it is intended that such shall never be the effect of this agrement, therefore all the promises and covenants herein shall be construed in the light of the conditions now existing, and the arbitrators hereinafter named, in adjusting the terms and provisions of this agreement to a changed state of affairs, if such change should ever take place, must keep in view the main purpose of the parties to this agreement, to wit, that it is for the mutual advantage of both parties, and that neither is to be benefited at the expense of the other;

Now, Therefore, to accomplish the purposes aforesaid, in consideration of the premises and of the mutual promises herein, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company hereby leases to the said Southern Pacific Company, for the term of ninety-nine years, from the first day of April, A. D. 1885, the whole of its railroad situated in the Territory of Utah and States of Nevada and California, and known and designated as the Central Pacific Railroad, together with all the branches thereof, together with all the rolling stock, telegraph lines, steamboats, wharves, piers, depots, workshops, and all other property, real and personal, now owned, held, and possessed by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company and used upon, or in connection with, said railroad and telegraph lines, together with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging, with the right to possess, maintain, use, operate and enjoy the said property, and to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

And the said Central Pacific Railroad Company hereby assigns to the said Southern Pacific Company all the leases which it now holds of railroads and other property situated in said State of California, and lying and being north of the town of Goshen, in the County of Tulare, with the right to take, hold, operate, maintain and enjoy said railroads and other property in the same manner as the said Central Pacific Railroad Company holds, operates, enjoys, and maintains the same under the said leases, and with the right to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof.

And the said Central Pacific Railroad Company hereby releases the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation formed and existing under the laws of the United States and of the State of California, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation formed and existing under the laws of the Territory of Arizona, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation formed and existing under the laws of the Territory of New Mexico, and each of them, from all and every obligation under or by virtue of any and every lease made by said three last-mentioned railroad Companies, or either of them, to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, and transfers and surrenders unto the said Southern Pacific Company, the possession of all the property in said leases, or any of them mentioned or described, with the right to receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof free from all claim of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company to the same or any part thereof.

The said Southern Pacific Company agrees to and with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that it will keep and maintain the property hereby leased in good order, condition, and repair; operate, maintain, add to, and better the same, at its own expense; pay all taxes legally assessed against or levied thereon, and will at the termination of this lease return the same to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, or to its successors or assigns (with additions and betterments) in as good condition and repair as the same was at the date hereof.

And the said Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to and with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that it hereby assumes and will discharge all the liabilities and obligations of every kind (including its obligations on leases now held by it) of the said railroad company, except the obligation to pay the principal of said railroad company's indebtedness known as its "floating debt," and accept the obligation to pay the principal of the indebtedness of said railroad company known as its "bonded indebtedness," now outstanding and secured by mortgage or deed of trust, or which may be hereafter incurred under the provisions of any existing mortgage or deed of trust, or of any mortgage or deed of trust hereafter made with the consent of the Southern Pacific Company; and except the principal of all indebtedness the payment of which has heretofore been guaranteed by the Central Pacific Railroad Company; and except the principal of the indebtedness of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company evidenced by bonds of the United States heretofore by the government thereof loaned to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company. That as to such excepted indebtedness the said Southern Pacific Company will pay off and discharge at maturity the interest upon the same, except the interest upon the bonds of the United States loaned as aforesaid; and that, as to such bonds and the interest thereon, the said Southern Pacific Company will discharge the annual obligations imposed upon said Central Pacific Railroad Company by existing acts of Congress, and will during the continuance of this agreement, fully comply with the terms of, perform all the duties prescribed in, and discharge all the obligations imposed upon said Central Pacific Railroad Company by the act of Congress commonly known as the "Thurman Act."

And the said Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees to and with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that it will well and truly perform all the duties and obligations of said railroad company to the United States and the Government thereof under existing acts of Congress relating to the maintenance and operation of its railroad, and to transportation for said Government over the same, as fully and faithfuly as said railroad company is bound to do, except as otherwise hereinbefore provided.

And the said Southern Pacific Company agrees to and with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that it will keep true and faithful accounts of all the earnings of the said Central Pacific Railroad, including the earnings of the railroads now held by said Central Pacific Railroad Company under leases and situated north of Goshen, together with true and faithful accounts of all expenditures, payments and disbursements of every kind made by the said Southern Pacific Company in operating, maintaining, adding to, and bettering the same, and of all expenditures, payments, and disbursements made by the said Southern Pacific Company for taxes, rentals, interests, or in discharge of obligations incurred by said Southern Pacific Company under the provisions of this agreement hereinbefore contained: Provided, however, that any payments made by the said Southern Pacific Company to either of the said Southern Pacific railroads hereinbefore mentioned for rentals under the terms of existing leases in favor of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, and now assigned to the Southern Pacific Company, shall never be included in or made part of any charge against the said Central Pacific Railroad Company or the earnings of its said railroads.

And the said Southern Pacific Company hereby agrees with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that during the continuance of this lease it will annually, on the first Monday in May, pay to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, as guaranteed rental for said Central Pacific Railroad and other leased property for the year ending on the thirty-first day of December next preceding that date, the sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars ($1,200,000).

And the said Southern Pacific Company hereby further in this behalf agrees with the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that if the earnings of the said Central Pacific Railroad, and of the railroads situated north of Goshen now held by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company under leases, shall in any year during the continuance of this agreement exceed all expenditures, payments, and disbursements of every kind made by the said Southern Pacific Company for such year, in operating, maintaining, adding to, and bettering the same, and of all expenditures, payments, and disbursements made by the said Southern Pacific Company for taxes, rentals, interest, and in discharge of any of the obligations by said Southern Pacific Company incurred under this agreement, as heretofore provided, including the said sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars, then such excess for any such year not exceeding the sum of two million four hundred thousand dollars shall, on the first Monday in May, as aforesaid, be paid to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company as additional rental for such year.

And it is further agreed between said Southern Pacific Company and the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that if at any time it appears that by the operation of this agreement either party is being benefitted at the expense of the other, then this agreement shall be revised and changed, so that such will not be the operation thereof, and if the parties hereto can not agree upon the changes necessary to that end, then each party shall appoint one arbitrator, disinterested, but skilled in relation to the subject matter, and the award and decision of such arbitrators, in writing, shall be binding upon the parties hereto, and this agreement shall be revised and changed in accordance with such award and decision, and, as revised and changed, shall be duly executed in writing by the parties hereto.

And it is further agreed that if the arbitrators so chosen can not agree upon an award and decision, then that the two shall choose a third impartial and skilled arbitrator, and that the award or decision of two of said three arbitrators shall have the same force and effect between the parties hereto, and shall be executed in like manner as hereinbefore provided for the award and decision of the two arbitrators first chosen.

And it is further agreed between the said Southern Pacific Company and the said Central Pacific Railroad Company that if any legislation or governmental action hereafter be had which, in the opinion of the said Southern Pacific Company, is in hostility to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, its rights, or the property hereby leased, the said Southern Pacific Company may, on notice to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, terminate this agreement, or may submit to arbitrators, in the manner and with the effect hereinbefore provided for, changes and revisions.

And it is further agreed between the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company

that, upon the execution of this agreement, the said Southern Pacific Company may enter upon, take possession of, and hold during the continuance of this agreement all the property, real and personal, hereby leased by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company to the said Southern Pacific Company, and that duplicate lists of all the rolling stock and other personal and movable property so leased, showing its condition at the time of the execution of this agreement, shall be made and certified by the secretary of each of said companies, and that one of said lists shall be kept by each of said companies.

And it is further agreed between the Southern Pacific Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company that if at any time any of the rolling stock or other personal property hereby leased to the said Southern Pacific Company by said Central Pacific Railroad Company be used upon any roads other than the Central Pacific Railroad or the leased road north of Goshen, then the said Southern Pacific Company shall credit to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company the usual and customary sums paid by one railroad company to another for the use of the like property, and that the amounts so credited shall be deemed and taken to be a part of the earnings of said Central Pacific Railroad Company.

And it is further agreed that if, in the operation of said Central Pacific Railroad and leased roads north of Goshen, it becomes necessary to use any of the rolling stock or other personal property of the Southern Pacific Company, not leased from the Central Pacific Railroad Company, upon the said Central Pacific Railroad or leased roads north of Goshen, that the usual and customary sums paid by one railroad company to another for the use of like property, shall be allowed as, and constitute a charge against, the receipts of the said Central Pacific Railroad and said leased lines, and be so considered in the accounting hereinbefore provided for.

In Testimony Whereof, the said Southern Pacific Company and the said Central Pacific Railroad Company have caused these presents to be signed by their respective presidents, countersigned by their secretaries, and their corporate seals to be hereunto affixed, pursuant to orders of their respective boards of directors, the day and year first herein written.

This Agreement, made and entered into this first day of January, 1888, by and between the Southern Pacific Company, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Kentucky, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation duly formed and existing under the laws of the State of California and the United States:

Whereas heretofore and under date of February 17, 1885, an agreement of lease was made and executed by and between the parties hereto; and

Whereas since the date of the execution of such lease the lines of railroad of the Central Pacific Railroad Company have been extended from Delta, in the State of California, to the boundary line between the States of California and Oregon, forming at the last-mentioned point a connection with the line of railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company; and

Whereas since the execution of such lease, and in or about December, 1887, the said line of railroad to the boundary line between the States of California and Oregon, constituting part of the line from San Francisco, in California, to Portland, in Oregon, has been delivered by the Central Pacific Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company for operation, and the railroad properties operated by the Southern Pacific Company as lessee of the Central Pacific Railroad have been materially changed; and

Whereas by reason of the premises the Central Pacific Railroad Company has requested a modification of the terms and provisions of the agreement of lease above referred to;

Now, Therefore, This Agreement Witnesseth: That in consideration of the premises and of the sum of one dollar by each of the parties hereto to the other in hand paid, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, the parties hereto have undertaken, covenanted, and agreed, and do hereby undertake, covenant, and agree to and with each other, as follows, that is to say:

That the said Southern Pacific Company, in lieu and stead of and substitution for the payment of rental by it to said Central Pacific Railroad Company as in said lease prescribed, shall pay to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, on the first Monday in May, 1889, and on each first Monday of May thereafter during the continuance of said lease, as guaranteed rental for the year ending on December 31st next preceding that date, the sum of one million three hundred and sixty thousand dollars ($1,360,000) instead of the sum of one million two hundred thousand dollars ($1,200,000) which is in said original agreement prescribed, and is to be paid on the first day of May, 1888, in respect of the year ending December 31, 1887, and will pay to the Central Pacific Railroad Company on the first Monday of May in each year, as additional rental for the year terminating on December 31st, preceding, any excess up to but not beyond the sum of two million seven hundred and twenty thousand dollars of the earnings in such preceding year of the said Central Pacific Railroad above the expenditures, payments, and disbursements of every kind made by the Southern Pacific Company in operating, maintaining, adding to or bettering the same, or for taxes, rentals, interest, or in discharge of any of the obligations of said Southern Pacific Company incurred under said agreement of lease, or as the same is hereby modified, including the guaranteed rental above mentioned, and that the said agreement of lease shall be and is hereby modified accordingly.

In Witness Whereof the parties hereto have caused these presents to be signed by their respective second vice-presidents and countersigned by their respective secretaries, and their respective corporate seals to be hereunto affixed, pursuant to orders of their respective boards of directors, the day and year first above written.

Total East Side Grant.....2,017,560.61 acres

The following corrections shoud be made in the list of lands in Exhibit "K" to the Bill:

Yamhill County—Township 2 South, Range 5 West:

The 160 acres described in Section 1 should be eliminated from the list, the tract having been conveyed by deeds Nos. 295-E and 32-U, dated May 8, 1909, to Franklin Martin, in settlement of litigation instituted by Mr. Martin against Oregon and California Railroad Company prior to the institution of suit No. 3340.

There should be added to the tract described in Section 19 in the same township, the E½ of NE¼—80 acres, the same having been covered by contract No. 3271, which was canceled for default July 23, 1910.

In Township 3 South, Range 5 West, there should be added the NE¼ of SW¼ Sec. 7—40 acres, the same having been covered by contract No. 5858, which was canceled for default July 28th, 1910.

In Township 4 South, Range 5 West, the tract described as "S½ of S½ of SE¼ of SE¼ Sec. 31," 10.40 acres should be eliminated.

In Township 2 South, Range 6 West, the E½ of NE¼ and SW¼ Sec. 33, are correctly listed as East Side grant lands. They are situated within the indemnity limits of the East Side grant, and also within the primary limits of the West Side grant, and were erroneously patented as West Side lands.

In Township 4 South, Range 6 West, there should be eliminated from the list the SW¼ of SE¼ Sec 17—40 acres. This tract was condemned by the City of Sheridan for water supply purposes, pursuant to proceedings instituted prior to the institution of suit No. 3340, and payment was made by the city and accepted by the railroad company for the tract on October 12, 1908.

In the same township, the tract described in Sec. 31, the acreage is overstated—it should be 415.48; therefore 0.30 acre should be deducted.

To the total acres for Yamhill County should be added, in consequence of the foregoing corrections, 120 acres, and there should be deducted 210.70, making the true total of acres 27,029.50.

Clackamas County—Township 4 South, Range 1 East:

There should be added the NW¼ of NE¼ Sec 13—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 3319, which was canceled for default July 30, 1910.

Township 6, Range 2—The acreage for the tract in Sec. 5 is overstated—it should be 522.55 acres; therefore 30 acres should be deducted.

Same township—There should be added the S½ of NE¼ Sec. 17—80 acres; the tract having been covered by contracts Nos. 3345 and 3385, which were canceled for default July 28th, 1910.

Township 4, Range 3—There should be added the N½ of NW¼ Sec. 33—80 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 3530, which was canceled for default June 29th, 1909.

Township 5, Range 3—There should be added the NE¼ of NW¼ Sec. 11—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 3198, which was canceled for default July 30th, 1910.

Same township—There should be added Lot 1 in Sec. 31—53.32 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 2907, which was canceled for default July 30, 1910.

Township 6, Range 3—There should be added the NE¼ of NE¼ Sec. 7—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 5761, which was canceled for default July 28, 1910.

Same township—There should be added the E½ of NE¼ Sec. 19—80 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 5761, which was canceled for default July 28, 1910.

Township 3, Range 4—There should be added the E½ of SE¼ Sec. 27—80 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 3128, which was canceled for default July 3, 1909.

Township 4, Range 4—There should be added the SE¼ of SE¼ and Lot 9 of Sec. 9—59.02 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 3591, which was canceled for default June 29th, 1909.

Same township—There should be added the SW¼ of NE¼ and NW¼ of SE¼ Sec. 29—80 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 3528, which was canceled for default June 8, 1910.

In consequence of these changes, there should be added to the total acreage of Clackamas County, as stated in the exhibit, 632.34 acres, and there should be deducted 30 acres, making the true total for the county 89,764.41 acres.

Polk County—Township 7 South, Range 6 West:

The acreage for the tracts in Section 9 should read 316.70, a deduction of 1.30 acres.

In Township 8 South, Range 8 West, the acreage for the tracts in Section 1 should read 477.98 acres, a deduction of 1.02 acres.

In consequence of these changes, there should be deducted from the total acres as stated in Polk County, 2.32 acres, making the true total for the county 37,-015.47 acres.

Marion County—Township 8 South, Range 4 West:

Lot 9, in Sec. 1—7 acres, has been lost by the railroad company by adverse possession, and should therefore be eliminated from the list of unsold lands.

Township 8 South, Range 1 East—There should be added the NE¼ of SE¼ Lots 7 and 8, Sec. 9—58.16 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 3674, which was canceled for default July 30th, 1910.

Township 8 South, Range 4 East—The description "S½ Section 29" should be changed to read "SW¼; N½ of SE¼; SW¼ of SE¼, and Lot 1, Section 29."

In consequence of these changes, there should be added to the total acres in Marion County 58.16 acres, and there should be deducted 7 acres, making the true total for the county, 30,307.16 acres.

Benton County—Township 13 South, Range 7 West:

There should be added the N½ of SW¼ Sec. 21—80 acres; the same having been covered by contract No.

4853, which was canceled for default October 13, 1908. This increases the total acreage of Benton County to 53,706.99 acres.

Linn County—Township 9 South, Range 1 East:

There should be added the SE¼ of SW¼ Sec 23—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 5502, which was canceled for default July 28th, 1910.

Township 15, Range 2—The description of part of Sec. 19 should be amended to read as follows:

> "That part in Linn County, of Lot 3, and of SW¼ of SE¼ Sec. 19—19 acres," the remainder of the tract—137 acres—being in Lane County.

Township 15 South, Range 1 West—The acreage of Sec. 1 should read 586.85 acres, a reduction of 14.15 acres.

Same township—The portion of Sec. 9 should be amended to read: "All that part situated in Linn County, Sec. 9—377.50 acres," an increase of 57.50 acres.

Same township—The portion of Sec. 7 should be amended to read: "All that part situated in Linn County, containing 102.62 acres, a deduction of 57.38 acres.

Same township—The description of part of Sec. 11 should be amended to read: "NW¼ of NW¼ Sec. 11—40 acres," an increase of 25 acres.

By reason of these changes there should be added to the printed total of acres in Linn County, 122.50 acres, and there should be deducted 208.53 acres, making the true total for the county 61,880.20 acres.

Lane County—Following the description of lands in Township 22 South, Range 1 East, there should be inserted the following:

Township 15 South, Range 2 East:

"Lot 4, SE¼ of SW¼, part of Lot 3, and part of SW¼ of SE¼, in Lane County, Section 19—137 acres."

Township 15 South, Range 1 West:

The acres in Sec. 1 should read 53.99, an increase of 13.99 acres.

Same township—The acreage in Sec. 7 should read 553.94 acres, an increase of 56.94 acres.

Same township—The description of land in Sec. 9 should read: "Part of E½ in Lane County, Sec. 9—182.50 acres," a decrease of 57.50 acres.

Same township—The description of land in Sec. 11 should be amended to read SW¼ Sec 11—160 acres, a decrease of 25 acres.

Township 21 South, Range 2 West:

There should be added the NE¼ of NE¼ Sec. 31—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 6317, which was canceled for default July 29, 1909.

Township 21 South, Range 3 West:

There should be added the SE¼ of SW¼ Sec. 13—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 6667, which was canceled for default July 28th, 1910.

Township 20 South, Range 4 West:

There should be added the NW¼ of SE¼ Sec. 27—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 6596, which was canceled for default July 28th, 1910.

Township 21 South, Range 4 West:

The acreage of the tract in Sec. 3 should read 404.80, an increase of 39.80 acres.

Township 16 South, Range 5 West, Section 9, add "Lot 3."

Township 19 South, Range 5 West, Section 9, add "Lot 1."

In consequence of these changes, there should be added to the total acreage in Lane County 367.73 acres, and there should be deducted 82.50 acres, making the true total for the county 299,891.23 acres.

Douglas County—Township 30 South, Range 1 West:

The description "All Section 1" should be changed to read, "All (except Lots 1, 2, 3, 4,) Section 1."

There should be eliminated from the description of land in Sec. 9, the N½ of NE¼ and the N½ of SW¼—160 acres; the same being unpatented unselected indemnity land, in Forest Reserve, and therefore not at present subject to selection by the railroad company.

The description "All Section 13 should be changed to read, "All (except Lots 1, 2, 3, 4,) Section 13."

Township 31 South, Range 2 West—There should be added the SW¼ of Section 3, 160 acres; the SE¼ and N½ of Section 9, 480 acres; the NE¼ of NW¼ of Section 15, 40 acres; the SE¼ of SE¼ of Section 21, 40 acres.

Township 29, Range 3—There should be added the NW¼ of NE¼ Sec. 21—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 6416, which was canceled for default July 28th, 1910.

Township 26, Range 4—The acreage of Lot 5 in Sec. 7 should read 42.57 acres, a decrease of 4.26 acres.

Township 29, Range 4—There should be added Lot 1 in Sec. 5—39.04 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 6007, which was canceled for default July 28, 1910.

Township 22, Range 5—The description "S½ of N½ Section 27" should be changed to read "S½ of NE¼; SE¼ of NW¼; Lot 2, Section 27."

Township 28, Range 5—There should be added the SE¼ of NW¼ Sec. 25—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 4765, which was canceled for default August 2nd, 1910.

Township 20, Range 9—The acreage of tracts in Sec. 1 should read 714.47 acres, a decrease of 8 acres.

Township 21, Range 6—The description "W½ Sec. 25" should be changed to read "NW¼; NE¼ of SW¼; W½ of SW¼; Lot 3; Section 25."

Same township—There should be added the SE¼ of NE¼ Sec. 11—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 4439, which was canceled for default July 30, 1910.

There should be added 0.02 acre on account of error in footing in the exhibit.

Township 22, Range 10—The description "NW1/4 of SW1/4 Section 15" should be changed to read "Lot 16, Section 15."

By reason of these changes there should be added to the acreage of Douglas County 879.06 acres, and there should be deducted 167.26 acres, making the true total for the county 617,554.94 acres.

Josephine County—Township 36 South, Range 5 West:

There shoud be added the SW1/4 of NW1/4 Sec. 31 —44.23 acres; the same having been covered by contract 5825, which was canceled for default July 28, 1910.

There should be deducted on account of error in footing in the exhibit, 0.02 acre.

These changes make the true total of the county 167,525.19 acres.

Jackson County—Township 41 South, Range 2 East:

The description "N1/2 of N1/2, Section 13" should be changed to read "Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, Section 13". The description "N1/2 Section 15" should be changed to read "N1/2 of N1/2; Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, Section 15". The description "N1/2 Section 17" should be changed to read "N1/2 of N1/2; Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, Section 17."

Jackson County—Township 36 South, Range 3 East.

There should be added the NW1/4 of SW1/4 Sec 35 —40 acres; the same having been covered by contract

No. 6224, which was canceled for default July 28th, 1910.

Township 34 South, Range 1 West—All of Sec. 33 should read: "All Sec. 35."

Township 39 South, Range 2 West—There should be added the SW¼ of NE¼ Sec. 5—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 6103, which was canceled for default July 28th, 1910.

Township 37 South, Range 3 West.—The description "SW¼ Section 1" should be changed to read "NE¼ of SW¼; S½ of SW¼; Lot 5; of Section 1."

Township 40 South, Range 4 West.—There should be added the SE¼ of SE¼ Sec. 17—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract No. 4913, which was canceled for default July 29th, 1910.

Same township—There should be added the NW¼ of SE¼ Sec. 21—40 acres; which was also covered by contract No. 4913, canceled for default July 29th, 1910.

In consequence of these changes, the total acreage of Jackson County should be increased by 160 acres, making the true total 441,951.15 acres.

Klamath County—The acreage of the tracts in Sec. 1, Township 40 South, Range 6 East, should read 381.19 acres, a decrease of 3.81 acres. This makes the total acres in the county 43,011.19 acres.

Tillamook County—There are certain tracts listed in Exhibit "K" as being patented unsold lands in the West Side grant in Tillamook County, which should in fact be listed as being East Side grant lands. Certain of these lands are in the East Side indemnity limits, and were patented, and rightly so as East Side grant lands. Such lands are marked "A" in the following list; other lands are in the East Side indemnity limits, and were patented erroneously as West Side grant lands. Such lands are marked "B" in the following list:

"A" SE ¼ Sec. 7, T. 3 S., R. 6 W.....160 acres
"A" All Sec. 19, T. 3 S., R. 6 W.....666 acres
"A" All Sec. 31, T. 3 S., R. 6 W.....665 acres
"A" All Sec. 7, T. 4 S., R. 6 W.....662 acres
"B" SE ¼ Sec. 13, T. 3 S., R 7 W.....160 acres
"B" SE ¼ Sec. 23, T. 3 S., R. 7 W.....160 acres
"B" All Sec. 25, T. 3 S., R. 7 W.....640 acres
"B" All Sec. 35, T. 3 S., R. 7 W.....640 acres
"A" All Sec. 1, T. 4 S., R. 7 W.....642 acres
"A" NE ¼ and S ½ Sec. 3, T. 4 S., R. 7 W..482 acres
"A" E ½ of E ½, SW ¼ of SE ¼, S ½ of SW ¼ Sec. 9, T. 4 S., R. 7 W.....280 acres
"A" All Sec. 11, T. 4 S., R. 7 W.....640 acres
"A" N ½ of N ½ Sec. 13, T. 4 S., R. 7 W....160 acres
"A" N ½, N ½ of SW ¼, SE ¼ of SW ¼ and SE ¼ Sec. 15, T. 4 S., R. 7 W....600 acres

Total .....7,037 acres

These various changes make the true total of patented unsold lands in the East Side grant 2,017,560.61 acres.

WEST SIDE GRANT

Act of May 4th, 1870.

Following is a correct statement of the patented unsold lands of the West Side grant:

Clarke County, Washington....	212.50 acres
Columbia County, Oregon	17,678.83 acres
Tillamook County, Oregon.....	22,704. acres
Washington County, Oregon....	15,680. acres
Multnomah County, Oregon....	927. acres
Yamhill County, Oregon.....	1,563.11 acres
Total West Side grant.....	58,765.44 acres

The following changes should be made in the schedule of lands in "Exhibit K" to the Bill:

Clarke County—Township 3 North, Range 1 East.

There should be eliminated the N½ of SE¼ Sec. 33—80 acres; the same having been conveyed by deed No. 412-E, dated July 7th, 1910, in settlement of the Roy W. Minkler suit, which was instituted prior to the institution of suit No. 3340. Deducting the 80 acres in this tract from the printed total, leaves a true total for the county of 212.50 acres.

Tillamook County—Township 3 South, Range 6 West:

The N½ and SW¼ Sec. 7—507 acres, is properly a part of the West Side grant, but was patented erroneously as being East Side lands.

Same township—The SE¼ Sec. 7—160 acres, should be eliminated as it is East Side land and so patented.

Same township—All Sec. 19—666 acres, and all Sec. 31—665 acres, should be eliminated as they are East Side lands and so patented.

Township 4, Range 6—All Sec. 7—662 acres, should be eliminated as it is East Side land and so patented.

Township 3, Range 7—SE¼ Sec. 13—160 acres, should be eliminated as it is East Side land, but erroneously patented as West Side land.

Same township—SE¼ Sec. 23—160 acres; all Sec. 25—640 acres and all Sec. 35—640 acres, should be eliminated for the same reason.

Township 4 South, Range 7 West:

	Acres
All Sec. 1	642
NE ¼ and S ½ Sec. 3	482
E ½ of E ½, SW ¼ of SE ¼ and S ½ of SW ¼ Sec. 9	280
All Sec. 11	640
All Sec. 13	640
N ½, N ½ of S W¼, SE ¼ of SW ¼ and SE ¼ Sec. 15	600

These lands should be eliminated because they are East Side lands and so patented.

In consequence of the elimination of these lands, aggregating 7,037 acres, the true total of patented unsold West Side lands in Tillamook County is 22,704 acres.

Washington County—Township 2 North, Range 3 West:

There should be added the SE¼ of SW¼ and SW¼ of SE¼ Sec. 3—80 acres; the same having been covered by contract W.S.—421, which was canceled for default July 23rd, 1910.

Same township—There should be added the SE¼ of SE¼ Sec. 7—40 acres; the same having been covered by contract W.S.—521, which was canceled for default July 23rd, 1910.

Same township—There should be added the NW¼ of SW¼ and NE¼ of SE¼ Sec. 11—80 acres; the same having been covered by contracts W.S.—509 and W.S.—385, which were canceled for default, July 30th, 1910.

Township 1 South, Range 5 West—All of the lands in this township (except N½ of NW¼ Sec. 15) are West Side grant lands and not within the East Side grant limits, but they were erroneously patented as East Side grant lands.

The note at the bottom of page 348 is in error in stating that the lands therein referred to have not been patented.

As herein shown, 200 acres are added to the Washington County list, making the true total for that county 15,680 acres.

Yamhill County—Township 3 South, Range 6 West:

The N½ Sec. 5 is in fact West Side grant land, and not within the East Side grant limits, but was erroneously patented as East Side grant lands.

By reason of these changes the true total of unsold West Side patented land is 58,765.44 acres.

Exhibit No. 6

SCHEDULE OF UNPATENTED LANDS REMAINING UNSOLD APRIL 30, 1911.

Described by Governmental Subdivision, Tabulated by Counties, and showing whether Surveyed Primary Lands, or Unsurveyed Primary Lands, or Selected Indemnity Lands, and separately stated as to East Side and West Side land grants.

Governmental Subdivisions and Sections are designated by abbreviations "N," "S," "E," "W," "NE," "NW," "SE" and "SW," meaning, respectively, North, South, East, West, Northeast, Northwest, Southeast and Southwest.

And afterwards, to-wit, on the 2nd day of January, 1912, there was duly FILED in said Court, an Amended Answer in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

[AMENDED ANSWER OF UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK]

[TITLE]

No. 3340.

The amended answer of Union Trust Company of New York, individually and as Trustee under the mortgage of the Oregon and California Railroad Company to this defendant, dated July 1st, 1887, in the bill called "Union Trust Company (individually and as trustees)," one of the above named defendants, to the bill of complaint of United States of America, complainant.

This defendant, now and at all times hereafter saving and reserving to itself all and all manner of benefits or advantages of exception which may be had or taken to the many errors, uncertainties, imperfections and insufficiencies in the complainant's said bill contained, for answer thereto, or unto so much or such parts thereof as this defendant is advised that it is material or necessary for it to make answer unto, answering, says:

I.

Answering the allegations contained in the first subdivision of the bill of complaint herein, this defendant admits that the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company now is, and at all times mentioned in the bill of complaint was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Oregon, and a resident and citizen of said State.

This defendant also admits that the defendant Southern Pacific Company now is, and at all times mentioned in the bill as to it, was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kentucky, and a resident and citizen of that State.

It also admits, upon information and belief, that the defendant, Stephen T. Gage, is a resident and citizen of the City of Oakland, State of California, and not of the City of San Francisco, as alleged in the bill, and is sued in his own right and also as sole surviving trustee under a certain deed of trust described in the bill.

It also admits that this defendant, Union Trust Company of New York, now is, and at all times mentioned in the bill of complaint as to it, was, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, and a resident and citizen of said State.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in said subdivision first of the bill, and therefore denies the same.

II.

Answering the allegations contained in the second subdivision of the bill of complaint, this defendant admits that Acts were passed by the Congress of the United States and approved on the 25th day of July, 1866, and on the 25th day of June, 1868, respectively, the provisions of which Acts are correctly set forth in said second subdivision of the bill.

III.

Answering the allegations contained in the third subdivision of the bill, this defendant denies, upon information and belief, that no right, title or interest in or to any of the grants, franchises or other benefits in the State of Oregon, provided for by said Act of Congress approved July 25th, 1866, was ever acquired by any corporation or person or otherwise, except at the time, in the manner and upon the terms and conditions set forth in said bill of complaint; and, on the contrary, avers that certain rights, titles and interests in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits in the State of Oregon, provided for by the said Act, were acquired by this defendant and other persons and corporations, as will hereinafter be shown, otherwise than at the times, in the manner, or upon the terms or conditions set forth in the bill.

Upon information and belief, this defendant admits that on or about October 6th, 1866, proceedings were had by which certain persons attempted to organize, under the general incorporation laws of the State of Oregon, a corporation bearing the corporate name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal office in the City of Portland, in the State of Oregon.

Upon information and belief, this defendant admits that the said Oregon Central Railroad Company projected its line of railroad from the City of Portland, in a westerly direction, through the village of Forest Grove, and thence southerly to and beyond the village of McMinnville, on the westerly side of the Willamette River; and it admits that thereafter the said company was known as the "West Side" Company and the said railroad was known as the "West Side" Railroad.

This defendant admits that on October 10th, 1866, the Legislature of the State of Oregon adopted, and the Governor of the State of Oregon approved, a joint resolution, which is correctly set forth on pages 11 and 12 of the bill.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that the said West Side Company, assuming itself to have been lawfully designated by said joint resolution, under the first section of said Act of July 25th, 1866, as the corporation to construct the portion of said railroad in Oregon and to thereby earn the lands granted by said Act pertaining to the portion of said railroad to be constructed in the State of Oregon, through its Board of Directors, adopted a resolution in terms assenting to said Act of July 25th, 1866, and on or about July 6th, 1867, filed an authenticated copy thereof, together with a certified copy of its Articles of Incorporation, and a certified copy of the said joint resolution of October 10th, 1866, in the office of the Secretary of the Interior.

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that on or about August 20th, 1868, said West Side Company filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, a map of survey of its projected line of railroad on the west side of said Willamette River, as hereinbefore set forth.

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that on or about April 22nd, 1867, certain persons, residents of the State of Oregon, then and thereafter contending that said West Side Company was never lawfully incorporated or organized, and designing to secure the several grants, franchises and other benefits of the said Act of Congress approved July 25th, 1866, caused certain proceedings to be had and taken which were intended to incorporate and organize, under the general incorporation laws of the State of Oregon, a corporation bearing the corporate name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," having its principal place of business at the City of Salem, in Oregon; which last named company projected its railroad from Portland southerly, along the easterly side of the Willamette River, and was thereafter known as the "East Side" Company, and its said railroad was thereafter known as the "East Side" railroad.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that the said East Side Company, in furtherance of its said design, on October 20th, 1868, procured to be adopted by the Legislature, and approved by the Governor, of Oregon, the joint resolution, a correct copy of which is set forth on pages 13 and 14 of the bill.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that a controversy arose between the West Side Company and the East Side Company as to which company was entitled to the grants, franchises and privileges made and provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, which controversy continued until about January, 1870.

This defendant denies that the said Act of July 25th, 1866, prescribed as a condition precedent to the vesting of any of the grants contained therein, that the company designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon should file in the Interior Department, within one year thereafter, or at all, its assent to said Act or any terms and conditions thereof, as alleged in the bill.

This defendant denies that the time within which to file an assent as aforesaid, had expired prior to the designation of the East Side Company by the Legislature of Oregon on October 20th, 1868, or otherwise than as provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866; and this defendant denies, upon information and belief, that because of any premises set forth in the bill, the East Side Company did apply to Congress during the session thereof commencing in December, 1868, or at any time, for an extension of the time within which to file its assent, as set forth in the bill; and further denies that in that behalf, or at all, the East Side Company did lay before Congress the said joint resolution of the Legislature of Oregon, or in that behalf, or at all, did represent that all or any of the recitals thereof were true; and this defendant further denies that because of any premises set forth in the bill, or then, or subsequently existing, the several or any of the grants, franchises or privileges of the said Act of July 25th, 1866, had lapsed, or the or any benefits thereof would be wholly, or at all, lost to the State of Oregon unless revived by Congress, in the manner set forth in the bill, or otherwise, or at all.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that the said Act of July 25th, 1866, authorized and empowered the California & Oregon Railroad Company, and such company, if any, organized, under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of that State should designate, or either of said companies, to construct a continuous railroad from Portland, in Oregon, to connection, on the same track gauge, with the Central Pacific Railroad in California; that under and pursuant to the provisions of the said Act the said California & Oregon Railroad Company duly filed its assent to the said Act on or about October 8th, 1866, and duly completed the first twenty-mile section of the said railroad from its connection with the Central Pacific Railroad northerly through the Sacramento Valley to the Town of Wheatland on or about October 28th, 1867; and that thereafter, prior to December, 1887, the said California & Oregon Railroad Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, its successor by amalgamation and consolidation, completed construction of the railroad in California provided for by the said Act of Congress, and aided the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company to complete its railroad from Ashland, in Oregon, to a connection with said California & Oregon railroad, at or near the southern boundary line of Oregon. And this defendant avers, upon information and belief, that the said filing of assent and construction, and subsequent acceptance by the United States of the said railroad as constructed, constituted such full and specific performance of the requirements of the said Act of 1866 as that none of the provisions of Section 8 thereof were at any time operative, wholly or in part.

This defendant admits that Congress passed the Act approved April 10, 1869, and that the same is correctly set forth in the bill at pages 15 and 16 thereof; but it denies that by said Act the Congress expressly, or otherwise, imposed any condition that the lands granted by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, should be sold to actual settlers only, and in quantities not greater than one quarter-section to one purchaser and at a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre, as set forth in said bill.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about June 8th, 1869, the Board of Directors of the East Side Company adopted the resolution correctly set forth on pages 16 and 17 of the bill; and that on or about June 24th, 1869, a certified copy of the said resolution was filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about October 29th, 1869, the East Side Company filed in the Secretary of the Interior's office a map of survey and location of the first sixty miles of its projected railroad; that on December 24th, 1869, the said company completed construction of the first twenty miles of the said railroad commencing at Portland; and that on December 31st, 1869, the said twenty miles of constructed railroad was examined and approved by Commissioners appointed by the President of the United States pursuant to the provisions of Section 4 of the said Act of July 25th, 1866.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the said West Side Company did not complete the construction of any part of its line of railroad pursuant to the terms and conditions of said Acts of Congress, or that at any time did said West Side Company acquiesce in the substitution of the said East Side Company, as alleged in the bill, and denies that there was any substitution of said East Side Company, as alleged.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that said West Side Company obtained and accepted a grant of lands, franchises and benefits pertaining to so much of its aforesaid projected railroad as extended from Portland by way of Forest Grove to McMinnville, and pertaining to a contemplated railroad from Forest Grove northerly to Astoria, conferred by Act of Congress approved May 4th, 1870, correctly set forth on pages 22 to 25 of the bill.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that said West Side Company ever abandoned or waived all or any claim to the said grants, privileges or franchises of which the said East Side Company became and was the recipient, or that the grant of lands or franchises or any other benefits conferred on said Wset Side Company by the said Act of May 4th, 1870, was applied for, obtained, accepted or made in lieu of any grant of lands or franchises or benefits provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866.

This defendant denies that no right, title or interest in or to any grants, franchises or other benefits provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, was ever acquired by, through or under the West Side Company; and it denies that no right, title or interest in or to any grants, franchises or other benefits provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, were ever acquired by, through or under the East Side Company except by virtue of or expressly subject to terms or conditions imposed by the said Act of April 10th, 1869; and this defendant avers that no condition or conditions was or were, expressly or otherwise, imposed by the said Act of April 10th, 1869; and it avers, further, that all the grants, franchises and other benefits in Oregon provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, were acquired by the East Side Company, and were so acquired otherwise than by virtue of or subject to any provisions of the said Act of April 10th, 1869.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that the East Side Company became involved in litigation questioning its right to use its corporate name, but denies that the said company became involved in any litigation questioning the validity of its incorporation or organization.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about March 17th, 1870, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company was organized under the general incorporation laws of Oregon, and that, on the same day, its Articles of Incorporation were executed in triplicate and filed, one in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon, one in the office of the Clerk of Multnomah County, Oregon (being the County in which the principal office of said company was located), and one in the office of the Secretary of the said company, at Portland, Oregon.

This defendant admits that on or about March 29th, 1870, the East Side Company executed and delivered to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company a certain instrument in writing, copied as "Exhibit B" to the bill, on pages 74 to 97 thereof, purporting to convey unto said defendant all property of the East Side Company, including the last named company's right, title and interest in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits provided by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, and the Acts amendatory thereof; and that thereafter, during March and April, 1870, the said instrument was recorded in the offices of the County Recorders of the several counties in which was situated any of the lands granted by the said Act of July 25th, 1866.

This defendant avers that the purpose, intent and effect of the said instrument was, as appears on the face thereof, to operate as a sale and conveyance of all property therein described; and this defendant admits and avers that the said instrument did constitute the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company the grantee, by purchase and deed of conveyance, of the East Side Company, of all property and rights of the East Side Company, including the right to construct, complete, equip, and maintain the railroad provided for by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, and in aid thereof to receive and exercise the grants, franchises and other benefits in that behalf offered and extended as aforesaid, upon all the terms and conditions provided in the said Act of July 25th, 1866.

This defendant denies that the purpose, intent or effect of the said instrument was not to operate as a sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by the aforesaid Acts of Congress; this defendant denies that the purpose, intent or effect thereof was to constitute the Oregon & California Railroad Company the successor of the East Side Company to construct, complete or equip the said line of railroad, otherwise than as grantee by purchase and under the said deed of conveyance; and this defendant further denies that by reason of the said instrument, or otherwise, the Oregon & California Railroad Company became or was in anywise obligated by the terms and provisions of the said Act of April 10, 1869.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about April 4th, 1870, the Board of Directors of the Oregon & California Railroad Company passed the resolution copied on pages 20 and 21 of the bill; and that on or about April 28th, 1870, the Oregon & California Railroad Company filed an authenticated copy of the said resolution, together with a certified copy of the said deed of conveyance of March 29th, 1870 ("Exhibit B" to the bill), in the office of the Secretary of the Interior; and it admits and avers that continuously since April 28th, 1870, the Oregon & California Railroad Company has assumed to be, and the United States has recognized and treated it as, the successor in interest by purchase and deed of conveyance of the East Side Company, of and to all the rights and property described in the said deed of March 29th, 1870.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in the said third subdivision of the bill, and therefore denies the same.

IV.

Answering the allegations contained in the fourth subdivision of the bill, this defendant admits that the Congress of the United States passed the Act set forth in said subdivision of the bill, approved May 4th, 1870, which said Act was entitled as, and was in the terms set forth, in said subdivision of the bill; but this defendant denies, on information and belief, that the West Side Company at any time abandoned or waived all or any claim to any of the grants, franchises or other benefits of the said Act of July 25th, 1866, or importuned Congress to extend to it in lieu thereof or otherwise or at all any grant of lands, or franchises or other benefits pertaining to its projected line of railroad known as the West Side Line, or otherwise, or at all, or that in such behalf Congress passed the Act approved May 4th, 1870.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that by the words "Oregon Central Railroad Company" in the said Act of May 4, 1870, Congress intended to, and did refer to and mean the West Side Company; it admits and avers that the line of railroad specified in the Act of May 4, 1870, in so far as it extends from Portland to McMinnville by way of Forest Grove, is substantially the same (although not identical with) the line of railroad theretofore projected by the West Side Company between the said points.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about July 2, 1870, the Board of Directors of the West Side Company adopted a resolution assenting to the said Act of May 4, 1870, and that on or about July 20, 1870, the West Side Company filed an authenticated copy of said resolution in the office of the Secretary of the Interior.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in said fourth subdivision of the bill, and therefore denies the same.

V.

Answering the fifth subdivision of the bill, this defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that by the issuance or negotiation or pledge of mortgage bonds, but not otherwise, approximately $8,000,000 was, during the year 1870, procured by the Oregon & California Railroad Company, and approximately $1,000,000 was, during the year 1871, procured by the West Side Company; and that with the funds thus procured the work of further constructing the East Side railroad and West Side railroad was prosecuted until about January, 1873.

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that prior to January, 1873 (but not wholly during said "period of construction," as alleged on page 26 of the bill), the East Side railroad was constructed and extended from Portland to a point near Roseburg, distant approximately 197 miles from Portland and that prior to January, 1873, and during said "period of construction" the West Side railroad was completed from Portland to McMinnville by way of Forest Grove, a distance of approximately 47 miles.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that the construction of the East Side railroad was commenced during the month of April, 1868; that a section thereof, extending about 20 miles southerly therefrom, was completed on the 24th of December, 1869; that prior to the year 1870, a portion of the next 20-mile section of the East Side railroad, extending southerly from the said point, was constructed and that the remainder of the said 197 miles of railroad was constructed during the years 1870, 1871 and 1872.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that about January, 1873, the funds of each of the said companies became exhausted and that because thereof, further construction of both railroads was temporarily suspended; that the construction of the East Side railroad was not resumed until about June, 1881, and that the construction of the West Side railroad was never resumed; but this defendant denies, upon information and belief, that further construction of either railraod was abandoned at any time.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about July 24th, 1874, direction and control of the financial affairs of each of said companies were assumed and thereafter exercised by the creditors thereof organized under the name of "Bondholders Committee," and that on or about February 29, 1876, all of the capital stock of both companies was acquired by said Bondholders Committee, and for several years thereafter the affairs of said two companies were conducted by and under the direction and control of the said Bondholders Committee.

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that on or about October 6, 1880, the West Side Company executed and delivered unto the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, an instrument in writing purporting to grant, bargain, sell, assign, transfer and convey to the said Oregon & California Railroad Company all franchises, rights, privileges, and property of said West Side Company, including the right, title and interest of said West Side Company in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits of said Act of Congress, approved May 4, 1870, as more fully appears from the copy of said instrument attached to the bill as "Exhibit C." This defendant avers that the said instrument did grant, bargain, sell, assign, transfer and convey to the said defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company all of the property then owned or possessed by the West Side Company, including the right, title and interest of said Company in and to the grants, franchises and other benefits of the said Act of Congress, approved May 4, 1870, and that a duly authenticated copy of said deed of conveyance was filed in the Department of the Interior on or about October 20, 1880, and this defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the said instrument was executed or delivered for the purpose of merging the West Side Company with the Oregon & California Railroad Company or for any purpose other than that therein stated and apparent on the face thereof.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that the said instrument was and is a bona fide deed of sale and conveyance, the true meaning, purpose and intent of which is set forth and stated therein; and upon information and belief it denies that the purpose, intent or effect thereof was or is, as stated in the bill, not to operate as a sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by Act of Congress, approved May 4th, 1870, but to constitute the Oregon & California Railroad Company the successor of the West Side Company to construct, complete and equip the line of railroad aforesaid, particularly that part thereof extending from Forest Grove to Astoria; and it avers that the said instrument constituted the Oregon & California Railroad Company the grantee in law and in fact of the West Side Company by sale and deed of conveyance as aforesaid of all the rights and property therein described.

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that at all times since the execution and delivery of the said last mentioned deed of conveyance, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has assumed to be, and the United States has recognized and treated it as, the successor in interest by purchase and deed of conveyance of the West Side Company of, in and to all franchises, rights and property described in said deed of conveyance.

This defendant admits that some, but denies that all, of the transactions set forth in the bill as of date subsequent to October 6, 1880, relate to or affect both of said grants of land.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in said fifth subdivision of the bill, and therefore denies the same.

VI.

This defendant, answering the allegations contained in the sixth subdivision of the bill, admits and avers, upon information and belief, that on or about May 7th, 1881, the financial affairs of the Oregon & California Railroad Company were adjusted substantially, but avers not wholly, as follows: All of the capital stock was, by action of its Board of Directors and its stockholders, cancelled; that the amount of the capital stock of the Oregon & California Railroad Company was then established at and has ever since remained and still is of the total par value of $19,000,000, consisting of $12,000,000 preferred stock and $7,000,000 common stock, and that in payment of its then existing indebtedness, with accrued interest thereon, all of the said new capital stock was then issued and ever since has been and still is outstanding; that by the issuance of said new capital stock and by part of the proceeds of the new bond issue, referred to on page 30 of the bill, all of the then existing indebtedness of the Oregon & California Railroad Company was fully paid and discharged and the several mortgages and instruments purporting to secure the same were cancelled and satisfied.

This defendant admits that on June 2, 1881, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company executed and delivered to Henry Villard, Robert Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees, for the owners and holders of the said preferred stock, an instrument in writing which purported to, and this defendant avers did, convey to said Trustees all of the lands of both of the said land grants in trust to secure to the owners of the said preferred stock a right and interest (not merely some pretended right or interest, as is alleged on page 29 of the bill) in and to the land of the said land grants, as more particularly appears by the said instrument, a copy of which is attached to the bill (pp. 104 to 129), as "Exhibit D," and made part thereof; and this defendant avers that the said instrument, "Exhibit D," was made, executed and delivered subject to the prior Trust Mortgage of June 1, 1881, referred to and described in the first paragraph on page 110 of the bill, as is expressly stated in the second paragraph, page 114 of the Trust Mortgage ("Exhibit D" attached to the bill).

This defendant admits that "Exhibit D" purports to authorize said Trustees and their successors, in case of grantor's failure to make the payments therein provided for, to sell and convey the mortgaged lands to persons other than actual settlers, and in quantities more than one quarter-section to each purchaser and for a price exceeding $2.50 per acre; but this defendant denies that said instrument purports to convey or purports to authorize the said trustees to convey the said land for purposes other than those described in or by the said land grants respectively, and this defendant denies that the said instrument was or is in violation, or breach of, any of the terms or conditions of each or either of the said land grants.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about June 28th, 1881, the said trust mortgage was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, in Book 2700, page 179, and that about the same time it was recorded in the offices of the County Recorders of the several counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by either of said land grant acts.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that thereafter such proceedings were had and taken under the provisions of the said instrument, "Exhibit D" attached to the bill, by and with the consent and cooperation of the Oregon & California Railroad Company, that the defendant, Stephen T. Gage, became the sole surviving trustee thereunder.

This defendant further admits, upon information and belief, that by the issuance and negotiation of its corporate bonds, bearing date June 1, 1881, and May 26, 1883, respectively, known and designated as "First Mortgage Bonds" and "Second Mortgage Bonds," respectively, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company provided approximately $5,000,000 further construction funds; and that on or about June 1, 1881, the work of constructing the East Side Railroad was resumed and thereafter continued, until about January, 1884, and that between June 1, 1881, and January, 1884, the East Side railroad was constructed and extended from Roseburg to a point about one and one-half miles southerly from Ashland in the State of Oregon, a distance of approximately 145 miles. This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that about January, 1884, the last mentioned construction funds became exhausted and the work of construction was discontinued until about April, 1887, when it was resumed; but this defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the work of construction was at any time abandoned. This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that on or about January 19, 1885, default having been made in the payment of interest on its First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds, a suit was brought in the United States Circuit Court for the District of Oregon by the holders of said bonds against the Oregon & California Railroad Company and others; that on or about January 19, 1885, the railroad and other property of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company were, by order of said court, placed in the hands of a receiver appointed for that purpose.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on May 12th, 1887, the general status of the said land grants was as follows: Under the East Side grant, during the years 1871 and 1877, inclusive, patents for 323,078.68 acres of land, being land contiguous to the first 125 miles of the East Side Railroad, were applied for by and issued to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company. This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that the said patents were issued to the said Oregon & California Railroad Company as owner of said East Side grant under and by virtue of the said deed of March 29, 1870 (Exhibit "B" to bill), and not otherwise; and this defendant admits, upon information and belief, that no patents were issued for lands of the East Side grant prior to the year 1893, except the said patents issued during the years 1871 to 1877, inclusive; that no patents under the West Side grant were issued prior to the year 1895; that the total length of the East Side railroad is approximately 367 miles; that with the exception of the northerly 197 miles thereof, no part of the East Side railroad was constructed within the times prescribed by the terms of said East Side grant; and that on May 12, 1887, the portion thereof extending from Ashland to the southern boundary line of the State of Oregon remained unconstructed; that that part of the West Side railroad, extending from Forest Grove to Astoria was never constructed, and that by reason thereof the granted lands appertaining to said unconstructed railroad were by Act of Congress, approved January 31, 1885, entitled "An Act to declare forfeiture of certain lands granted to aid in the construction of a railroad in Oregon," forfeited to, and the ownership thereof resumed by, the United States.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that of the aforesaid granted lands 163,430.28 acres (not "approximately 250,000 acres" as stated in the bill) were sold by the Oregon & California Railroad Company prior to May 12, 1887; that nearly all of said lands were sold to actual settlers and in small quantities, although it avers, upon information and belief, that in a few cases sales were made in quantities exceeding 160 acres to a single person and for prices slightly in excess of $2.50 per acre; that such sales were so made for the reasons hereinafter set forth and not because of any provisions in said Joint Resolution of April 10, 1869, or Section 4 of the said Act of May 4, 1870.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in said sixth subdivision of the bill, and, therefore, denies the same.

VII.

This defendant, answering the seventh subdivision of the bill, admits, upon information and belief, that the stockholders of the Oregon & California Railroad Company became and were organized under the name of "Stockholders Committee" and that certain of the owners of the aforesaid mortgage bonds became and were organized under the name of "Frankfort Bondholders' Committee" and that certain others of the holders of said bonds became and were organized under the name of "London Bondholders' Committee," said Bondholders Committee representing the owners of substantially all of the aforesaid First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds.

This defendant admits that on or about the 28th day of March, 1887, a certain contract in writing was made and entered into by and between the parties therein named, a copy of which contract marked "Exhibit E" is attached to the bill; but this defendant denies that, by virtue of said contract or at all, the effect of the same was such that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, together with its lines of railroad, was absorbed by and merged into any "system" or corporation and that the independent corporate existence of said Oregon & California Railroad Company ceased virtually or at all.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about May 12, 1887, all of the capital stock and all of the Second Mortgage Bonds of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company were transferred, assigned and delivered unto said Pacific Improvement Company and that all of the said First Mortgage Bonds were assigned, transferred and delivered unto the said defendant the Southern Pacific Company, but denies on information and belief that such or any of such assignments, transfers and deliveries were made wholly pursuant to the said contract.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that, during all the times mentioned in the bill as to it, the Pacific Improvement Company was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about January 3, 1888, the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Company made and entered into a lease a copy of which is attached to the bill as "Exhibit F," whereby all the railroads and other property of the Oregon & California Railroad Company used in connection with them for the operating purposes of said railroads were leased to the Southern Pacific Company for the term of forty years. This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that the said lease remained in full force and effect until on or about August 1st, 1893, when the same defendants entered into a similar lease for the same property for the term of thirty-four years, a copy of which last mentioned lease is attached to the bill as "Exhibit G"; that the Southern Pacific Company entered into possession of the leased property on or about June 6, 1888, under the first mentioned lease and at all times since has been and still is in possession thereof, operating the said railroads and enjoying all benefits and profits to which it is entitled as such lessee. This defendant avers that in said leases or either thereof there was not included any of the lands granted by said Acts of Congress of July 25, 1866, and March 4, 1870.

This defendant admits that on or about January 3, 1888, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company executed and delivered unto the defendant Union Trust Company a certain instrument in writing dated July 1, 1887, a copy of which is attached to the bill as "Exhibit H," and this defendant avers that he said instrument purported to and did mortgage and convey in trust unto the Union Trust Company the railroad and lands and other property of the Oregon & California Railroad Company therein described for the uses and purposes therein set forth, and, among other things, to secure the payment of certain bonds to be issued and sold by and in the name of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company.

This defendant admits that, by the language contained in the said last mentioned instrument, "And all the property, real, personal or mixed, which on the 12th day of May, 1887, was covered by the mortgage securing the then existing First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon & California Railroad Company," reference was had and intended to be had to a certain deed of trust executed by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees, dated June 1, 1881, a copy of which is attached to the bill as "Exhibit I"; and this defendant admits that on or about January 18, 1888, the said mortgage deed of July 1, 1887, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County in Book 63 of Mortgages at page 287, as stated in the bill, and about the same time was recorded in the offices of the County Recorders of each of the several counties in Oregon in which was situated any of the lands granted by the said Acts of Congress of July 25, 1866, and March 4, 1870, or either thereof.

This defendant admits that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company executed certain bonds provided for by the said instrument bearing date July 1, 1887, and delivered the same to this defendant, but it avers that the said bonds were delivered to this defendant to be countersigned by it as Trustee named in said mortgage or trust deed and not otherwise, and that this defendant countersigned said bonds and delivered the same to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company or upon its order, but it denies that it negotiated the said bonds or any thereof. It admits that there are still outstanding of said bonds $17,745,000 in amount, and that the payment of the said bonds, both as to principal and interest, was by indorsement thereon in writing guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company.

This defendant further admits, upon information and belief, that the proceeds of said bonds were used to pay the cost of constructing, completing and improving the said Oregon & California Railroad Company's railroads, but it denies upon information and belief, that any proceeds from the sale of said bonds were used by the defendant Southern Pacific Company to purchase securities of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company or that the said bonds inured to the exclusive or any benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company or that the outstanding bonds in fact or at all represent or constitute any indebtedness of the defendant Southern Pacific Company or that it is liable for the payment of the same except under and by virtue of its said guarantee of the payment thereof.

This defendant admits that the said mortgage deed of July 1, 1887, purports to convey, and avers that it does convey, by way of mortgage to secure payment of the said bonds, the property therein described, including the said lands granted by said Acts of Congress of July 25, 1866, and March 4, 1870; and it avers that said mortgage provides that in case of default in payment of the said bonds, this defendant may sell the property described in said mortgage, including said lands, at public auction, as therein provided, or procure a sale thereof by judicial decree; and it further avers that the said mortgage deed is without express limitation or restriction in respect of such sales as to persons, quantity of land to be sold to any one person or the price at which the same shall be sold; but this defendant denies that the said mortgage deed purports to convey or authorize the defendant the Union Trust Company to convey the said land or any thereof for any purpose or purposes other than those prescribed in and intended by the said land grants respectively; and it also denies that the said mortgage deed was or is in violation or breach of any of the terms or conditions of both or either of said land grants.

This defendant admits and avers that it has, as Trustee for the owners and holders of the bonds secured by the aforesaid instrument, and claims some right, title, interest or lien on, in, to or upon said lands under and by virtue of said instrument bearing date July 1, 1887, but it denies that it makes any claim individually, and it denies that, because of the alleged facts set forth in the bill of complaint, or otherwise, it, as trustee, as aforesaid, has no right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon said

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that during the year 1887, the last section of the East Side railroad, extending from a point near Ashland to the southern boundary line of Oregon, was constructed by the Pacific Improvement Company under a contract with the Oregon & California Railroad Company executed on or about June 6, 1887, by the terms of which the last named company agreed to pay for the said work of construction in its bonds thereafter to be issued and guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company; and it admits that a small part, but denies, upon information and belief, that a large part, of the said section of railroad was constructed prior to the execution of said contract; and it denies, upon information and belief, that the said construction thereof or any part thereof, was under some or any form of contract with the defendant Southern Pacific Company other than the agreement of October 11, 1886, a copy of which is attached to the joint and several answers of defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage, as "Exhibit No. 1."

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about June 6, 1888, the aforesaid receivership proceedings were dismissed, and the receiver was discharged of all of the First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds (not including the bonds issued under the mortgage deed of July 1, 1887), together with all mortgages and trust deeds securing payment thereof, were canceled and discharged; and this defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that thereupon and ever since the Southern Pacific Company has continued in possession pursuant to the hereinbefore mentioned lease ("Exhibit F" to the bill) of all property of the Oregon & California Railroad Company described in said lease.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in the seventh subdivision of the bill, and therefore denies the same.

VIII.

This defendant, answering the eighth subdivision of the bill, denies, upon information and belief, the allegations contained in the first paragraph thereof.

This defendant admits and avers that during the years 1891 and 1892, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company adopted quit-claim forms of contracts and deeds for the sale and conveyance of the right, title or interest of the Railroad Company in such unpatented lands as were unsurveyed, interdicted mineral, or covered by pretended adverse claims, and that on or about the same time the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company adopted, and thereafter used, other forms of contracts and deeds, including the form generally known as "Grant, Bargain and Sale" form, of contracts and deeds for the sale of patented lands.

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that lands of the East Side grant to the amount of 2,442,708 acres were patented to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company between the years 1893 and 1906, both years inclusive; and that lands of the West Side grant to the amount of 128,618.13 acres were patented to the said company between the years 1895 and 1903, both years inclusive.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that the said patents were issued from time to time between the said dates, pursuant to applications therefor, made from time to time, as the lands were surveyed and became susceptible of such applications, between the years 1876 and 1906; and this defendant, on information and belief, denies that no patent has been issued under either of said land grants since the year 1906.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company on or about the year 1894, and until about January 1st, 1903, or at any time, sold or disposed of said granted lands, or any thereof, in manner or upon terms in violation or breach of the aforesaid terms or conditions of the said land grants, or either thereof.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that some of said land was sold to persons who were not actual settlers thereon, and did not purchase the same for purposes of actual settlement, in quantities exceeding one quarter-section to one purchaser, and at prices exceeding $2.50 per acre.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the said lands were sold generally in quantities of 1,000 to 45,000 acres to single purchasers at prices from $5.00 to $40.00 per acre; but admits, upon information and belief, that in several instances lands in quantities of from 1,000 to 20,000 acres were sold to one purchaser at prices ranging from $5.00 to $20.00 per acre, in one instance at $35.00 per acre, and in one instance at $40.00 per acre, and in one instance a sale in excess of 20,000 acres and of 45,000 acres at $7.00 per acre was made to a single purchaser.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the number of sales and amount of land sold by the Oregon & California Railroad Company before the year 1887, or as to the number of sales and the total number of acres sold prior to the said year; but it admits, upon information and belief, that a large part of the land sold since the year 1887 has been sold in quantities exceeding in acreage one quarter-section to one purchaser and for prices in excess of $2.50 per acre, and that a large part of said land has been conveyed since the year 1897, and that of the lands sold since 1897 a large part has been sold in quantities exceeding two thousand acres to each purchaser.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that many, but denies that "nearly all" of the said sales were made by contracts providing for payment of purchase price in from five to ten equal annual installments, and execution of conveyance upon final payment; and it admits, upon information and belief, that in some instances, but denies that in many instances, conveyances under said contracts were executed after January 1st, 1903; and it admits that a few, but denies that many, of said contracts, were still pending at the time this suit was brought.

Referring to the schedule marked "Exhibit J," attached to the bill of complaint, this defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the statement relating to sales and contracts for sale prior to the year 1887; and, upon information and belief, it denies the accuracy of the statements in reference to sales and contracts for sales since the year 1887.

This defendant admits and avers that as between the parties thereto, the said Mortgage Deed bearing date July 1st, 1887, to this defendant, Union Trust Company, has been treated as and is a lien upon all of said granted lands which remained unsold on the 12th day of May, 1887; and it admits and avers, upon information and belief, that of said lands sold since the 12th day of May, 1887, it has received the purchase price, although large sums have been deducted necessarily, for the expenses of maintaining and selling the said lands, and for the expenses of the Trustee; and it admits that it has joined in the execution of all conveyances, and it avers that nearly all of the net proceeds of the sales of said lands received by it as aforesaid have been applied by it in payment of the bonds secured by the aforesaid mortgage.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the proceeds of all or any sales made since May 12th, 1887, have inured to the exclusive or any benefit of the defendant Southern Pacific Company by application in payment of the aforesaid bonds or otherwise, except in so far as that by the payment of said bonds the Southern Pacific Company was to that extent released of liability upon its said guarantee of the payment of said bonds.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief, as to the remaining allegations contained in the eighth subdivision of the bill, and therefore denies the same.

IX.

This defendant, answering the ninth subdivision of the bill, admits, upon information and belief, that all transactions concerning the said last named land grants, were conducted subsequent to October, 1901, as before, in the name of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company; and it admits, on information and belief, that sales were continued, as before, until on or about January 1st, 1903.

Further answering the ninth subdivision of the bill, this defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that since January 1st, 1903, and principally since the passage, on or about February 14th, 1907, by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, of the Memorial, a copy of which is attached as "Exhibit L" to the bill, communications have been received by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, purporting to be the several applications of persons, exceeding one thousand in number, to purchase certain of said unsold lands, generally designated and described in such communications as a single 160-acre tract or quarter-section subdivision to each person named; but, upon information and belief, this defendant denies that said applicants intended or desired to purchase the lands so applied for to be purchased by them or in their names, respectively, for the purpose of actually settling thereupon or making a permanent or any home thereon; and it denies, upon information and belief, that several of said applicants had actually settled or established a permanent or any home upon the land so applied for by them, or in their names, respectively; and, upon information and belief, it denies that at the time of said applications to purchase each of said applicants did actually tender to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company the sum of $2.50 for each acre so applied for as the purchase price thereof.

This defendant further denies, upon information and belief, that in addition to the said applicants to purchase, a large or any number of persons are ready and willing to settle upon said lands or to purchase the same for the purpose of actually settling thereupon or of making a permanent or any home thereon, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres to each person, or for the price of $2.50 per acre, or upon any terms prescribed by the said land grants, or either thereof, or are deterred therefrom by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, as stated in the bill, or at all; and this defendant, upon information and belief, avers that the said lands, generally, are essentially timber lands not susceptible of actual settlement, or the establishment of permanent or any homes thereon; and further, that all lands of the said land grants now or at any time susceptible of actual and permanent settlement or the establishment of homes thereon, at no time exceeded, approximately, 300,000 acres, consisting of small and widely separated tracts, all or nearly all of which were sold to actual settlers, or persons claiming to be such, during construction and prior to completion of said railroads, respectively, in quantities of 160 acres or less to a single purchaser, at prices not exceeding $2.50 per acre; and this defendant avers, upon information and belief, that at the time the said grant of July 25th, 1866, was made by Congress, and the line of said railroads located, a large part of the lands susceptible of actual settlement and cultivation within the ten-mile or granted limits of said grant, had been occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted or otherwise disposed of, and that the Railroad Company was obliged to take, and did take, in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in the indemnity limits of said grants, lands which were valuable chiefly, if not wholly, for the timber growing thereon and were not susceptible of actual settlement, residence and cultivation.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that the said applications to purchase said lands, set forth in the bill and referred to above, were made by persons desiring to obtain title to said respective quarter-sections because of the timber thereon, and not otherwise, and for the purpose of speculation only and not in good faith as actual or any settlers; and that the said lands were chiefly, and in most instances solely, of value because of the timber thereon and were not arable or susceptible of actual settlement and cultivation.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on or about January 1st, 1903, pending examination into the records and affairs of its land department, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company withdrew from sale all of the said unsold lands; but this defendant, upon information and belief, denies that the said withdrawal of the said lands from sale, or any mortgage or sale thereof theretofore made by the Oregon & California Railroad Company was in violation or breach of any terms or conditions annexed to the said land grants, or concerning the same, or either of them, by any Acts of Congress.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has at any time refused or still refuses to sell any part of said unsold lands, to actual settlers, or for purposes of actual settlement, or in quantities, or for prices as prescribed by any terms of the said land grant acts or either of them, or at all.

This defendant admits that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has, at all times, refused and still refuses, to entertain the pretended applications to purchase, or to sell any of the timber lands applied for as set forth in the bill, to the persons who made or in whose names were made the said pretended applications, upon the terms offered therefor in said pretended applications, but, upon information and belief, this defendant denies that ever since January 1st, 1903, or at any time, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has failed or neglected to encourage or promote the settlement of any of the said lands which are susceptible of settlement and the establishment of homes thereon, or the purchase thereof by actual settlers, for the purpose of actual settlement.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that by divers, or any, means or methods the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has at all or any times discouraged, obstructed, forbidden or prevented the settlement of any of said lands which are susceptible of settlement, or the purchase thereof, or any part thereof, upon terms prescribed by the said land grants, or either thereof, either by actual settlers or for the purpose of actual settlement.

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that since January 1st, 1903, and at all times theretofore, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company assumed and asserted and has assumed and asserted an absolute and unconditional estate in and to all of said unsold lands; but this defendant, upon information and belief, denies that said defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company at any time attempted, or is attempting, to convert any conditional estate into an unconditional estate, in violation or breach of any of the terms or conditions of said land grants, or at all; and, on information and belief, this defendant denies that by reason of the premises set forth in said bill, or at all, or for any other reason, the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company has violated any of the express terms or conditions of said land grants, respectively, or any implication or plain intendment of said grants.

This defendant avers that the said lands granted by the Acts of July 25th, 1866, and May 4th, 1870, became, by the construction of said railroad, between the terminal of the Central Pacific Railroad, in California, and the City of Portland, in Oregon, and the acceptance thereof by the complainant, an unconditional and indefeasible estate.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to how or from what sources "Exhibit K" to the bill was made or prepared, or as to the accuracy thereof.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that none of said unsold lands have ever been reduced to possession, or in any way improved, unless it be by persons claiming to have settled thereupon, or seeking to purchase the same, as in the bill stated; and denies, upon information and belief, that the reasonable present value of said unsold lands exceeds the sum of $40,000,000.

This defendant, upon information and belief, avers that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, has, at all times since the year 1870, been and still is in open and notorious possession of and dominion over the said lands, as follows: The said company has at all times openly and notoriously claimed, and prior to about the time of the commencement of this suit was recognized as and admitted by all to be, such owner thereof; has, at all times, openly and publicly mortgaged, leased and offered for sale, the said lands; has, at all times, caused the said lands to be protected by field agents who traveled over and protected the same against depredation and waste; has, at all times since the same was patented to it, paid the taxes levied and assessed upon and against the said lands, which payments amount, in all, to $1,827,-234.10; and in divers other ways has openly and notoriously proclaimed and asserted, and been in possession of, the said lands; that large and different portions of said lands have been reduced to possession and improved from year to year, by persons holding leases thereof for grazing and other purposes, from the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company; and other large portions of the said lands have been reduced to possession as right of way, station grounds, depot grounds, and the like for the railroad purposes of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that none of said unsold lands now are, or ever were, necessary to reserve for depots, stations, side-tracks, wood-sheds, standing-ground, or any other needful uses in operating any of said railroad lines or any part thereof; and further denies, upon information and belief, that no part of said lands ever was reserved or used, or now is reserved or used, or is intended to be reserved or used, for any of said purposes.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that all the lands described in "Exhibit No. 7" annexed to and made part of the said joint and several answer of the Oregon & California Railroad Company, et al, are and at the time this suit was brought were necessary to reserve and were reserved for depots, stations, side-tracks, wood-sheds, standing ground, and other needful uses in operating the said railroad, and that all the lands described in "Exhibit No. 8," attached to and made a part of said joint and several answer, now are and at the time this suit was brought were necessary to reserve and were reserved for still other needful uses in operating the said railroads particularly set forth in said "Exhibit No. 8."

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in said subdivision ninth of the bill, and, therefore, denies the same.

X.

This defendant, answering the allegations contained in the tenth subdivision of the bill, admits, upon information and belief, that a number of contracts of sale have been forfeited because the defaults in the payment of annual installments falling due thereon, and the installments previously paid have been retained; and, as to the remaining allegations of said subdivision, this defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief.

XI.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the allegations contained in the eleventh subdivision of the bill, and, therefore, denies the same.

XII.

This defendant, answering the twelfth subdivision of the bill, admits and avers, upon information and belief, that prior to the completion of the construction of the Oregon & California Railroad and its connection with the California & Oregon Railroad at the Oregon-California boundary line, and thereafter until about the year 1890—but not until the year 1894 as stated in the bill—there was substantially no demand for said granted lands, except for the purposes of settlement or by persons of limited means able to purchase said lands only in small quantities and at low prices; and it admits and avers, upon information and belief, that nearly all sales made prior to the year 1894 were of that character, to persons who purchased lands susceptible of settlement, and upon or adjacent to which they had established homes; and it admits and avers, upon information and belief, that prior to the completion of the said railroad, timber lands, not being susceptible of settlement or the establishing of homes thereon, had but little, if any, market value and could not be sold at any price to any person.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that during a large part of said period the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company maintained an immigration bureau, engaging in inducing immigration and settlement upon such of said lands as were susceptible of actual settlement in good faith; but denies, upon information and belief, that said company was not otherwise engaged in soliciting or promoting sales.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that by reason of the premises, or otherwise, the occasional or any violations of terms or conditions of said land grants or either of them, if any there were, during the said period were concealed or generally unknown, until ascertained by complainant as stated in the bill; and this defendant, upon information and belief, avers, that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company at all times, openly and to the actual knowledge of all persons concerned, including complainant, disposed of its said lands at the best price obtainable, in quantities desired by applicants to purchase, giving preference to actual settlers in quantities claimed and applied for by them, in the interest of railroad transportation and traffic —but not because of a provision in the said joint resolution of April 10th, 1869, or Act of May 4th, 1870.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that a sudden demand arose for said lands, commencing about the year 1894, among wealthy speculators or timber men, but admits, upon information and belief, that the greater part of the so-called wrongs and violations complained of in the bill transpired subsequent to that date.

This defendant, upon information and belief, avers that nearly all of the said lands remaining unsold at the time of the completion of the construction of the East Side railroad and its connection with the Central Pacific railroad, as aforesaid, were timber lands, having small market value, and for which there was substantially no demand by purchasers at the time, but it avers, upon information and belief, the fact to be that soon after facilities for transportation of lumber were afforded by the completion and connection of the said railroads, the intermediate even-numbered sections were entered by persons under the Timber Land Act and the commutation provisions of the Homestead Act, who thereupon conveyed the lands so entered to single holders of many such adjoining tracts, and the increase in value of the Oregon & California Railroad Company's intermediate odd-sections of timber land arose out of the said completion and connection of railroads, and the demand for such lands at increased and gradually increasing prices arose out of the need of ownership of the odd-sections by the owners of the intermediate even-sections, who desired or sought to procure sufficiently large single timber land holdings to justify the establishment and equipment of lumber mills and factories, to mill and market the timber product of said lands.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that nearly all or that any, except a few, of the sales consummated after that time were made by executory contracts of sale which were not placed of record or which did not merge into deeds for many years thereafter, or otherwise than shortly thereafter, or that a considerable or other than a small portion thereof are still pending, or that any conveyances for excessive quantities of said lands were not placed of record until recently except as to a few or that many are still unrecorded except a few thereof.

This defendant, upon information and belief, avers that the conveyances relating to the transfer of the said lands both before and after the year 1894 and from the beginning, were in the main and in substantial entirety made matters of open, public and continuing record and were matters of general and public knowledge and notoriety, at and about the time of the several and successive conveyances in which the transactions and dealings in respect to the said lands from the beginning were embodied, and continuously ever since, and were well known at all such times to the Government and Land Department of the United States, and many and most of the contracts of sale, said contracts of sale being followed by such conveyances, were likewise made and continued to be matter of public record and knowledge and within the knowledge of the Government and Land Department of the United States.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that in any instances of sales in excessive quantities (that term being understood herein to mean quantities in excess of 160 acres) the lands were conveyed or attempted to be conveyed by several deeds, each for a small quantity of land, or that thereby the true facts were concealed or that any such or any device of concealment was resorted to.

This defendant admits and avers, upon information and belief, that on or about January 1st, 1903, all of said unsold lands were withdrawn from sale, pending investigation of Land Department transactions of the Oregon & California Railroad Company. This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that thereafter all or any of the said unsold lands were converted to certain wrongful and unlawful uses, as set forth in the bill.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in the twelfth subdivision of said bill, and, therefore, denies the same.

XIII.

This defendant, answering the allegations contained in the thirteenth subdivision of the bill, denies, upon information and belief, that the transactions complained of in the bill of complaint were wrongful or unlawful, or that they were concealed from or unknown to the complainant until discovered in the manner described in said bill.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that all of said transactions were open and notorious, and many, if not all thereof, actually known to the complainant at the times thereof, respectively, or soon thereafter, and complainant also had constructive notice of all or substantially all of the said transactions at or about the times thereof, respectively, commencing as early as March, 1870, and continuously thereafter to the present time; and this defendant further avers, upon information and belief, that complainant at all times acquiesced in all, and in many instances expressly approved and ratified certain, of said transactions and that a few of the many instances of such acquiescence, approval and ratification, other than those hereinbefore and hereinafter set forth, are shown by "Exhibit No. 9" and "Exhibit No. 10" attached to said Joint and Several Answer

This defendant admits that "Exhibit L" to the bill is a correct copy of the original memorial passed by the Legislature of Oregon on or about February 14, 1907, but it avers that it does not purport to and does not charge or disclose any concealments made or said to have been made by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company in respect to the sales of its lands, the amount thereof and grantees, either with respect to the selling prices of its lands or the quantity sold to a single purchaser or otherwise, and did not and could not have given complainant notice of any of the transactions characterized in the first paragraph on page 53 of the bill as "concealed from and wholly unknown to complainant," and that such transactions were conducted and made in the usual manner of conducting and making transactions of such character, and that no concealment whatever was made or attempted to be made of any thereof.

This defendant admits, upon information and belief, that on April 30, 1908, Congress passed the Joint Resolution, a copy of which is set forth on pages 53 and 54 of the bill, in pursuance of and influenced by the said memorial; and it admits and avers that this suit was instituted because of said joint resolution, but it does not concede or admit, but on the contrary denies, that this suit is a suit brought in accordance with the provisions of the said joint resolution, or intent of Congress in adopting said joint Resolution, or is one that the Attorney-General has authority to bring in this court under or in pursuance of the said joint resolution, or at all.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in said thirteenth subdivision of the bill, and, therefore, denies the same.

XIV.

This defendant, answering the allegations contained in the fourteenth subdivision of the bill, denies that there have been breaches or violations of any of the terms, conditions or provisions of the said land grants, respectively, and denies that, because of the several or any of the alleged breaches or violations of any of the terms, conditions or provisions of the said land grants respectively, or at all, certain or any of said granted lands or estates therein have been or are forfeited to the United States, free from any or all right, title, interest, lien or claim of this defendant or of the defendants, Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage, et al, or persons claiming by, through or under them or any of them, otherwise or at all.

This defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the United States does by the bill assert title to lands and estates in lands described on page 55 thereof, by reason of alleged forfeiture thereof unto the United States; but it avers that the assertion of such forfeiture in the bill has no foundation in fact, nor authority in law; and this defendant denies that the United States has thereby resumed, or has lawful authority to resume, title to all or any of the said lands or interest in said lands, pursuant to the said joint resolution of April 30, 1908.

This defendant avers, upon information and belief, that even if the lands embraced in the aforesaid land grants, or any thereof, or any interest therein, have become forfeited to the United States for breach or violation of any condition or conditions of the said grants, or otherwise, the United States has a plain, speedy, adequate and complete remedy at law respecting the same, and cannot therefore maintain this action in equity; and further that no question of fact as to such forfeiture can be equipped into or found, nor can such forfeiture be in anywise enforced by this court.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations obtained in the fourteenth subdivision of the bill, and therefore denies the same.

XV.

This defendant, answering the allegations contained in the fifteenth subdivision of the bill, admits and avers, that the property described in the said mortgage deed of July 1, 1887, from the Oregon & California Railroad Company to the Union Trust Company, covered and included all lands granted by the said Acts of July 25, 1866, and March 4, 1870, which remained unsold on May 12, 1887; and it avers that as grantee of said mortgage deed and as Trustee thereunder, it has certain rights and interests in and a lien upon all the said lands; but this defendant denies, upon information and belief, that the property described in said mortgage deed, and upon which the same is a lien, not including any of said granted lands, was at the time of the execution of said mortgage, or now is, of a value largely or at all in excess of the amount of said bonded indebtedness purporting to be secured by said mortgage deed, or that the same is ample security therefor; and it avers that it is impossible to foresee what the value of the said property will be in the year 1927, when the bonds secured by said mortgage deed will become due.

This defendant further avers that the said mortgage deed and the prior mortgage deeds in this answer heretofore referred to, covering said lands were severally executed to secure the issue of bonds, the proceeds of which were to be and were used by the defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company and said West Side Company, in constructing the said railroads and performing the conditions of said Acts of July 25, 1866, and March 4, 1870, and that by the construction of said roads, the said Oregon & California Railroad Company did acquire an indefeasible title to said lands granted in aid of such construction. That the proceeds of the bonds secured by the said mortgage or deed of trust to this defendant were to be used and were used in completing the said railroad, which, when constructed to a point of connection on the southern boundary of Oregon, with the portion of said railroad constructed in California, accomplished the purpose for which said grant was made, to-wit, the construction of a railroad which should connect the cities of San Francisco and Portland. And this defendant avers, upon information and belief, that without said land grants and the mortgage thereof in expectancy, the funds could not have been secured for the construction of said railroads, or either thereof, and that the pledge by way of mortgage deeds in expectancy of said lands constituted a valid application of said lands under the grant as required by the said Act of July 25th, 1866. And this defendant further avers that the said mortgage deed and the said prior mortgage deeds and liens upon said lands did not, in law or in fact, constitute a sale thereof within the meaning of the Acts of Congress referred to in the bill or of any Act of Congress.

This defendant further avers, upon information and belief, that the bonds secured by the said mortgage deed to it as Trustee were negotiated abroad, and principally in Germany, and that most, if not all, of the said bonds are now held by bona fide purchasers thereof in said last named country, and that, if any of said lands had been sold or shall be sold, as the bill avers they were required by said Acts of Congress to be sold, to actual settlers only in quantities not exceeding 160 acres to any one person at $2.50 per acre, the said bondholders would be entitled to the net proceeds of such sales; and this defendant avers that if it be true—which it denies—that said lands are held by the defendant railroad company upon condition of sale to actual settlers only as aforesaid, and if a relatively small proportion of said lands have been sold in breach of said condition, as the bill alleges, it would be harsh and contrary to equity to deprive by forfeiture the bondholders under said mortgage deed of the security on the faith of which they purchased said bonds.

XVI.

The defendant, answering the allegations contained in the sixteenth subdivision of the bill, avers, upon information and belief, that the said patents and all thereof, were duly issued pursuant to the rules of the local and general land offices of the United States after due and diligent inquiry, report and determination by the proper officers of the United States, as to the facts and particulars in that behalf which authorized and made it the duty of the said officers to issue said patents under and pursuant to the provisions of said Acts of July 25th, 1866, and May 4th, 1870, respectively.

This defendant has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations contained in said sixteenth subdivision of the bill.

XVII.

This defendant, answering the allegations contained in the seventeenth subdivision of the bill, admits that some of the conveyances by the Oregon & California Railroad Company of the said lands contained the reservation set forth in said subdivision of the bill, but it denies, upon information and belief, that such reservation was in violation or breach of the terms and conditions of said land grants respectively, or that they were null and void, and it denies upon information and belief that the interests of this defendant in the lands thus reserved were or are subject to a right of forfeiture, or to any other rights, equities or remedies which complainant has asserted in said bill.

XVIII.

This defendant, answering the allegations contained in the eighteenth subdivision of the bill, admits and avers that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company is, and claims to be, the owner of all of the said granted lands, patented and unpatented, not heretofore sold and transferred by its deeds of conveyance, together with all rights of way and other rights and property granted by Section 3 of said Act of July 25th, 1866, and the first section of the said Act of May 4th, 1870, and all rights and property reserved as aforesaid for any and all railroad purposes, and the improvements upon all the said lands and property; and that all of the said land and property is subject to the lien aforesaid of the Union Trust Company mortgage deed of July 1, 1887. But this defendant denies that any or all of such rights, titles, interests or liens were, or are, subject to any right of forfeiture or to any other rights or equities or remedies of complainant, asserted or attempted to be asserted by the bill herein, or which complainant has or, at any time since the making of said grants respectively, had.

XIX.

This defendant, further answering the allegations contained in the nineteenth subdivision of the bill, has no knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the allegations contained therein.

XX.

This defendant, answering the allegations contained in the twentieth subdivision of the bill, admits, upon information and belief, that suits in equity against the defendants Oregon & California Railroad Company, Stephen T. Gage and Union Trust Company of New York, have been instituted by some of the other defendants herein, the general purpose and nature of which is to compel a sale and conveyance of the lands so applied for to them respectively, all of which said suits are still pending. This defendant avers that on or about December , 1908, all of the said suits other than the one brought by Roy W. Minkler were consolidated with this suit, No. 3340; that thereafter, and on or about January 15th, 1909, all the persons other than the said Roy W. Minkler, named as complainants in said "Exhibit P" to the bill, filed herein their cross complaints, each and all of which was and were dismissed by the order of this Court made and entered on April 24th, 1911, and avers, upon information and belief, that on or about June 9, 1910, the said suit brought by Roy W. Minkler in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of the State of Washington, was duly dismissed by mutual consent of the parties thereto.

XXI.

This defendant, further answering the bill, alleges that an Act was passed by the Congress of the United States entitled "An Act to Create an Auditor of Railroad Accounts and for other Purposes," which said Act was approved June 19, 1878, and by Section 2 of which said Act it was provided "that the office of Auditor of Railroad Accounts is hereby established as a bureau of the Interior Department. The said Auditor shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The annual salary of the said Auditor shall be, and is hereby fixed at the sum of five thousand dollars. To assist the said Auditor to perform the duties of said office, the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint one bookkeeper, at an annual salary of two thousand four hundred dollars; one assistant bookkeeper, at an annual salary of two thousand dollars; one clerk, at an annual salary of one thousand four hundred dollars; and one copyist, at an annual salary of nine hundred dollars. Actual and necessary traveling and other expenses incurred in visiting the offices of the railroad companies hereinafter described, and for which vouchers shall be rendered, are hereby allowed, not to exceed the sum of two thousand dollars per annum; and it is hereby specially provided that each of said railroad companies shall furnish transportation over its own road, without expense to the United States, for the said Auditor or any person acting under his direction. Incidental expenses for books, stationery and other material necessary for the use of said Bureau, are hereby allowed, not to exceed the sum of seven hundred dollars per annum. And the sum of twelve thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the uses and purposes of this Act for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-nine."

That by Section 3 of said Act it was provided as follows:

> "The duties of the said Auditor, under and subject to the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be to prescribe a system of reports to be rendered to him by the railroad companies whose roads are in whole or in part west, north, or south of the Missouri River, and to which the United States have granted any loan of credit or subsidy in bonds or lands; to examine the books and accounts of each of said railroad companies once in each fiscal year, and at such other times as may be deemed by him necessary to determine the correctness of any report received from them; to assist the Government directors of any of said railroad companies in all matters which come under their cognizance whenever they may officially request such assistance; to see that the laws relating to said companies are enforced; to furnish such information to the several departments of the Government in regard to tariffs for freight and passengers and in regard to the accounts of said railroad companies as may be by them required, or, in the absence of any request therefor, as he may deem expedient for the interest of the Government; and to make an annual report to the Secretary of the Interior on the first day of November, on the condition of each of said railroad companies, their road, accounts and affairs, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth immediately preceding."

That by Section 4 of said Act it was provided as follows:

"Each and every railroad company aforesaid which has received from the United States any bonds of the said United States, issued by way of loan to aid in constructing or furnishing its road, or which has received from the United States any lands granted to it for a similar purpose, shall make to the said Auditor any and all such reports as he may require, from time to time, and shall submit its books and records to the inspection of said Auditor, or any person acting in his place and stead, at any time that the said Auditor may request, in the office where said books and records are usually kept; and the said Auditor, or his authorized representative, shall make such transcripts from the said books and records as he may desire."

That by Section 5 of said Act it was provided as follows:

"If any railroad company aforesaid shall neglect or refuse to make such reports as may be called for, or refuse to submit its books and records to inspection, as provided in Section 4 of this Act, such neglect or refusal shall operate as a forfeiture, in each case of such neglect or refusal, of a sum of not less than one thousand dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, to be recovered by the Attorney General of the United States in the name and for the use and benefit of the United States; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Interior, in all such cases of neglect or refusal as aforesaid, to inform the Attorney General of the facts, to the end that such forfeiture or forfeitures may be judicially enforced."

That by Section 6 of said Act the said Act was made to apply to all persons or corporations into whose hands either of said railroads "may lawfully come," as well as to the original companies, and was to take effect on and after July first, A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy-eight.

This defendant further avers that thereafter the Congress of the United States, by an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, and for other purposes," approved March 3d, 1881, changed the title of said official from "AUDITOR OF RAILROAD ACCOUNTS" to "COMMISSIONER OF RAILROADS," and appropriated $17,100 for the support of said Bureau.

This defendant further avers that thereafter the Congress of the United States by an Act approved April 17, 1900, entitled "An Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and one, and for other purposes," provided as follows:

"OFFICE OF COMMISSIONER OF RAILROADS:

"For Commissioner, four thousand five hundred dollars; bookkeeper, two thousand dollars; assistant bookkeeper, one thousand eight hundred dollars; one clerk of class two; one clerk, one thousand dollars; and one assistant messenger; in all, eleven thousand four hundred and twenty dollars:

"Provided, that the office of Commissioner of Railroads shall terminate on the thirtieth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and one."

This defendant further avers that thereafter, the Congress of the United States, by an Act approved March 3rd, 1901, entitled "An Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and two, and for other purposes," provided as follows:

"OFFICE OF COMMISSIONER OF RAILROADS:

"For Commissioner, four thousand five hundred dollars; bookkeeper, one thousand six hundred dollars; one clerk of class two; one clerk, one thousand dollars; and one assistant messenger; in all nine thousand two hundred and twenty dollars:

"Provided, that the office of Commissioner of Railroads is hereby continued until the thirtieth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and two, when the same shall terminate, and the duties of the Commissioner shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior, together with the records and files of the office."

This defendant further avers that thereafter, the Congress of the United States by an Act approved June 28, 1902, entitled "An Act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and three, and for other purposes," provided as follows:

"OFFICE OF COMMISSIONER OF RAILROADS:

"For Commissioner, four thousand five hundred dollars; one clerk, one thousand dollars; one assistant messenger, seven hundred and twenty dollars; in all six thousand two hundred and twenty dollars;

"Provided, that the office of Commissioner of Railroads is hereby continued until the thirtieth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and three, when the same shall terminate, and the duties of the Commissioner shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior, together with the records and files of the office."

This defendant further avers that thereafter the Congress of the United States by an Act approved March 3rd, 1903, entitled "An Act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, one thousand nine hundred and three, and for prior years, and for other purposes," Congress, among other things, provided as follows:

> "OFFICE OF COMMISSIONER OF RAILROADS:
>
> "For Commissioner, four thousand five hundred dollars; one clerk, one thousand dollars; one assistant messenger, seven hundred and twenty dollars; in all six thousand two hundred and twenty dollars;
> "Provided, that the office of Commissioner of Railroads is hereby continued until the thirtieth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and four, when the same shall terminate, and the duties of the Commissioner shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior, together with the records and files of the office."

This defendant further avers that said Bureau was organized in the Department of the Interior, as required by said Acts of Congress, and was actively administered, under annual appropriations by Congress, until the termination of said office in 1904 and the transfer of the duties, files and records thereof to the Secretary of the Interior, as required by the Act of 1902, hereinbefore set forth; and that, pursuant to said Acts, the forms of reports to be made by the railroad companies covered thereby, including the said defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, were prepared and adopted by the said Bureau, and transmitted to the said railroad companies, including said defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, which said Oregon & California Railroad Company, and its predecessors in ownership of said railways and of said land grants, complied continuously with said Act and with the demands of said Auditor and said Commissioner of Railroads, in making the said reports, as required.

This defendant further avers that beginning with the report for the half year ending December 31, 1879, down to and including the year 1903, reports were regularly made of the transactions of the Land Department of said defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company, upon the blanks formulated and furnished by the Bureau of Railway Accounts, as follows:

This defendant further avers that the Chief of said Bureau complied, each year from the creation until the termination of said office, with the requirement that he should make an annual report to the Secretary of the Interior; that said reports were embodied in the annual report of the Secretary of the Interior, during each year from 1879 to the termination of said office, and by him transmitted to the President of the United States, and by the latter transmitted to the two Houses of the Congress, there referred to appropriate committees, and printed as executive documents. That in many, but not all, of said reports by the said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior, so transmitted by the latter to the President of the United States and laid before the Congress, as aforesaid, the said Commissioner of Railroads stated, among other things, the maximum price which the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company was demanding per acre on sales of the land of said land grant. Thus, in the report of said Commissioner for the year 1883, Executive Documents, 2nd Sessions, 47th Congress, 1882-83, No. 1, Part 5, Vol. 2, at page 471, the said Commissioner reported:

> "Oregon & California Railroad Company chartered March 17, 1870, and opened for business December 1st, 1872. The Company is now successor, by consolidation, of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, purchased September 1st, 1880, chartered July 25, 1866, and owns the land grant of said Company; the Western Oregon Railroad Company, purchased October 9, 1880; and the Albany & Lebanon Railroad Company, leased December 5, 1880, at a rental of $1 for each period of six months, this Company to pay taxes and keep up repairs. The several lines are operated in two Divisions, that is:

"The estimated grant of land of these combined companies amounts to 3,940,000 acres, of which 322,062.40 acres have been patented to June 30, 1882. Of this latter amount, lands had been sold up to December 31, 1881—date of last report—for an amount aggregating $309,486.15, at an average price of $2.25 per acre. The minimum price now asked is 25 cents, the maximum $10 per acre."

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1886, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 2nd Session, 49th Congress, 1886-87, Vol. 9, page 596, occurs the following, relating to the defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company:

"The Company has received by patent from the Government 823,063.68 acres of land, of which 237,773.78 acres have been sold. It has received from sales $384,889.72, and there are outstanding on time sales $385,647.67."— showing that the average price per acre of the land so sold was in excess of $2.50 an acre, to wit, $3.239 per acre.

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1887, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 1st Session, 50th Congress, 1887-88, Vol. 11, page 1173, occurs the following, relating to the defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company:

> "The Company has received by patent from the Government 323,068.68 acres of land, of which 242,516.35 acres have been sold. It has received from sales $407,876.54, and there are outstanding on time sales $377,545.36," showing that the average price per acre of the land so sold was in excess of $2.50 an acre, to wit, $3.24 per acre.

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1888, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 2nd Session, 50th Congress, 1888-89, Vol. 12, page 454, occurs the following, relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

> "The Company has received by patent from the Government 323,068.68 acres of land, of which 254,964.08 have been sold. It has received from sales $458,836.01, and there are outstanding on time

showing that the average price per acre of the land so sold was in excess of $2.50 per acre, to wit, $2.868 per acre.

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1889, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 1889-90, Vol. 11, pages 512-513, occurs the following, relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

> "The Company has received by patent from the Government 323,068.68 acres of land, of which 269,442.88 have been sold. It has received from sales of land $541,650.33, and there are outstanding on account of time sales $394,226.58, of which the sum of $98,992.42 is interest."
> "The average price per acre for all sales to date was $2.64, while the average price for sales made during the year was $3.96."

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1890, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 2nd Session, 51st Congress, 1890-91, Vol. 13, page 174, occurs the following, relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

> "The Company reports that to June 30, 1890, there had been patented to it by the United States, 323,068.68 acres of land, and that 225,170.57 acres had been sold, the total cash receipts from all sales amounting to $626,520.03. There remained outstanding on account of time sales the sum of $516,-287.66. Average price per acre for all sales during year was $6.32."

This defendant avers that the said defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company reported the total number of acres of land disposed of prior to and including the year 1889 as 269,442.88, and that in its report for the year 1890 it stated the total number of acres disposed of, to the date thereof, as 225,170.57, a less total than that reported for the previous year, which this defendant avers is explained by the fact that in the said Railroad Company's report for the year 1890 it deducted, from the total number of acres reported in 1889, 82,279.12 acres, which it had previously sold by contract, but which contracts had in the meantime been surrendered by the purchasers and cancelled by the said Railroad Company.

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1891, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 1st Session, 52nd Congress, 1891-

> "The Company reports that to June 30, 1891, there had been patented to it by the United States 323,068.68 acres of land, and that there had been sold 298,261.45 acres, the total cash receipts from all sales amounting to $707,556.88. There remained outstanding on account of time sales $449,996.40 principal and $153,031.65 interest, making a total of $603,028.05."

showing that the average price per acre of the land so sold was in excess of $2.50 an acre, to wit, $3.88 per acre.

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1892, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 2nd Session, 52nd Congress, 1892-93, Vol. 14, page 188, occurs the following, relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

> "The Company's report shows that to June 30, 1892, there had been patented to it by the United States 323,068.68 acres, and that there had been sold 340,475.85 acres, the total cash receipts from all sales amounting to the sum of $785,586.79. There remained outstanding on account of time sales showing that the average price per acre of the land so sold was in excess of $2.50 an acre, to wit, $4.19 per acre.

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1893, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 2nd Session, 53rd Congress, 1893-94, Vol. 15, page 180, occurs the following, relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

> "The report of the Company shows that to June 30, 1893, the total number of acres received by patent was 323,068.68; that the total cash receipts from all sales had amounted to $859,477.34; and that there remained outstanding on account of time sales the sum of $861,923.64, principal and interest.
> "The receipts of the land department for the year were $73,940.55, and the expenses $75,570.07."

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1894, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Executive Documents, 3rd Session, 53rd Congress, 1894-95, Vol. 16, page 143, occurs the following,

relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

"The Company submits the following report on June 30, 1894, of the operations of its Land Department to date:

"The Company reports that to June 30, 1898, it had received by United States patent 2,561,685.30 acres of land, and had disposed of, for cash and on time contracts (not including cancelled contracts), 504,606.53 acres.

"The total cash receipts from all sales to date amounted to $1,069,513.25, and there were outstanding on account of time sales $792,990.88.

"The receipts for the year were $49,183.50, and the expenses $73,183.06.

"The average price per acre now asked for land is $3.00."

showing that the average price per acre of the land so sold was in excess of $2.50 an acre, to wit, $3.69 per acre.

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year ending June 30, 1899, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Documents, Vol. 20, 56th Congress, 1st Session, 1899-1900, page 181, occurs the following, relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

"The Company reports that to June 30, 1899, it had received by United States patent 2,659,800.56 acres of land.

"The total cash receipts from all sales to date amounted to $1,234,225.97, and there were outstanding on account of time sales $734,957.16.

"The receipts for the year were $164,712.72, and the expenses $77,138.22.

"The average price per acre now asked for land is $3.00."

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year ending June 30, 1900, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Documents, Vol. 29, 56th Congress, 2nd Session, 1900-01, page 185, occurs the following, relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

"The Company reports that to June 30, 1900, it had received by United States patent 2,787,363.55 acres of land.

"The total cash receipts from all sales to date amounted to $1,542,728.71, and there were outstanding on account of time sales $1,189,918.71.

"The receipts for the year were $308,502.74, and the expenses $91,932.33.

"The average price per acre now asked for land is $3.00."

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year ending June 30, 1901, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Documents, Vol. 25, 57th Congress, 1st Session, 1901-02, page 218, occurs the following, relating to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company:

> "The Company reports that to June 30, 1901, it had received by United States patent 2,795,567.64 acres of land.
> "The total cash receipts from all sales to date amounted to $1,852,756.51, and there were outstanding on account of time sales, $1,808,935.66.
> "The receipts for the year were $310,027.80, and the expenses $72,713.77.
> "The average price per acre now asked for land is 3.50."

In the report of said Commissioner of Railroads to the Secretary of the Interior for the year ending June 30, 1893, transmitted by the latter to the President and by the President transmitted to the Congress, there referred to the appropriate Committee of each House, and printed in House Documents, Vol. 21, 58th Congress, 2nd Session, page 159, occurs the following relating to the defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company:

> "The Company reports that to June 30, 1903, it had received by United States patent 2,928,809.55 acres of land, and had disposed of, for cash and on time contracts, 1,032,591.47 acres.
> "The total cash receipts from all sales to above date amounted to $2,735,532.88, and there were outstanding on account of time sales, principal and interest, $2,800,637.57.

"The receipts from this source for the year amounted to $437,471.63, and the expenses to $105,-936.96.

showing that the average price per acre of the land so sold was in excess of $2.50 an acre, to wit, $4.79 per acre.

This defendant further avers that during the years beginning December 31, 1878, and ending December 31, 1903, the said Commissioner of Railroads appended to said reports from the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company to the Secretary of the Interior, except the reports for the years 1886-87, 1896-97, 1897-98 and 1898-99, copies of the said Acts of July 25, 1866, and April 10, 1869, and during some of said years, in addition, appended, to his said reports a copy of the Act of August 25, 1868, and a copy of the Act of May 4, 1870, which said reports and appendices were transmitted, as aforesaid, by said Secretary of the Interior to the President, and by the latter transmitted to the two Houses of Congress, by each of which the same were printed and in each of which the same were referred to the appropriate Committee.

This defendant further avers that, notwithstanding the knowledge of the administrative officers of the Government and of the Congress of the action of the said defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company in selling, from the beginning, said lands in tracts larger than 160 acres and at a price higher than $2.50 per acre, as hereinbefore set forth, the complainant continued to issue patents to said Company for said lands, as follows:

1872	69,061.63	"
1876	14,629.67	"
1877	86,622.71	"
1893	292,486.90	"
1894	382,352.95	"
1895	558,718.40	"
1896	709,729.99	"
1897	37,231.90	"
1898	70,014.02	"
1899	151,061.30	"
1900	42,841.33	"
1901	60,466.60	"
1902	36,166.20	"
1903	36,438.08	"
1904	39,339.08	"
1905	25,838.67	"
1906	20	"
1909	161.75	"
In all	2,765,948.85	"

All the foregoing being in the East Side Grant.
And in the West Side Grant as follows:

1896	32,288.24	"
1897	2,388	"
1898	72.75	"

1903.....	270.14	"
Total	128,618.13	"

This defendant further avers that in the said patents conveying to said defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company, 2,277,144.52 acres of land, no reference was made to said Act of April 10, 1869, and that only in the patents issued in 1872, 1876, 1877, 1893 and 1909, the latter being after the filing of the Bill herein and covering 161.75 acres only, was any reference made to the said Act of April 10, 1869.

This defendant further avers that, from the time of the acquisition thereof, the said defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company, and its predecessor companies in ownership had mortgaged the said lands, in expectancy, to secure the money with which to construct the said railways; that the mortgage executed to this defendant, Union Trust Company of New York, by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, in 1887, upon the said railways, constructed and to be constructed, and upon the said lands, earned and to be earned by the completion thereof, was executed in good faith and in reliance upon the title of said mortgagor to the property in said instrument described and conveyed; and the bonds secured thereby were purchased in good faith and in reliance upon the validity of said mortgage as a lien upon the property covered thereby; and that the proceeds thereof were used, and were necessary to be used, in the completion and equipment of the railways covered thereby, as required by the said Acts of Congress; that of the lands which have been patented by the complainant to the defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company, there had been sold prior to the filing of the Bill herein, in good faith and for valuable consideration, by said Railroad Company, over a million acres, in small tracts and in larger tracts, at prices averaging $4.73 per acre, to various purchasers to the number of several thousand, who bought and paid for the same in good faith; and that during the thirty years which preceded the filing of the Bill herein, notwithstanding that the Executive and Legislative Departments of the Government were fully advised, annually, that the defendant, Oregon & California Railroad Company, was selling said lands in quantities exceeding 160 acres and at prices exceeding $2.50 per acre, no question was ever raised by the complainant, or by any officer of the Government, until the filing of the Bill herein, in respect of or in anywise challenging the correctness of the contemporaneous and practical construction which had been placed upon said Act of Congress of April 10, 1869, by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company and the complainant itself, continuing, as aforesaid, from 1878 to the filing of the Bill herein in 1908.

This defendant, further answering the bill, alleges upon information and belief, that it was a matter of great importance to the complainant to have the said railroads provided for by the said Act of July 25th, 1866, constructed, and that the said complainant expected to receive and has received great benefits as a result of such construction; that in order to raise funds with which to complete the building of said railroad, the said Oregon & California Railroad Company, by an instrument dated July 1st, 1887, a copy of which is annexed to the bill of complaint and marked "Exhibit H," conveyed to this defendant all the lands then unsold embraced in the grants of this complainant to it; that the said conveyance was made to this defendant as a trustee only for the benefit of the holders of the bonds secured by said instrument who advanced their money to aid in the construction of the said railroads for the benefit of the complainant.

This defendant further alleges, upon information and belief, that for many years prior to the making of the said conveyance or deed of trust the said railroad had been openly and habitually selling lands granted to it by the complainant whenever possible in amounts greater than one quarter-section and for more than $2.50 per acre; that conveyances of the said lands had been made from time to time purporting to convey the said lands without any such conditions as are now asserted by this complainant, and that said conveyances were of public record in many places; that the said mortgage deed made to this defendant as aforesaid purported to convey these lands for the benefit of bondholders and without reference to any conditions such as are now asserted by the complainant and that said conveyance was of public record in many places; that the said lands continued to be sold by the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company in quantities of more than one quarter-section and for prices of more than $2.50 per acre whenever possible, without any objection ever being made by the complainant, although the facts were to it well known; that the holders of the bonds secured by the said instrument have advanced their money to aid in the construction of the said Oregon & California Railroad and for the benefit of the complainant as aforesaid relying upon the grants of lands made by the complainant, without any knowledge of or any reason to believe that there was any possibility of, such claims as are now asserted by the complainant, but on the cotrary, having reason to believe from the conduct of the complainant for many years that there were no such claims to be asserted; and this defendant, as trustee under the said instrument for the benefit of the said bondholders, therefore, avers that under the said instrument it is entitled to a lien upon all the lands embraced in the said land grant which had not been sold prior to July 1, 1887, and the proceeds thereof to the extent of $20,000,000.

This defendant denies that its right, title, interest and lien are subject to forfeiture or to any other of the several rights, equities and remedies asserted by the complainant in its bill of complaint. On the contrary, it avers that the right of forfeiture now claimed by the complainant is unjust and inequitable and would result on the one hand in depriving these bondholders of an important part of the security upon which they have advanced money with the full knowledge of and for the benefit of the complainant; and would result on the other hand in enabling this complainant to regain and to re-enjoy the lands which it granted long ago to the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company in consideration of services and advantages which have already been rendered to, and procured for, the complainant.

This defendant further alleges that it has acted in accordance with the terms and trusts of said trust deed, dated July 1, 1887, and that the moneys received by it from the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company upon the sale of lands embraced in the said land grants have been applied by it (after the deduction of the heavy expenses of maintaining and selling the said lands and other expenses of the trust) in the purchase of bonds secured by the said instrument; in other words, the moneys received from the borrower have been applied by the Trustee for the benefit of the lenders; and for this reason, among others, this defendant asserts that even if the complainant is entitled to an accounting from the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company for the proceeds of the sales of said granted lands, it nevertheless is not entitled to call upon this defendant to account.

Amendment allowed by order of April 28, 1913.

(And this defendant avers upon information and belief that during all the times mentioned in the Bill of

Complaint, and particularly from and after the 20th day of May, 1872, down to April 30, 1908, the United States well knew that the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and its predecessors in interest, had continuously and uniformly claimed to own said land grants in fee simple without any condition as to the sale of said lands, and as earned by construction of said roads, and had sold, mortgaged and conveyed the same to secure funds for the construction of said roads, and to refund said indebtedness for said construction funds, by the execution of certain of the mortgages described in said Bill of Complaint, and other mortgages, and the negotiation and sale of bonds issued thereunder, and that the said present outstanding stock of the said Oregon and California Railroad Company was issued and delivered to the owners and holders of the mortgage bonds issued and sold under said mortgage of April 15, 1870, and in satisfaction of said mortgages, and that the proceeds of said bonds were used in the construction of the first 198 miles of the East Side road and of said 47½ miles of said West Side road, and the United States during all said time from May 20, 1872, down to April 30, 1908, well knew the way and manner in which said Oregon and California Railroad Company continuously and uniformly was administering and had administered said land grants, and was selling and had sold said land granted by said Acts of Congress, and during all said times well knew that said company was selling and had sold said lands so sold by it without any particular regard to the alleged limitations or restrictions of said Act of April

10, 1869, or said Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, except insofar as the same may be construed to apply to actual settlers upon any of said lands prior to completion of the separate sections of said roads and the acceptance thereof by the United States, as provided by said Act of July 25, 1866, and said Act of May 4, 1870, and the direction of the President to issue patents for the lands so earned, and that notwithstanding such knowledge during all said time between May 20, 1872, and April 30, 1908, of all said matters, and of all the matters and things allowed in the Bill of Complaint as pretended breaches of the provisions of said Act of April 10, 1869, and Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, and notwithstanding such knowledge during all said time of all the matters and things alleged in the amended answer of the defendant, as heretofore filed and amended, the United States, from said May 20, 1872, to April 30, 1908, asserted no claim of any breach, made no objection to the execution of said deeds, mortgages or conveyances, or to any action of the company in respect to the administration of said grants, or either of them, or the sale of any lands thereby granted, and in no wise asserted any claim that the company was at any time misconstruing said acts, or either thereof, or in any way was violating or had violated said Act of April 10, 1867, or said Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, but on the contrary the United States permitted and allowed the company to mortgage said lands to secure said construction funds so borrowed and used, as aforesaid, and permitted and allowed the company to expend large sums of money in surveying fees and other fees paid to the United States, and to expend large sums of money in taxes upon said lands, and in advertising said lands for sale, and in examining, cruising and grading said lands as timber lands, and also large sums of money in completing said railroad in the first instance from Portland to Roseburg, Oregon, and next in extending the same from Roseburg to Ashland, Oregon, and finally in completing the same to the Oregon and California state line, and also in completing said railroad from Portland to McMinnville, Oregon, and during all said times the United States exacted from said company, and said company furnished the free transportation of the troops and property of the United States, as required by said Act of July 25, 1866, at the cost and expense of said company, aggregating a sum in excess of $600,000.00; that relying upon the acquiesence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, the Oregon and California Railroad Company expended all said sums, as aforesaid, incurred all said liabilities, and so mortgaged, sold and conveyed said lands, claiming to own the same in fee simple without any condition; applied for, accepted and placed of record all the patents issued by the United States for such lands, and so sold and conveyed to purchasers such portions of said granted lands as alleged in said Bill of Complaint, and has applied the proceeds of said sales, and of all sales of said lands, to the redemption of said bonds so issued to secure said construction funds.

That on the 31st day of July, 1885, the Oregon and California Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company, relying upon the said acquiesence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, executed and delivered the agreement of that date, identified as Exhibit No. 9 to the Stipulation as to the Facts on file herein and which is made a part hereof, and to which reference is made as if the same were fully written herein; and on October 11, 1886, said Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Pacific Improvement Company, and the Southern Pacific Company, relying upon the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, executed and delivered the agreement of that date, identified as exhibit No. 1 to the Joint and Several Answer of the O. & C. R. R. Co. and Stephen T. Gage, defendants herein and which is made a part hereof, and to which reference is made as if the same were fully written herein; and on March 28, 1887, the Stockholders' Reconstruction Committee of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the London Bondholders' Committee, the Frankfort Bondholders' Committee, the Southern Pacific Company and the Union Trust Company, relying upon the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, executed and delivered the agreement of that date, identified as Exhibit "E" to the Bill of Complaint, and which is made a part hereof and to which reference is made as if the same were fully written herein, and thereafter the parties to all said agreements, relying upon the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, (consummated, carried out and performed said several agreements, and in pursuance thereof, and in reliance upon said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid,) the said Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered, on January 3, 1888, its said mortgage and trust deed of date July 1, 1887, to the Union Trust Company, and issued and delivered its bonds thereunder to the amount of $20,000,000.00, and said Southern Pacific Company, being the owner of all the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, caused said Pacific Improvement Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company to purchase the said stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for its benefit, and otherwise carried out said agreements, and then and there guaranteed to pay the principal and interest of all said bonds so issued and to be issued by said Oregon and California Railroad Company; that in reliance upon said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, the Southern Pacific Company thereby purchased and became the owner of all said stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and assumed the debts and liabilities of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and caused said railroad to be constructed to the Oregon and California state line, and thereby guaranteed to pay all said bonds, principal and interest, and became the beneficial owner of all said granted lands then unsold, and but for said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, said Southern Pacifc Company would not have purchased said stock nor assumed said debts and liabilities nor caused said road to be constructed to completion nor guaranteed said bonds, principal or interest, and the Oregon and California Railroad Company would have been unable to sell or dispose of its railroad or said land grants, or either of them, or completed said railroad, as required by said Act of Congress, and its creditors would have been compelled to foreclose said existing mortage securing the then outstanding bonds and sell all said property, to the great injury and loss of said company and its creditors, and to the great injury and loss of the United States. That the United States, from July 31, 1885, up to April 30, 1908, and during all said time, well knew of the existence of all of said agreements, including the said mortgage of date July 1, 1887, and of the purpose and intention of all the parties thereto, and of all the matters and things hereinbefore set out, and notwithstanding such knowledge during all of said time from July 31, 1885, to April 30, 1908, and of all the matters and things alleged in the Bill of Complaint as pretended breaches of the provisions of said Act of April 10, 1869, and Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, asserted no claim of any breach, made no objection to the execution or performance of either of said contracts or of the execution of said mortgage of date July 1, 1887, or to any action of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in respect to the administration of said grants, or either of them, or the sale of the lands thereby granted, and in no wise asserted any claim that the company was at any time misconstruing said acts, or either of them, or was in any way violating or had violated said Act of April 10, 1869, or said Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870.

That from time to time the United States caused to be enacted divers and various statutes affecting said Act of July 25, 1866, as amended April 10, 1869, and said Act of May 4, 1870, some of which are the Act of May 3, 1879 (20 Stat. 472) by which homestead settlers on the even sections within the limits of said grant, could enter 160 acres instead of 80 acres; the Timber and Stone Act of June 3, 1878 (20 Stat. 89) by which the lands of the United States in the even sections within the limits of the grant, could be purchased at $2.50 per acre, in quantities of 160 acres, without any settlement, by any citizens, or any person who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States; and the Act of March 3, 1891, (26 Stat. 1097) by which the pre-emption laws were repealed, and the Act of June 4, 1897, (30 Stat. 1136) by which lands owned by any one within forest reserves of the United States, could be reconveyed to the United States, and thereby exchanged for the even sections within the limits of said grants, without any settlement thereon; and the Act of February 10, 1909, (36 Stat. 639), and the Act of June 17, 1910, (36 Stat. 531), and the Act of June 6, 1912 (37 Stat. 123), all amending the Homestead Act of May 20, 1862, (12 Stat. 392); that said statutes and the due administration of the same, as applied to the character and class of lands involved in this suit, which are chiefly valuable for timber and are unfit for settlement, and all lands belonging to the company now unsold, have prevented the company from further compliance with the provisions of said Act of April 10, 1869, or said Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, than as alleged in the Bill of Complaint.

That on August 20, 1912, Congress passed an Act, Public No. 278, H. R. 22002, approved that date, entitled, "An Act supplementing the Joint Resolution of Congress, approved April 30, 1908, entitled, 'Joint Resolution instructing the Attorney General to institute certain proceedings, etc.,'" whereby the United States, in substance and effect, waived the alleged breaches of said Act of April 10, 1869, and Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, as to all the lands described in the Bill of Complaint and now owned by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and particularly as to all said lands sold to persons other than actual settlers, in quantities of 1000 acres or more, and aggregating about 400,000 acres, and particularly described in forty-five suits brought by the United States against said purchasers and these defendants in this court, to which said suits and the proceedings therein, reference is here made as if the same were fully written herein and made a part hereof, and whereby the United States has agreed to convey by patent all said lands to said so-called innocent purchasers in said suits for $2.50 per acre, and whereby the United States has so waived said alleged breaches and so agreed to sell and convey said lands because said lands are and were at the time of such sales so made by the company, unfit for settlement or cultivation and not adapted to entry or settlement under the settlement laws of the United States or under said Act of April 10, 1869, or Section 4 of said Act of May 4, 1870, and because said lands are and were at the time of such sales, chiefly valuable for timber.

That but for the said acquiescence and action of the United States, as aforesaid, said Oregon and California Railroad Company would not have expended said sums, as aforesaid, or otherwise done as it has done, as aforesaid. And said bonds secured by said mortgage would not have been and could not have been sold, and said road could not have been completed.

And the defendant therefore says and alleges that by reason of all the matters, things and acts hereinbefore set out, and by reason of the matters and things in the premises, alleged in its Amended Answer, as heretofore amended and now herein amended, the United States has fully, effectually and finally exercised and waived any and all right it may have had at any time to claim or assert forfeiture of any lands of the said grants, and is and of right ought to be estopped from having or asserting any such or any claim of forfeiture.)

XXIII.

This defendant, further answering the bill, avers that all causes of action set forth in the bill are barred, as follows:

(a) By Section 3901 of Lord's Oregon Laws.

(b) By Section 8 of the Act of Congress approved March 3, 1891, entitled "An Act to amend Section 8 of an Act approved March 3, 1891, entitled 'An Act to repeal Timber-culture laws, and for other purposes,'" published in Vol. XXVI, U. S. Statutes at Large, page 1093.

(c) By the first section of the Act of Congress approved March 2, 1896, entitled "An Act to provide for the extension of time within which suits may be brought to vacate and annul land patents, and for other purposes," published in Vol. XXIX, U. S. Statutes at Large, page 42.

(d) By acquiescence, and laches, of complainant.

XXIV.

This defendant, further answering the bill, avers that by reason of the matters, things and premises aforesaid, and by reason of the passage by Congress of the Act approved January 31, 1885, entitled "An Act to declare forfeiture of certain lands granted to aid in the construction of a railroad in Oregon," made part of this answer by reference to it as published in Vol. XXIII, U. S. Statutes at Large, page 296, and the passage by Congress of the Act approved September 29, 1890, entitled "An Act to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes," made part of this answer by reference to it as published in Vol. XXVI, U. S. Statutes at Large, page 46 and following, the United States fully and finally exercised and waived any and all right it may have had to claim or assert forfeiture of any lands of the said East Side grant or West Side grant, and is thereby estopped from having or asserting any such claim of forfeiture.

XXV.

This defendant, further answering said bill, avers that this Honorable Court, sitting as a court of equity, is without jurisdiction to enquire and determine herein whether the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company or this defendant, or both of said defendants, have committed the alleged breach or breaches of condition subsequent, alleged by the bill to be annexed to said grants of land of July 25, 1866, and May 4, 1870, or either of them, and to decree, as prayed by said bill, the forfeiture to the United States of the said granted lands or any thereof, and, as incidental to any such decree of forfeiture, to require an accounting and payment to the complainant by the said Oregon & California Railroad Company, or by this defendant herein, or either of them, as prayed by said bill.

XXVI.

This defendant prays in all things the same benefit and advantage of this, its answer, as if it had pleaded or demurred to said bill of complaint.

Wherefore, this defendant having fully answered, confessed, traversed and avoided or denied all the material matters in said bill according to its best knowledge, information and belief, prays that it may be hence dismissed, with its reasonable costs and charges most unjustly sustained.

[MOTION OF UNION TRUST CO. TO DISMISS BILL IN INTERVENTION]

[TITLE]

The motion of the defendant, Union Trust Company, individually and as trustee, to dismiss the bill in intervention filed herein on the 2nd day of March, 1909, purporting to be the bill in intervention of B. W. Nunally and about 7 others.

This defendant, Union Trust Company, individually and as trustee, by protestation, not confessing or acknowledging all or any of the matters and things in the said bill in intervention to be true in such manner or form as the same are therein set forth and alleged, moves to dismiss the said bill in intervention and the whole thereof, and for grounds of said motion shows:

1st. That the said bill in intervention does not set forth or show any matter, equity or cause entitling the said B. W. Nunally or any person or person therein named as an intervenor or intervenors to

(a) The relief prayed for in the said bill in intervention, or

(b) Any relief whatsoever.

2nd. The said bill in intervention does not set forth or show any matter, equity or cause entitling the said B. W. Nunally or any person or persons therein named as an intervenor or as intervenors to

(a) The discovery prayed for in the said bill in intervention, or

(b) Any discovery whatsoever.

3rd. As against this defendant the subject matter of the said bill in intervention is without any equity whatsoever.

Wherefore this defendant prays the judgment of this honorable court whether it shall make any further or other answer to the said bill in intervention or to any of the matters and things therein contained, and prays to be hence dismissed with its reasonable costs in this behalf sustained.

[MOTION OF O. & C. R. R. CO., et al., TO DISMISS CROSS-COMPLAINTS AND BILLS IN INTERVENTION]

[TITLE]

Come now Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage, individually and as trustee, defendants above named, by their solicitors and attorneys; and Union Trust Company, individually and as trustee, defendant above named, by its solicitors and attorneys, and show to the court that heretofore the above named defendants and each of them filed in the above entitled court in the above entitled cause, their demurrers to, or motions to dismiss, each and all of the cross complaints and bills in intervention filed in the above entitled cause; and that heretofore each and all of the said demurrers and motions were sustained, and each and all of the cross complainants and intervenors have heretofore elected to stand upon their respective cross complaints and bills in intervention filed herein, and said complainants and intervenors and each of them have waived their right to and decline to plead further in the above entitled cause,

Wherefore, the said defendants, and each of them, move the above entitled court for a judgment and decree in the above entitled cause, dismissing each of the said cross complainants and bills in intervention therein. This motion is based upon all of the records, pleadings and files in the above entitled cause.

PETER F. DUNNE, WM. D. FENTON, and
JAMES E. FENTON,

Solicitors and Attorneys for Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage, individually and as trustee. Defendants.

JNO. M. GEARIN,

Of Solicitors and Attorneys for Union Trust Company, individually and as trustee. Defendant.

WM. F. HERRIN, Of Counsel.

(Endorsed) Motion for a Judgment and Decree of Dismissal of Cross Complaints and Bills in Intervention. Filed July 1, 1913.

A. M. Cannon, Clerk.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 10th day of November 1913, there was duly filed in said Court, an Order in words and figures as follows, to wit:

[ORDER SUSTAINING MOTION OF O. & C. R. R. CO., et al., TO DISMISS CROSS COMPLAINTS AND BILLS IN INTERVENTION]

[TITLE]

This cause coming on to be heard upon motion of Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage, individually and as trustee, and Union Trust Company, individually and as trustee, for an order and decree in the above entitled cause dismissing each of the said cross complaints and bills of intervention therein,

It is Ordered that the said motion be and the same is hereby sustained and that the cross complaints of John L. Snyder and others and the bills of intervention of William F. Slaughter and others, and each and all thereof, be and the same are and each is hereby dismissed, at the cost of the said defendants-cross complainants and the said intervenors.

And it appearing that this order has not been heretofore entered and should have been entered when made on July 1, 1913, it is Ordered that it be now entered as of July 1, 1913.

CHAS. E. WOLVERTON,
District Judge.

(Endorsed) Order Filed Nov. 1, 1913.
A. M. Cannon, Clerk,
By G. H. Marsh, Deputy.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 1st day of July, 1913, there was duly filed in said Court a Decree in words and figures as follows, to wit:

[DECREE]

[TITLE]

This cause, having come on to be heard at this term, upon the pleadings and the evidence, and having been argued and submitted to the court by counsel for the respective parties, and the court being fully advised in the premises; upon consideration thereof, it is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed as follows, viz:

I.

That all of those certain lands and estates in lands hereinafter described have become, and now are, forfeited to, and the title to all of said lands and estates in lands has reverted to, and now is revested in the United States of America, and all of said lands and estates in lands now are the absolute property of the United States of America, free from any and all claim or claims of right, title, interest or lien, in, to or upon the same or any part thereof, by or in favor of the defendants, cross-complainants and intervenors herein or either or any of them, or any party or parties claiming under them or either or any of them.

II.

That the title of the United States of America to all of said lands and estates in lands be, and the same hereby is, quieted and confirmed, and particularly as to any and all claim or claims of right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon the same or any part thereof, by or in favor of the defendants, cross-complainants and intervenors herein, and each and every of them, and each and every party or parties claiming under them or either or any of them.

III.

That each and all of the defendants, cross-complainants and intervenors herein, and their respective officers and agents, be, and they and each of them hereby are, forever enjoined and restrained from in any manner claiming or asserting any right, title, interest or lien in, to or upon the aforesaid lands and estates in lands, or any part thereof; and from in any manner selling, conveying, leasing or disposing of, any of said lands or estates in lands, or any interest therein; and from negotiating, executing or recording any document or instrument, and from doing any other act or thing, which shall in any manner affect or encumber the title to said lands or estates in lands, or any part thereof; and from going upon said lands or any part thereof; and from cutting, removing or in any manner using or injuring any of the timber or other natural products thereof; and from in any manner committing trespass upon said lands or any part thereof; and from in any manner using or interfering with said lands and estates in lands or any part thereof, or the title or possession thereof; and from contracting with, inviting, inducing, or in any manner whatsoever permitting others to do any of the things aforesaid.

IV.

The lands and estates in lands affected hereby, and to which this judgment and decree shall apply and is intended to apply, consist of the following, viz.:

(a) All lands granted by that certain Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon," published in Volume 14 of the Statutes at Large of the United States, beginning at page 239, and the Acts of Congress amendatory thereof, or by that certain Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870, entitled, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville in the State of Oregon," published in Volume 16 of the Statutes at Large of the United States, beginning at page 94, which have been patented under said Acts of Congress respectively to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and which at the date of the institution of this suit were unsold lands then held and claimed by said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company free from any right by purchase from said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, then existing in favor of any person or persons not a party to this suit. Schedule A of this judgment and decree contains a specific description, by governmental sub-division according to the public survey, of all lands shown by the pleadings and evidence herein to be within the foregoing general description.

(It is not intended that the foregoing general description shall be limited by said specific description, or that the specific description set forth in said Schedule A shall be limited by said general description, but this judgment and decree shall apply, and is intended to apply, to each and all of the lands described in said Schedule A, and, in addition thereto, to any and all lands coming within the foregoing general description and not included in said Schdule A.)

(b) All of the lands granted to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company or its predecessor in interest by said Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866 (as amended), or by said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870, and which have not heretofore been patented under said Acts of Congress, respectively, including all of said unpatented lands lying within the place or indemnity limits of said grants, respectively, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, and whether heretofore claimed or unclaimed by the filing of lists, selections, or otherwise, by the defendants, or either or any of them. And it appearing to the court that a large portion of the lands included and intended to be included within the foregoing general description are unsurveyed lands, a specific description of said lands is impracticable, and therefore no schedule describing said lands specifically is inserted in this judgment and decree; but this judgment and decree shall have, and is intended to have, the same force and effect as if all of said unpatented lands were specifically described herein.

(c) All lands, easements, right, title, interest and estates in lands reserved or excepted in or by the terms of any and all contracts or deeds of conveyance executed by or on behalf of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, in the sale of any lands granted by said Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866 (as amended), or by said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870; including all such contracts and deeds of conveyance executed by the European and Oregon Land Company, or by Milton S. Latham, Faxon D. Atherton and William Norris, or by the trustees or trustees under any mortgage or deed of trust heretofore executed by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, or either or any of said parties, either jointly with the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, or otherwise; it being intended hereby to include all reservations and exceptions made in or by the sale or conveyance of any of the lands granted by either of said Acts of Congress, respectively, and which at any time heretofore has accrued, or at any time hereafter shall accrue, in favor of the defendants herein or either or any of them. Provided, that this judgment and decree shall not apply, and is not intended to apply to reservations or exceptions of right-of-way for the main track of the railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company as actually constructed, established and in operation at the date of this decree; but this judgment and decree shall apply and is intended to apply to all other exceptions and reservations described above, including reservations and exceptions of right-of-way other than the right-of-way incident to the main track of said railroad as actually constructed, established and in operation at the date of this decree as aforesaid.

(d) All lands granted by said Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866 (as amended) or by said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870, which heretofore have been or now are subject to contracts of sale heretofore entered into by or on behalf of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company in the sale of any of said granted lands, and which (subject to the rights of the United States of America as adjudicated herein) heretofore have reverted or hereafter shall revert, to the defendants herein, or either or any of them, by reason of the forfeiture, cancellation or rescission of any of such contracts. All of the lands which have heretofore reverted as aforesaid to the defendants, or either or any of them, so far as disclosed by the pleadings and evidence herein, are included in Schedule A hereof. To the end that this decree may be certain and specific as to all lands which may hereafter revert as aforesaid to the defendants, or either or any of them, it is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Stephen T. Gage and Union Trust Company, shall within sixty days from the date that any of said lands shall revert to said defendants, or either or any of them as aforesaid, execute and file with the clerk of this court a deed of conveyance, in due and legal form, conveying and confirming unto the United States of America all of said lands, free from any and all claim or claims of right, title, interest or lien, in, to or upon the same, or any part thereof, in favor of said defendants, or either or any of them. And in the event that said defendants, or either or any of them, shall fail to execute and file any such deed or deeds of conveyance as aforesaid, this judgment and decree shall operate, and shall have the same force and effect, as such deed or deeds of conveyance.

(e) In addition to the lands and estates in lands hereinbefore described, this judgment and decree shall apply and is intended to apply to all right, title, interest, lien or estate in lands, vested or contingent, now asserted or which hereafter may be asserted by the defendants herein, or either or any of them, in or to any of the lands granted or intended to be granted to said defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company or its predecessor in interest by Section two of said Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866 (as amended) or by said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870, and which is founded upon either of said grants or any patent issued thereunder, including all rights to patents by listing of lands situated within the place limits of either of said grants, or the selecting of lands situated within the indemnity limits of either of said grants, whether or not heretofore exercised or attempted to be exercised.

There is hereby excepted from the operation of this judgment and decree all right-of-way and station grounds as established and in actual use at the date of this judgment and decree in the operation of the railroad of the Defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company. Schedule B of this judgment and decree contains a description of all lands included in the foregoing exception so far as said exception applies to any of the lands described in Schedule A of this judgment and decree.

V.

It appearing to the court that a portion of the lands affected and intended to be affected by this judgment and decree are situated in the State of Washington, and beyond the jurisdiction of this court, it is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that within sixty days from the date of this decree the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Union Trust Company and Stephen T. Gage, shall execute and deliver to the Clerk of this Court a deed of conveyance, in due and legal form, conveying and confirming unto the United States of America all of said lands situated in the State of Washington, as aforesaid, free and clear from any and all claim or claims of right, title, interest or lien, in, to or upon the same, or any part thereof, in favor of the defendants herein, or either or any of them, which said lands are particularly described as follows, viz:

CLARKE COUNTY, WASHINGTON.

North of Base Line and West of Willamette Meridian.

Township Two, Range One.

Lot one of Section one.

North of Base Line and East of Willamette Meridian.

Township Three, Range One.

West half of southwest quarter of Section three; east half of northeast quarter, and northwest quarter of northeast quarter of Section twenty-one; lot one of Section thirty-one.

And in the event that said defendants, or either or any of them, shall fail to execute and file any such deed of conveyance as aforesaid, this judgment and decree shall operate, and shall have the same force and effect, as such deed of conveyance.

VI.

It appearing to the court that demurrers or motions to dismiss were heretofore interposed by the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage and Union Trust Company, and that motions to dismiss were heretofore interposed by the complainant, the United States of America, as to each and all of the cross-complaints and bills and petitions in intervention heretofore filed herein, and that all of said demurrers and motions to dismiss have heretofore been sustained, and that each and all of said cross-complainants and intervenors have declined to further plead herein, it is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that each and all of said cross-complaints and bills and petitions in intervention be, and hereby are, dismissed for want of equity, with costs in favor of the prevailing parties, respectively, to be hereafter taxed.

VII.

The court being of the opinion that the complainant is not entitled to an accounting by any of the defendants in addition to the other relief granted to said complainant by the terms of this judgment and decree, it is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that the complainant's prayer for an accounting be, and the same hereby is, denied.

VIII.

It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that the complainant, the United States of America, have and recover from the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage and Union Trust Company, its lawful costs and disbursements herein, taxed at $....., and that execution issue therefor.

Schedule A and Schedule B, hereinbefore referred to, are as follows, viz:

SCHEDULE A

Schedule describing the lands granted by the Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866 (as amended) and by the Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870, which have heretofore been patented to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and which, at the date of the institution of this suit, were unsold lands still held and claimed by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, being the lands hereinbefore referred to in Subdivision (a) of Paragraph IV of this judgment and decree.

In this schedule the lands are tabulated by counties, and are separately stated as to the grant under each of said Acts of Congress respectively.

LANDS GRANTED BY THE ACT OF JULY 25, 1866 (AS AMENDED).

TILLAMOOK COUNTY, OREGON.

South of Base Line and West of Willamette Meridian.

Township Three, Range Seven.

Southeast quarter of Section thirteen; southeast quarter of Section twenty-three; all of Section twenty-five; all of Section thirty-five.

(The patents for all of the foregoing lands described as situated in Township three South, Range seven West, recite that said lands were earned and patented under said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870. The defendants contend, and it appears to the court, that all of said lands were earned, and should have been patented, under said Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866 (as amended). Therefore, for the purpose of accuracy, said lands are described in this schedule as lands granted by said last named act. However, this judgment and decree shall apply, and is intended to apply, to all of said lands, whether earned under the former or the latter of said Acts of Congress.)

one; southwest quarter of northeast quarter, northwest quarter, northeast quarter of southwest quarter, northwest quarter of southeast quarter, southeast quarter of southwest quarter, and southwest quarter of southeast quarter of Section three; all of Section five; southeast quarter of southeast quarter of Section seven; west half of southwest quarter of Section nine; northeast quarter of northeast quarter, southwest quarter of northwest quarter, southwest quarter of southwest quarter, northwest quarter of southwest quarter, and northeast quarter of southeast quarter of Section eleven; northeast quarter of northeast quarter, northeast quarter of northwest quarter, and southeast quarter of southwest quarter of Section thirteen; west half of northeast quarter, and southeast quarter of Section seventeen; south half of northeast quarter, and north half of southeast quarter of Section twenty-one; southeast quarter of southeast quarter of Section twenty-three.

Township Three, Range Three.

All of Section three; all of Section five; east half of Section seven; all of Section nine; north half, southwest quarter, and north half of southeast quarter of Section thirteen; east half of northeast quarter, and north half of southwest quarter of Section fifteen; northwest quarter of northeast quarter, south half of northeast quarter, northwest quarter, and south half of Section seventeen; east half of Section nineteen; east half, north half of northwest quarter, southwest quarter of northwest quarter, and east half of southwest quarter of Section twenty-one; north half, north half of southwest quarter, and southwest quarter of southwest quarter of Section twenty-three; west half, and east half of southeast quarter of Section twenty-five; all of Section twenty-seven; east half of northeast quarter, northwest quarter, and west half of southwest quarter of Section twenty-nine; east half of Section thirty-one; northeast quarter of northeast quarter, and south half of northeast quarter of Section thirty-three; northeast quarter, northeast quarter of northwest quarter, south half of northwest quarter, and south half of Section thirty-five.

South of Base Line and West of Willamette Meridian.

Township One, Range Five.

West half of Section three; south half of northeast quarter, and north half of southeast quarter of Section five; east half of east half, and north half of southwest quarter of Section nine; north half of northwest quarter of Section fifteen; northeast quarter, and south half of Section nineteen; all of Section twenty-nine; north half of northeast quarter, and west half of Section thirty-one.

(Of the foregoing lands described as situated in Township one South, Range five West, the north half of the northwest quarter of Section fifteen was included in a patent correctly reciting that the same was earned and patented under said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870. The patents for all of the other lands above described as situated in said township recite that said lands were earned and patented under said Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, as amended. The defendants contend, and it appears to the court, that all of said lands were earned, and should have been patented, under said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870. Therefore, for the purpose of accuracy, said lands are described in this schedule as lands granted by said last named Act. However, this judgment and decree shall apply, and is intended to apply, to all of said lands, whether earned under the former or the latter of said Acts of Congress.)

Township One, Range Six.

East half of northeast quarter, and northeast quarter of southeast quarter of Section twenty-five; all of Section twenty-nine.

MULTNOMAH COUNTY, OREGON.

North of Base Line and West of Willamette Meridian.

Township Two, Range Two.

North half of northeast quarter, and west half of northwest quarter of Section three; southeast quarter of southwest quarter of Section fifteen.

Township Three, Range Two.

South half of northeast quarter, north half of northwest quarter, south half of southwest quarter, and southeast quarter of Section twenty-seven; north half of Section thirty-five.

YAMHILL COUNTY, OREGON.

South of Base Line and West of Willamette Meridian.

Township Two, Range Six.

All of Section twenty-one; east half, and northeast quarter of northwest quarter of Section twenty-nine; northwest quarter, and west half of northeast quarter of Section thirty-three.

Township Three, Range Six.

North half of Section five.

(The patent for all of the foregoing land described as situated in Township three South, Range six West, recites that said land was earned and patented under said Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, as amended. The defendants contend, and it appears to the court, that all of said land was earned, and should have been patented, under said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870. Therefore, for the purpose of accuracy, said land is described in this schedule as land granted by said last named Act. However, this judgment and decree shall apply, and is intended to apply, to all of said land, whether earned under the former or the latter of said Acts of Congress.)

[STATEMENT OF THE EVIDENCE]

And afterwards, on the .... day of December, 1913, and within the time allowed by orders of Court the Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage (individually and as trustee), Union Trust Company (individually and as trustee), defendants and appellants herein, filed their and each of their STATEMENT OF THE EVIDENCE taken, reported, filed and considered in said cause in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

Case No. 3340.

District Court of the United States
For the District of Oregon

United States of America,

Complainant,

vs.

Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage (individually and as trustee), Union Trust Company (individually and as trustee), and others, Defendants.

Come now the Oregon & California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage

(individually and as trustee), and Union Trust Company (individually and as trustee), defendants and appellants herein, and present this their and each of their statement of the evidence taken, reported, filed and considered in said cause.

WHEREUPON, It is certified that on the 3d day of January, 1913, the complainant and the said defendants-appellants made and filed in said cause, as a part of the evidence therein, a "Stipulation as to the Facts" in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

[STIPULATION AS TO THE FACTS]

[TITLE]

It is stipulated and agreed by and between the undersigned, that the following is a true and correct statement of the particular facts hereinafter set forth, subject to valid objections for irrelevancy or immateriality only; except in the particular instances where objections for incompetency also are herein expressly made and taken; all objections for irrelevancy and immateriality not herein expressly taken, shall be served and filed within twenty days after the filing of this stipulation with the Clerk of the above mentioned Court.

All parties hereto reserve the right to introduce further and additional evidence, within due time.

SUBDIVISION I.

Subdivision I of complainant's Bill of Complaint

(hereinafter referred to as "the Bill") correctly states, on pages 3 and 4 thereof, the citizenship and place of residence of each of the defendants; excepting that the defendant Stephen T. Gage is, and at the time of the filing of the Bill was, a citizen and resident of the City of Oakland, in Alameda County, California.

SUBDIVISION II.

ITEM 1. On July 25th, 1866, Congress passed an Act entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon."; which act was approved and became operative on July 25th, 1866.

ITEM 2. The copy of said Act, set forth on pages 5 to 10, inclusive, of the Bill, is a correct copy thereof.

ITEM 3. The said Act of July 25th 1866 was amended by an Act of Congress approved June 25th 1868, entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon.' "

ITEM 4. The copy of said amendatory Act of June 25th 1868, set forth on page 10 of the Bill, is a correct copy thereof.

SUBDIVISION III.

ITEM 1. The document hereto attached, marked "Exhibit No. 1 to Stipulation." is a correct copy of the original Articles of ncorporation of the Oregon Central Railroad Company (of Portland).

ITEM 2. The said original document was presented to the said Secretary of State on October 6th 1866 by Joseph Gaston, who requested the said Secretary to file the said document and permit him (Gaston) to immediately withdraw it for exhibition to the Legislature of Oregon, then in session; whereupon the Secretary of State did write with a lead pencil the date, "October 6th 1866", on the back of the said document or on an envelope containing the same, and the said Gaston immediately departed with the said document and envelope in his (Gaston's) possession, and it was not returned to the said Secretary of State's office until November 21st 1866. At the time said document was presented to said Secretary of State as aforesaid no certificate or certificates of acknowledgment were appended thereto, and the only signatures thereto were those of J. S. Smith, I. R. Moores, J. H. Mitchell, E. D. Shattuck, Jesse Applegate, F. H. Chenoweth, Joel Palmer and H. W. Corbett. At the time said document was returned to the said Secretary of State's office on November 21st 1866, as aforesaid, it was in the form set forth in said "Exhibit No. 1 to Stipulation."

ITEM 3. The said Oregon Central Railroad Company (of Portland) projected its railroad line from the City of Portland in a westerly direction to the village of Forest Grove, and thence southerly to and beyond the village of McMinnville, on the westerly side of the Willamette River; from which circumstances the said Company became known as (and will be hereinafter designated and referred to as) the "West Side Company", and its railroad line became known as the "West Side Line."

ITEM 4. On October 10th 1866, the Legislature of the State of Oregon adopted, and the Governor of said State approved, the Joint Resolution a correct copy of which is set forth on pages 11 and 12 of the Bill.

ITEM 5. The West Side Company, assuming itself to have been lawfully designated therefor, on May 25th 1867, through its Board of Directors, adopted a Resolution assenting to the said Act of Congress approved July 25th 1866, and on July 6th 1867 filed a certified copy of the said Resolution in the office of the Secretary of Interior, together with a certified copy of its Articles of Incorporation and a certified copy of the said Joint Resolution of the Legislature of the State of Oregon; and on or about August 20th 1868, the West Side Company filed in the Department of Interior a map of survey of its said projected line of railroad, a correct copy of which, on a reduced scale, is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit No. 2 to Stipulation."

ITEM 6. The document hereto attached, marked "Exhibit No. 3 to Stipulation.", is a correct copy of the original Articles of Incorporation of the Oregon Central Railroad Company (of Salem), filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon on April 22nd 1867; and on or about the last-mentioned date the persons whose names were subscribed to the said Articles of Incorporation, contending that the West Side Company was never lawfully incorporated or organized and designing to secure the grants, franchises and other benefits of the said Act of Congress approved July 25th 1866, caused proceedings to be taken which were intended to organize, under the general incorporation laws of the State of Oregon, the Oregon Central Railroad Company (of Salem) named in the Articles of Incorporation filed, as aforesaid, on April 22nd 1867.

ITEM 7. The last-mentioned Oregon Central Railroad Company (of Salem) projected its railroad line on the easterly side of the Willamette River from which circumstance the said Company became known as (and will be hereinafter designated and referred to as) the "East Side Company", and its railroad line became known as the "East Side Line".

ITEM 8. The East Side Company, in furtherance of its aforesaid design, procured the Legislature of the State of Oregon to adopt and the Governor of said State to approve, on October 20th 1868, the Joint Resolution a correct copy of which is set forth on pages 13 and 14 of the Bill.

ITEM 9. A controversy arose between the West Side Company and the East Side Company as to which of the said Companies was entitled to the grants, franchises and other benefits of the said Act of Congress approved July 25th 1866, which controversy, continued until about January 1870.

ITEM 10. On April 10th 1869, Congress passed an Act entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon.', approved July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty six."; which Act was approved on April 10th 1869.

ITEM 11. The copy of said Act, setforth on pages 15 and 16 of the Bill, is a correct copy thereof.

ITEM 12. On June 8th 1869, the East Side Company, through its Board of Directors, adopted the Resolution, a correct copy of which is setforth on pages 16 and 17 of the Bill; and on June 30th 1869 the said Company filed a certified copy of the said Resolution in the Department of Interior of the United States.

ITEM 13. On October 29th 1869, the East Side Company filed in the office of the Secretary of Interior of the United States a map of the survey and location of the first sixty miles of its projected line of railroad, extending Southerly from Portland.

ITEM 14. On or about December 24th, 1869, the East Side Company completed the construction of the first twenty miles of its said line of railroad, commencing at Portland and extending southerly therefrom; and on December 31st 1869 the said twenty-mile section of constructed railroad was approved by Commissioners appointed pursuant to the provisions of Section 4 of the said Act of Congress of July 25th 1866, who had theretofore examined the same.

ITEM 15. "Exhibit A" to the Bill is a correct copy of the original Articles of Incorporation of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon on March 17th 1870.

ITEM 16. The said Articles of Incorporation of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were executed and filed in triplicate, one in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon, one in the office of the County Clerk of the County of Multnomah, Oregon (being the County in which the principal office of the said company was located), and one in the office of the Secretary of the said Company, at the City of Portland, in the said County of Multnomah.

ITEM 17. On March 29th 1870, the East Side Company executed and delivered to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, the instrument in writing a correct copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit B"; which instrument was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the several Counties in which was situated any part of the lands intended to be granted by the said Act of Congress of July 25th 1866.

ITEM 18. On April 4th 1870, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, through its Board of Directors, adopted the Resolution, a correct copy of which is setforth on pages 20 and 21 of the Bill; and on April 28th 1870 filed a certified copy thereof, together with a certified copy of the said instrument in writing dated March 29th 1870 (copy attached to the Bill as "Exhibit B") in the office of the Secretary of Interior; and at all times since the date of the said instrument the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed, and still assumes, itself to be the successor of the East Side Company in and to all the franchises, rights and property granted or intended to be granted by the said Acts of Congress.

SUBDIVISION IV.

ITEM 1. On May 4th 1870, Congress passed an Act entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon"; which Act was approved on May 4th 1870.

ITEM 2. The copy of said Act, setforth on pages 22 to 25, inclusive, of the Bill, is a correct copy thereof.

ITEM 3. By the words "Oregon Central Railroad Company", in the said Act of May 4th 1870, Congress intended to and did refer to the West Side Company.

ITEM 4. On July 2nd 1870, the West Side Company, through its Board of Directors, assented to and accepted all of the provisions of the said Act of May 4th 1870; and on July 20th 1870, filed the said assent in the office of the Secretary of Interior.

SUBDIVISION V.

ITEM 1. By the issuance and negotiation or pledge of mortgage bonds, approximately $8,000,000 was during the year 1870 procured by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and approximately $1,000,000 was during the year 1871 procured by the West Side Company in the same way; and with the funds thus procured the work of constructing the lines of railroad contemplated by the said Acts of Congress of July 25th 1866 and May 4th 1870, respectively, was prosecuted continuously until about January 1873.

ITEM 2. As hereinbefore set forth (Sub III, Item 14), the East Side Company completed the construction of the first twenty miles of its line of railroad commencing at Portland and extending southerly therefrom; and on or about March 29th 1870, executed the instrument in writing a copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit B". With the funds procured by it in 1870, as setforth in the next preceding "Item 1", the Oregon and California Railroad Company, during the years 1870, 1871 and 1872, completed the construction of the East Side railroad from the point at which the East Side Company had quit the work to a point near Roseburg, a distance of approximately 197 miles; and with the funds procured by it in 1871, as setforth in the next preceding "Item 1", the West Side Company completed construction of the railroad contemplated by the Act of Congress of May 4th 1870, from Portland to McMinnville by way of Forest Grove, a distance of approximately 47 miles.

ITEM 3. About January 1873, the said funds became exhausted, and because thereof further construction of each of said railroads was at that time discontinued, and was not resumed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company until about June 1881, and was never resumed by the West Side Company.

ITEM 4. On or about July 24th 1874, the direction and control of the financial affairs of the said two Companies were assumed, and thereafter exercised, by the then creditors thereof, organized under the name "Bondholders Committee"; which Bondholders Committee, on or about February 29th 1876, acquired all capital stock of both of said Companies and thereafter, and until on or about June 1st 1881, the affairs of said two Companies were conducted by and under the control of the said Bondholders Committee.

ITEM 5. On October 6th 1880, the West Side Company executed and delivered unto the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, the instrument in writing a correct copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit C"; a certified copy of which instrument was filed with the Secretary of Interior of the United States on or about October 20th 1880.

ITEM 6. At all times since the date of said instrument the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has assumed, and still assumes, itself to be the successor of the West Side Company in and to all the franchises, rights and property granted or intended to be granted by the said Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870.

SUBDIVISION VI.

ITEM 1. On or about May 7th 1881, the financial affairs of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were adjusted, substantially, as follows: All the said Company's capital stock was, by action of its Board of Directors and Stockholders, canceled, and the amount of its capital stock was then established at, has ever since remained and still is of, the total par value of $19,000,000, consisting of $12,000,000 preferred stock and $7,000,000 common stock; and in payment of its then existing indebtedness, with accrued interest thereon, all of the said new capital stock was then issued, and ever since has been and still is outstanding. By the issuance of said new capital stock, and use of a part of the proceeds of the new bond issue referred to in "Item 5" of this subdivision, all of the Oregon and California Railroad Company's then existing indebtedness was fully paid and discharged, and the several mortgages and other instruments purporting to secure the same were canceled and satisfied.

ITEM 2. On June 2nd 1881, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered to Henry Villard, Robert Peebles and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees for the owners and holders of the said preferred stock, the Trust Deed a correct copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit D".

ITEM 3. On or about June 28th 1881, the Trust Deed referred to in the next preceding "Item 2" of this subdivision, was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, Oregon, in Book 27 of Mortgages at page 179; and thereafter, and about the same time, the said Trust Deed was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of the Several Counties in which was situated any part of the lands granted by either of said land-grants.

ITEM 4. Thereafter such proceedings were had and action taken under the provisions of the said Trust Deed, by and with the consent and co-operation of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, that the defendant Stephen T. Gage became, and now is, the sole surviving Trustee thereunder; and the said defendant Stephen T. Gage as such Trustee (but not individually), and the defendant Southern Pacific Company as the present owner of all of said preferred stock, claim and assert a lien upon the said lands, under and by virtue of the said Trust Deed.

ITEM 5. By the issuance and negotiations of two separate issues of its corporate bonds, bearing date June 1st 1881 and May 26th 1883, respectively (known and designated as "First Mortgage Bonds" and "Second Mortgage Bonds", respectively), the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company provided approximately $5,000,000 further construction funds; and on or about June 1st 1881, the work of constructing the East Side railroad was resumed and thereafter continued until about January 1884. During the last-mentioned period of construction the East Side railroad was constructed and extended from Roseburg to a point about one and one-quarter miles southerly from Ashland, in the State of Oregon, a total distance of approximately 145 miles.

ITEM 6. About January 1884, the last-mentioned construction funds became exhausted, and the work of further construction was discontinued until about April 1887, when it was resumed.

ITEM 7. About January 19th 1885, the said First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds being still outstanding, in a suit theretofore brought and then pending in the United States Circuit Court for the District of Oregon, wherein certain of the holders of the said First Mortgage Bonds were plaintiffs and the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and others were defendants, the railroads and other property of the said Oregon and California Railroad Company were placed in the hands of a Receiver then and in that suit appointed for that purpose.

ITEM 8. On May 12th 1887, the general status of the said land-grants was as follows:

(a). Under the East Side grant, during the year 1871 to 1877, inclusive, patents for 323,078.68 acres of land (being lands contiguous to the first 125 miles of the said East Side Railroad) were applied for by and issued to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company. Except as aforesaid, no patents under the said East Side grant were issued until the year 1893.

(b). No patents under the West Side grant were issued prior to the year 1895.

(c). The total length of the East Side railroad is, approximately, 367 miles. With the exception of the northerly 197 miles thereof, no part of the East Side railroad was constructed within the times prescribed therefor; and on May 12th 1887, the portion of the East Side railroad extending from Ashland to the southerly boundary line of the State of Oregon, remained unconstructed.

(d). That part of the West Side railroad extending from Forest Grove to Astoria, was never constructed, and because thereof the granted lands of the West Side grant contiguous to such unconstructed railroad were, by Act of Congress approved January 31st 1885, entitled "An Act to declare forfeiture of certain lands granted to aid in the construction of a railroad in Oregon.", declared forfeited to and the ownership thereof was resumed by the United States.

(e). Of the aforesaid granted lands, 163,430.28 acres were sold by the Oregon and California Railroad Company prior to May 12th 1887. Nearly all of the said sold lands were so sold to actual settlers, in small quantities, although in a few instances such sales were made in quantities exceeding 160 acres to one person, and for prices slightly in excess of $2.50 per acre.

SUBDIVISION VII.

ITEM 1. The defendant Southern Pacific Company was incorporated by an Act of the General Assembly of the State of Kentucky, entitled "An Act to incorporate the Southern Pacific Company.", approved March 17th 1884; which Act was amended by an act of the General Assembly of the State of Kentucky, approved March 21st 1888, entitled "An Act to amend 'An Act to incorporate the Southern Pacific Company' approved March 17th 1884." A correct copy of the said Act of March 17th 1884 and amendatory Act of March 21st 1888, is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit No. 4 to Stipulation."

ITEM 2. "Exhibit No. 5 to Stipulation", hereto attached, is a correct copy of Articles of Association, Amalgamation and Consolidation of the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California and the Western Pacific Railroad Company, filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of California on June 23rd 1870, amalgamating and consolidating the said Companies into the Central Pacific Railroad Company, incorporated as such by the said Articles.

ITEM 3. "Exhibit No. 6 to Stipulation", hereto attached, is a correct copy of Articles of Amalgamation and Consolidation between the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the California and Oregon Railroad Company, and the other Railroad Companies therein named, filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of California on August 22nd 1870.

ITEM 4. At the time Articles of Amalgamation and Consolidation referred to in the next preceding "Item 3" of this subdivision were filed, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company was the owner of all unsold lands west of a point near Ogden, in Utah, coterminous with the Central Pacific railroad from Ogden by way of Elko and Reno, in Nevada, Colfax, Auburn, Sacramento, Stockton, Niles and San Jose to San Francisco, in California, granted by the Act of Congress approved July 1st 1862, entitled "An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes.", reference to which is hereby made as the said Act is published in United States Statutes at Large, Volume 12, page 489 and following, as enlarged by the amendatory Act of Congress approved July 2nd 1864, entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military and other purposes.', approved July first eighteen hundred and sixty-two.", reference to which is hereby made as the said amendatory Act is published in United States Statutes at Large, Volume 13, page 356 and following; and at the time the said Articles of Amalgamation and Consolidation were filed, the said California and Oregon Railroad Company was the owner of all unsold lands in California, granted by the Act of Congress approved July 25th 1866, entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon.", a correct copy of which is set forth on pages 5 to 10, inclusive, of the Bill.

ITEM 5. From the date of filing the last-mentioned Articles of Amalgamation and Consolidation until July 29th 1899, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company remained the owner of all lands of the three several land-grants setforth in the next preceding "Item 4" of this subdivision, which were unsold at the date of filing the said last-mentioned Articles, and were not thereafter, from time to time (prior to July 29th 1899), sold by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company; and by the instrument in writing executed and delivered on July 29th 1899, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked "Exhibit No. 7 to Stipulation.", the said Central Pacific Railroad Company granted and conveyed unto the Central Pacific Railway Company, all lands of the said land-grants remaining unsold on July 29th 1899. The statements in this Item and the last preceding Item 4 concerning the ownership and conveyance of the lands granted by said Acts of Congress are made subject to the terms and provisions of said Acts of Congress respectively, and all rights of the United States thereunder—the title to said lands not being an issue in the suit at bar.

ITEM 6. "Exhibit No. 8 to Stipulation", hereto attached, is a correct copy of the Articles of Association and Certificate of Incorporation of the Central Pacific Railway Company, referred to in the next preceding "Item 5" of this subdivision hereof.

ITEM 7. "Exhibit No. 2" to the printed "Joint and Several Answer of Defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage, to Bill of Complaint of the United States, in the above-entitled Case.", on file herein (hereinafter referred to as the "Joint and Several Answer"), is a correct copy of the Agreement, dated February 7th 1885, by which the said Central Pacific Railroad Company leased its said railroad from Ogden to San Francisco and branch thereof from Roseville Junction to Delta, together with certain other railroads and property connected therewith in the said Agreement described, unto the said Southern Pacific Company; pursuant to which Agreement the said Southern Pacific Company has held possession of the railroads and other property therein described, and operated the said railroads, as such lessee, continuously since the date of the said Agreement, and still continues to so operate the same.

ITEM 8. "Exhibit F" to the Bill is a correct copy of the Agreement, dated July 1st, 1887, by which the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company leased all its railroads in Oregon (including its East Side railroad and its West Side railroad) and other property used in connection therewith in the said Agreement described, unto the defendant Southern Pacific Company; pursuant to which Agreement the said Southern Pacific Company held possession of and operated the said railroads and property as such lessee, continuously from June 6th 1888, until August 1st, 1893.

ITEM 9. "Exhibit No. 3" to the said Joint and Several Answer, is a correct copy of the Agreement, dated January 1st 1888, by which the said Central Pacific Railroad Company leased its said railroad from Delta to the north boundary line of the State of California, unto the said Southern Pacific Company; pursuant to which Agreement the said Southern Pacific Company has held possession of and operated the said railroad, as such lessee, continuously since the date of said Agreement, and still continues to so operate the same.

ITEM 10. "Exhibit G" to the Bill is a correct copy of a new Lease, dated August 1st 1893, by which the Oregon & California Railroad Company leased all its railroads in Oregon (including the East Side railroad and West Side railroad) and other property used in connection therewith in the said Lease of July 1st 1887, described in "Item 8" of this Subdivision hereof, unto the defendant Southern Pacific Company; pursuant to which last-mentioned Lease the said Southern Pacific Company has held possession of and operated the said railroads continuously from August 1st 1898, inclusive, to the present time, and still continues to so hold possession of and operate the same.

ITEM 11. On or about December 1867, the principal stockholders of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company of California became the principal stockholders of the said California and Oregon Railroad Company; and on or about August 1st 1899, the said Southern Pacific Company became, has ever since remained and still is, the principal stockholder of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company; and on or about August 1st, 1899, the said Southern Pacific Company became, has ever since remained and still is, the principal stockholder of the said Central Pacific Railway Company; and on or about April 9th 1901 the said Southern Pacific Company became, has ever since remained and still is, the principal stockholder of the said Oregon and California Railroad Company.

ITEM 12. On or about July 31st 1885, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company and said Central Pacific Railroad Company entered into a certain agreement in writing, a copy of which marked "Exhibit No. 9 to Stipulation", is hereto attached; and on or about October 11th 1886, the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Pacific Improvement Company (a corporation organized in 1878 under the laws of the State of California) and the defendant Southern Pacific Company entered into a certain agreement in writing a copy of which marked "Exhibit No. 1" is attached to the said printed Joint and Several Answer. Prior to the execution of either of said two last-mentioned contracts, the stockholders of the Oregon and California Railroad Company became and were organized under the name "Stockholders Committee", certain of the owners of the aforesaid mortgage bonds became and were organized under the name "Frankfort Bondholders Committee", and certain other of the owners of said bonds became and were organized under the name "London Bondholders Committee", said Bondholders Committee representing the owners of substantially all of the aforesaid First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds of said Oregon and California Railroad Company.

ITEM 13. "Exhibit E" to the Bill is a correct copy of a written Contract made and entered into by and between the parties named therein, on March 28th 1887.

ITEM 14. Pursuant to the provisions of the said Contract of March 28th 1887, on or about May 12th 1887 all of the capital stock and all of the said Second Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were transferred, assigned and delivered to the said Pacific Improvement Company, and all of the said First Mortgage Bonds were transferred, assigned and delivered to the defendant Southern Pacific Company. The statements of this Item and the next succeeding Item 15 concerning the transferring, assigning and delivering of the capital stock of the defendant

Oregon and California Railroad Company to said Pacific Improvement Company, and by the latter to said Southern Pacific Company, shall not be taken as an admission on the part of the Government that said capital stock was not held by said Pacific Improvement Company in trust for said Southern Pacific Company, as charged in the Bill.

ITEM 15. The said Pacific Improvement Company held said capital stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company until April 9th 1901, when it assigned and transferred the same unto the said Southern Pacific Company; and the said Southern Pacific Company has ever since remained, and still is, the owner and holder of said capital stock. The said Pacific Improvement Company owned and held the controlling interest in said Southern Pacific Company from about March 1887 until after April 9th 1901.

ITEM 16. "Exhibit H" to the Bill is a correct copy of the Trust Mortgage, bearing date July 1st 1887, given by the said Oregon and California Railroad Company to the defendant Union Trust Company of New York.

ITEM 17. By that certain provision of the Trust Mortgage referred to in the next preceding "Item 16" of this subdivision hereof, which reads as follows: "And all the property, real, personal or mixed, which on the twelfth day of May, 1887, was covered by the mortgage securing the then existing First Mortgage Bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad Company", reference was had, and intended to be had, to a certain Deed of Trust, executed by the said Oregon and California Railroad Company to Henry Villard, Horace White and Charles Edward Bretherton, as Trustees, bearing date June 1st 1881, a correct copy of which is attached to the Bill as "Exhibit I."

ITEM 18. The said Trust Mortgage of July 1st 1887, referred to in the next preceding "Item 17" and "Item 16" of this subdivision hereof, was recorded on January 20th 1888, in the office of the County Recorder of Multnomah County, Oregon, in Book 63 of Mortgages, at page 287; and about the same time the said Trust Mortgage was recorded in the office of the County Recorder of each of the several Counties in which was situated any of the lands granted by the said Acts of Congress of July 25th 1866 or May 4th 1870.

ITEM 19. The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company executed and delivered certain of the bonds provided for by the said Trust Mortgage of July 1st 1887, of which $17,745,000 in amount are still outstanding; the payment of all which bonds, both as to principal and interest, was and is guaranteed by the defendant Southern Pacific Company.

ITEM 20. The Bonds secured by the Mortgage to the defendant Union Trust Company of New York as Trustee were used in large part, pursuant to the provisions of the Contract of March 28th 1887 ("Exhibit

E" appended to the Bill), to retire the Bonds secured by the earlier Mortgages of June 1st 1881 and May 26th 1883, respectively, which had been sold abroad; and a large part of the balance of said Bonds secured by the Mortgage to Union Trust Company of New York also were negotiated abroad; and most of the Bonds secured by the said Mortgage to the defendant Union Trust Company of New York are now owned abroad—especially in Holland and Germany.

ITEM 21. By the issuance and negotiation of two separate issues of its corporate Bonds bearing date June 1st 1881 and May 26th 1883, respectively, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company provided funds aggregating approximately $5,000,000 which were used in the construction of its railroad; and the Bonds secured by the Mortgage of the Oregon and California Railroad Company to the defendant Union Trust Company of New York, dated July 1st 1887, were used to retire the Bonds secured by the Mortgages of 1881 and 1883, aforesaid, and to complete the construction of the said railroad.

ITEM 22. The total amount of the Bonds issued under and secured by the Mortgage of the Oregon and California Railroad Company to the defendant Union Trust Company of New York was $20,000,000; and from the proceeds of the sale of lands received by it, the said Union Trust Company of New York has paid off $2,255,000 of said Bonds, leaving a balance outstanding of $17,745,000.

ITEM 23. The defendant Union Trust Company of New York, as trustee for the owners and holders of said Bonds, claims to have and hold a lien upon the said granted lands, under and by virtue of the said Trust Mortgage of July 1st, 1887.

ITEM 24. During the year 1887, the last section of the East Side railroad, extending from a point near Ashland to the southern boundary line of Oregon, and the section of railroad in California extending from Delta to connection with the said East Side railroad at the said southern boundary line of Oregon, were constructed by the said Pacific Improvement Company. "Exhibit No. 10 to Stipulation," hereto attached, is a correct copy of a certain contract made and executed on or about June 6th 1887, by and between the said Oregon and California Railroad Company and Pacific Improvement Company. At the time of the execution of said contract of June 6th 1887, a large part of said work of construction had been performed by said Pacific Improvement Company; but it is not intended hereby to stipulate whether said prior work of construction was performed pursuant to said contract of October 11th 1886, or some other contract, or otherwise.

ITEM 25. On or about June 6th 1888, the aforesaid Receivership proceedings were dismissed, and the said Receiver was discharged, and all of the said First Mortgage Bonds and Second Mortgage Bonds (not including the bonds issued under the Trust Mortgage of July 1st 1887), together with all Mortgages and Trust Deeds securing the payment thereof, were canceled and discharged; and thereupon and ever since the defendant Southern Pacific Company has continued in possession of, pursuant to its hereinbefore mentioned Leases from the Oregon and California Railroad Company (copy attached to the Bill as "Exhibit F" and "Exhibit G"), of the railroads and all property therein described.

SUBDIVISION VIII.

ITEM 1. "Exhibit No. 11 to Stipulation", hereto attached, is a correct copy of a Resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the Oregon & California Railroad Company on February 7th 1891; "Exhibit No. 12 to Stipulation", hereto attached, is a correct copy of Resolution adopted by the said Board of Directors on March 14th 1892; and the forms of Deeds setforth in the said Exhibits are the forms of Deeds referred to in Subdivision VIII, 3rd paragraph on page 41 of the Bill herein.

ITEM 2. Lands of the said East Side grant to the amount of 2,422,708 acres were patented to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company between the years 1893 and 1906, both years inclusive; and the lands of the said West Side grant to the amount of 128,618.13 acres were patented to the said Company between the years 1895 and 1903, both years inclusive; which patents were issued, from time to time, between the said dates pursuant to applications made therefor by the said Oregon and California Railroad Company, from time to time, between the years 1876 and 1906.

No patent has issued to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, under either of said land-grants, since the year 1906, except Supplemental Patent No. 3, dated June 21st 1909, for 161.75 acres of land in the indemnity limits of the said East Side grant.

ITEM 3. A rapidly increasing demand for the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, in large quantities and at increased prices, commenced about 1889 or 1890, and has continued ever since.

ITEM 4. From about 1894 to 1903, the said Oregon and California Railroad Company sold and disposed of some of its said granted lands to persons not actual settlers in quantities exceeding 160 acres to one person, and at prices exceeding $2.50 per acre; and in several instances, between the said dates, the said Company sold lands of the said grants in quantities of from 1,000 to 20,000 acres to one purchaser at prices ranging from $5.00 to $20.00 per acre, in one instance at $35.00 per acre, in one instance at $40.00 per acre, and in one instance a sale of 45,000 acres at $7.00 per acre was made by the said Company to a single purchaser.

ITEM 5. The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has heretofore made approximately 5,306 sales of its land-grant lands, aggregating 820,000 acres; approximately 4,930 of which sales were for quantities not exceeding 160 acres to one purchaser, aggregating about 296,000 acres, and approximately 376 of which sales were for quantities exceeding 160 acres to one purchaser, aggregating about 524,000 acres.

ITEM 6. Substantially all of the said 524,000 acres were sold to persons other than actual settlers, who purchased the land for purposes other than settlement, and at prices in excess of $2.50 per acre; approximately 478,000 acres of which 524,000 acres were sold since the year 1897; and approximately 370,000 acres of the said 524,000 acres were sold to 38 purchasers in quantities exceeding 2,000 acres to each purchaser.

ITEM 7. Approximately three-fourths, in number, of all sales made since the year 1897, were made by Contracts providing for payment of purchase price in from five to ten equal annual payments, and execution of conveyance upon final payment; many of which sales were still pending under such Contracts on January 1st 1903, the conveyances under which were executed from time to time after January 1st 1903, and a considerable number of said Contracts were still pending when this suit was brought.

ITEM 8. Of the total sales made as aforesaid, 4508 had been fully executed and conveyances given aggregating 740,002.45 acres at the time the said printed Joint and Several Answer was filed; and at said time 571 executory Contracts were still pending, aggregating 81,684.31 acres.

ITEM 9. "Exhibit No. 4" attached to the said Joint and Several Answer is, substantially, a correct statement of all land sales made by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, including all sales executed by conveyances and all sales under Contracts not executed by conveyances, at the time the said Joint and Several Answer was filed. "Exhibit J", attached to the Bill is, substantially, a correct statement of all conveyances of said granted lands made by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, and of all contracts pending at the time said "Exhibit J" was compiled, viz: July 1st, 1908. The apparent discrepancies between said "Exhibit No. 4" attached to the said Joint and Several Answer, and said "Exhibit J" attached to said Bill, are explained by the fact that said "Exhibit No. 4" attached to said Joint and Several Answer is compiled with reference to the original date of sales; while said "Exhibit J" attached to said bill is compiled with reference to the date of excuted conveyances, except as to pending contracts; moreover the classification of sales (as to purchase price and quantity sold to each purchaser) in said "Exhibit No. 4" attached to said Joint and Several Answer differs from the classification used in said "Exhibit J" attached to said Bill.

SUBDIVISION IX.

ITEM 1. At or about the time the said Joint and Several Answer was filed herein, there remained unsold of said granted lands, 2,360,492.81 acres, of which 2,075,616.45 acres were theretofore patented unto the Oregon and California Railroad Company under the said land-grants, and 284,876.36 acres thereof at that time remained unpatented; all of which unsold lands are claimed by the said Oregon and California Railroad Company under and by virtue of the said land grants.

ITEM 2. Approximately 1,800,000 acres of the said unsold lands are situated southerly from Eugene, and constitute more than one-third, in alternate sections, of all lands lying within approximately twenty miles on each side of the East Side railroad from Eugene to the southern boundary line of Oregon; only a small portion of which granted lands, in that part of the East Side grant, have ever been sold.

ITEM 3. Since January 1st 1903, and principally since February 14th 1907, persons exceeding 4,000 in number have severally applied to the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to purchase certain of the said unsold lands in quantities not exceeding 160 acres to each person; said applicants claiming that they desired such lands to settle and establish a home upon; and in a few instances claiming that they had settled and established a home upon the lands applied for by them; and at or about the time the said applications were made, each applicant stated that he then was willing and able to tender payment at the rate of $2.50 per acre for the lands applied for by him, and in a few instances such tender was made.

ITEM 4. On or about January 1st 1903, the Oregon and California Railroad Company withdrew from sale all the said unsold lands; and the said Company at all times refused, and still refuses, to approve or accept any of the applications to purchase referred to in the next preceding "Item 3" of this subdivision hereof, claiming that all the lands so applied for are essentially timber lands, unsuitable for any other purpose.

ITEM 5. The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company now assumes and asserts an absolute and unconditional estate in and to all of the said unsold lands.

ITEM 6. "Exhibit K" to the Bill, as corrected by "Exhibit No. 5" to the said Joint and Several Answer, contains a correct list and description of all the said unsold lands which have heretofore been patented.

ITEM 7. "Exhibit No. 6" to the said Joint and Several Answer, contains a correct list and description of all unsold, unpatented primary lands, and of all unsold selected but unpatented indemnity lands (claimed by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company under the said land-grants.)

ITEM 8. The reasonable value of the said unsold lands exceeds the sum of $30,000,000.

SUBDIVISION X.

ITEM 1. The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company has, in addition to the purchase price received from sales of the said granted lands, received and enjoyed the following other benefits on account of said granted lands, between April 1st 1870 and April 30th 1911; towit:

(a). A large number of contracts of sale have been forfeited because of defaults in payment of the annual installments due thereon, and the installments previously paid, amounting in all to $88,205.06 have been retained by the said Railroad Company.

(b). A portion of the said lands has, from time to time, been leased for certain rentals therefor paid the said Railroad Company, amounting in all to $5,532.07.

(c). The said Railroad Company has cut and used large quantities of timber growing upon the said land, receiving the benefit therefrom to the amount of $18,-850.25, a reasonable stumpage value thereof at the times of such cutting.

(d). In addition to the aforesaid amounts, the said Railroad Company has also received $10,687.92, collected from persons who, without its permission or consent, cut timber growing on the said lands.

SUBDIVISION XI.

The foregoing "Subdivision X" hereof sets forth, substantially, the correct value of all growing timber cut by or with consent of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company from the said unsold lands, and the amount received by the said Railroad Company for growing timber cut by others from the said lands without its consent; and the said Railroad Company has not cut, nor permitted others to cut, timber growing on the said unsold lands, since the commencement of this suit; and all of the said unsold lands now are, and at all times since this suit was brought have been, withdrawn from sale by the said Railroad Company.

SUBDIVISION XII.

ITEM 1. Until about the year 1890, or 1891, there was substantially no demand for said granted lands, except for the purpose of settlement or by persons of limited means able to purchase such lands only in quantities not exceeding 160 acres and at prices not exceeding $2.50 per acre; and nearly all sales made prior to the year 1894 were of that character, and to such persons.

ITEM 2. During a large part of the time prior to the year 1894, the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company maintained an immigration bureau, engaged in inducing immigration and settlement upon said lands; and the greater part of the sales of lands to persons not settlers thereon, or in quantities exceeding 160 acres to one person, or for prices exceeding $2.50 per acre were made after the year 1894.

SUBDIVISION XIII.

ITEM 1. "Exhibit No. 17 to Stipulation" is a correct statement of the facts therein set forth; and is appended hereto for the purpose of correcting "Exhibit No. 9" to the said Joint and Several Answer, and of admitting the same to be true as thus corrected.

ITEM 2. "Exhibit No. 10" to the said Joint and Several Answer, is a correct statement of the facts therein set forth, after striking out "A few", the first two words thereof.

ITEM 3. "Exhibit L" to the Bill is a correct copy of a Memorial adopted by the Legislature of Oregon on February 14th 1907, and communicated to Congress immediately thereafter.

ITEM 4. The Joint Resolution of Congress, a correct copy of which is set forth on pages 53 and 54 of the Bill, was approved on April 30th 1908; and this suit was instituted pursuant to said Joint Resolution.

SUBDIVISION XIV.

Since the beginning of this suit, forty-five other and separate suits have been brought in the name of the United States, each against the defendants to this stipulation and another person or other persons, asserting and praying for the enforcement of claimed rights and equitable remedies pertaining to certain of said granted lands subject to such suits, sold and conveyed by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company to such other persons defendants, in alleged violation of alleged provisions or conditions of the said land grants.

SUBDIVISION XV.

The parties hereto disagree as to what are the true facts which Subdivision "XV" of the pleadings of the respective parties put at issue, and proof of such facts at issue is left open.

SUBDIVISION XVI.

Pursuant to the rules and regulations of the Department of Interior in that behalf adopted and in force, all of the aforesaid patents were issued and based upon applications in writing therefor, from time to time filed in the appropriate land office of the United States by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company as the "successor and assignee" of the said East Side Company and West Side Company, respectively —which said applications contained description lists of the lands so claimed and for which patents were so applied for; and each of said applications was accompanied and supported by an affidavit in writing signed and sworn to by the Land Agent of the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company thereto duly authorized, alleging among other things as follows: "The said lands are vacant, unappropriated, are not interdicted mineral, nor reserved lands, and are of the character contemplated by the granting Act" under which patents were applied for, and issued as aforesaid.

SUBDIVISION XVII.

ITEM 1. The Contracts and Deeds executed by the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company prior to about the year 1894, contained (substantially) the following reservation clause:

"Reserving, however, a strip of land one hundred feet wide, to be used by the Oregon and California Railroad Company for right of way or other railroad purposes, when the railroad of said Oregon and California Railroad Company or any of its branches is or shall be located upon the premises, and the right to use all water needed for the operating and repair of said railroad, and also reserving all claim of the United States to the same as mineral lands."

ITEM 2. The words "and also reserving all claim of the United States to the same as mineral land" were stricken from the said reservation clause in the Contracts and Deeds executed by the said Railroad Company from about 1894 until about 1902; and in Contracts and Deeds executed by the said Railroad Company during and at all times after about the year 1902, the words "and also reserving and excepting from said described premises so much thereof as may be mineral lands", were substituted for the said stricken out words.

ITEM 3. The defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company claims to be the owner of all rights, lands and interest in lands, at any time excepted or reserved by the said clause.

SUBDIVISION XVIII.

The undersigned defendants claim that the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company is, and claims to be, the owner of said granted lands (primary and indemnity), patented and unpatented, not heretofore sold and transferred by its Deeds of conveyance, together with all right of way and other rights and property in Oregon described as granted by section 3 of the said Act of July 25th 1866 and the first section of the said Act of May 4th 1870, and all the rights and property reserved as aforesaid for any and all railroad purposes, and the improvements upon all of the said lands and property; and the undersigned defendants claim that all of the said land and property is subject to the defendant Union Trust Company's said Trust Mortgage of July 1st 1887.

SUBDIVISION XIX.

ITEM 1. "Exhibit No. 13 to Stipulation" attached hereto, contains a correct statement of all maps of survey and location filed in the office of the Secretary of Interior of the United States by the East Side Company and the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and the dates thereof, under and pursuant to the provisions of the said East Side grant; also a correct statement of the map filed in the same office by the West Side Company under and in pursuance of the said West Side grant, with the date of such filing.

ITEM 2. "Exhibit No. 14 to Stipulation" attached hereto, contains a correct statement of the dates of construction, completion, approval and acceptance, of the several sections of the said East Side and West Side railroads, separately stated.

ITEM 3. "Exhibit No. 11" to the said Joint and Several Answer, correctly shows the quantity of land patented to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, compiled by years, separately stated as to the East Side and West Side land grants, and also giving the dates of all Acts of Congress recited or referred to in such patents.

ITEM 4. All of the West Side grant patents listed on the said "Exhibit No. 11" to Joint and Several Answer, recite that they were issued to the said Oregon and California Railroad Company "as successor to the Oregon Central Railroad Company"; but no patent issued for lands of the East Side grant, contains a recitation that it was issued to the Oregon and California Railroad Company "as successor to" any company.

SUBDIVISION XX.

ITEM 1. "Exhibit P" to the Bill gives a correct list of the suits therein referred to; and a fair statement, of reasonable accuracy, is given on page 60 of the Bill, of the allegations and substance of the complaints filed in those suits.

ITEM 2. During the month of December 1908, all of the said suits other than the one brought by Roy W. Minkler, were consolidated with this suit. Thereafter, and on or about January 15th 1909, all the persons other than the said Roy W. Minkler named in the said "Exhibit P" as complainants, filed herein their cross-complaints; and on April 24th 1911, demurrers theretofore filed by the undersigned defendants to each and all of said cross-complaints were sustained by order of the Court.

ITEM 3. On or about June 9th 1910, the said suit brought by Roy W. Minkler, was dismissed by mutual consent of all parties thereto.

SUBDIVISION XXI.

ITEM 1. An Act was passed by Congress entitled "An Act to create an Auditor of Railroad Accounts and other purposes.", approved June 19th 1878; a correct copy of which Act, as published in United States Statutes at Large, Volume 20, on pages 169 and following, is attached hereto marked "Exhibit No. 15 to Stipulation".

ITEM 3. By an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and one, and for other purposes.", approved April 17th 1900, published in United States Statutes at Large, Volume 31, pages 86 to 134, inclusive, Congress (on pages 124-125 of said publication) provided as follows:

"Office of Commissioner of Railroads: For Commissioner, four thousand five hundred dollars; book-keeper, two thousand dollars; assistant book-keeper, one thousand eight hundred dollars; one clerk of class two; one clerk, one thousand dollars; and one assistant messenger; in all, eleven thousand four hundred and twenty dollars; Provided, That the office of Commissioner of Railroads shall terminate on the thirtieth day of June, nineteen hundred and one."

ITEM 4. By an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and two, and for other purposes.", approved March 3rd, 1901; published in United States Statutes at Large, Volume 31, pages 960 to 1009, inclusive, Congress (on page 1000 of said publication) provided as follows:

> "Office of Commissioner of Railroads: For Commissioner, four thousand five hundred dollars; book-keeper, one thousand six hundred dollars; one clerk of class two; one clerk, one thousand dollars; and one assistant messenger; in all, nine thousand two hundred and twenty dollars; Provided, That the office of Commissioner of Railroads is hereby continued until the thirtieth day of June, nineteen hundred and two, when the same shall terminate, and the duties of the Commissioner shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior, together with the records and files of the office."

ITEM 5. By an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and three, and for other purposes.", approved June 28th 1902, published in United States Statutes at Large, Volume 32, Part 1, pages 419 to 481, inclusive, Congress (on pages 455-456 of said publication) provided as follows:

> "Office of Commissioner of Railroads: For Commissioner, four thousand five hundred dollars; one clerk, one thousand dollars; one assistant messenger, seven hundred and twenty dollars; in all six thousand two hundred and twenty dollars; Provided, That the office of Commissioner of Railroads is hereby continued until the thirtieth day of June, nineteen hundred and three, when the same shall terminate, and the duties of the Commissioner shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior together with the records and files of the office."

ITEM 6. By an Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth nineteen hundred and four, and for other purposes.", approved March 3rd 1903, published in United States Statutes at Large, Volume 32, Part 1, pages 1083 to 1147, inclusive, Congress (on page 1119 of said publication) provided as follows:

"Office of Commissioner of Railroads: For Commissioner, four thousand five hundred dollars; one clerk, one thousand dollars; one assistant messenger, seven hundred and twenty dollars; in all six thousand two hundred and twenty dollars; Provided, That the office of Commissioner of Railroads is hereby continued until the thirtieth day of June, nineteen hundred and four, when the same shall terminate, and the duties of the Commissioner shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior together with the records and files of the office."

ITEM 7. The said Bureau of the Interior Department was organized as provided by the said Act of June 19th 1878, and continuously administered as such under annual appropriations from Congress until the termination of said Bureau and the transfer of the duties, files and records thereof to the Secretary of the Interior, in the year 1904, as required by the said Act of March 3rd 1903; and, pursuant to the requirements of the said Act of June 19th 1878, the forms of reports to be made by the Railroad Companies contemplated by the said Act, including the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, were prepared and adopted and transmitted to the said Railroad Companies, including the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company, by the said Bureau, from 1879 to 1903; and the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company complied with the provisions of the said Act, and the demands of the said Bureau, as to the making of said reports, continuously from 1879 to 1903, both years inclusive, as is hereinafter set forth.

ITEM 8. Beginning with the report for the half year ending December 31st 1879, and continuing down to and including the year 1903, reports were made of the transactions of the Land Department of the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company, upon the said blanks formulated and furnished therefor by the said Bureau of the Interior Department, as follows:

ITEM 12. The Commissioner of Railroads appended to several of the reports set forth in the next preceding "Item 11" hereof, a copy of the said Acts of Congress approved July 25th 1866, April 10th 1869, and May 4th 1870; for greater particularity as to the reports in which said Acts of Congress are set forth, all parties may refer to the said official published reports.

ITEM 13. The original reports by Railroad Companies to the Commissioner of Railroads, and by the latter to the Secretary of Interior and by the latter to the President, and by the President to Congress, for the years mentioned in this Subdivision XXI of Stipulation, shall be treated as having been offered and received in evidence subject to the defendant's right to object to all or any part of the same as irrelevant, and immaterial. None of said reports shall be extended into the record (except as set forth and quoted in this Stipulation), but all parties to this Stipulation may refer to said reports in this District Court and in any Appellate Court, the same as if the said reports were inserted in the record of this case.

ITEM 14. For the purpose of showing the use made by Congress of said reports mentioned in the foregoing "Item 13" of this Subdivision XXI, and for the further purpose of showing whether the fact that lands were sold by the Oregon & California Railroad Company for prices in excess of $2.50 per acre was considered by Congress or any of the Committees thereof, and if so to what extent, all parties to this Stipulation may refer generally to the Reports of Congressional Committees, Congressional debates, and other proceedings shown by the Congressional Globe or Congressional Record, and other recognized Official Reports; subject to the defendants' right to objection to all or any part of the same as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, except that objections as to competency shall not go to identification of the Congressional Globe, Congressional Record, or other Official Reports referred to, beyond the apparent authenticity of the same.

SUBDIVISION XXII.

ITEM 1. The Supreme Court decision in Holliday vs. Elliott, as reported in 8 Oregon 81 et seq., shall be treated as if having been offered and received in evidence, subject to the defendants' objection as irrelevant, and immaterial.

ITEM 2. All Committee Reports and debates in Congress as appearing in the official printed copies of the Congressional Globe or Congressional Record, and all other proceedings in Congress which appear in any recognized Official Reports, relating to the enactments of the Acts of Congress approved July 25th 1866, June 25th 1868, April 10th 1869, May 4th 1870, January 31st 1885, and September 29th 1890, referred to in the Bill of Complaint and Answers, shall be treated as having been offered and received in evidence subject to the defendants' right to object to all or any part thereof as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, except that objections as to competency shall not go to identification of the Congressional Globe, Congressional Record, or other Official Reports referred to, beyond the apparent authenticity of the same.

ITEM 3. "Exhibit No. 16 to Stipulation" attached hereto, contains a correct statement of the Stock quotations therein set forth.

SUBDIVISION XXIII.

The foregoing "Stipulation as to the Facts" is made for the purpose of this suit only; and nothing therein contained shall be held or taken as an admission or estoppel affecting any of the parties thereto in any other suit in equity, action at law, other legal proceeding, or otherwise.

CHAPTER 403.

An Act to Incorporate the Southern Pacific Company.

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky:

SECTION 1. That Henry D. McHenry, Wm. G. Duncan, Samuel E. Hill, Samuel M. Cox, Henry McHenry, Jr., and their associates and successors and assigns, be and they are hereby created and constituted a body corporate and politic, under the name of the Southern Pacific Company, and as such shall have perpetual succession, and be capable in law to purchase, grant, sell, or receive, in trust or otherwise, all kinds of personal and real property to such amount as the directors of said company may, from time to time, determine; and to contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, appear and prosecute to final judgments all suits or actions at law or in equity in all courts and places; and to have and use a common seal, and to alter the same at pleasure; and to make and establish such by-laws, rules, and regulations for the government of said company and the conduct of its business as said corporation or the stockholders therein shall deem expedient or necessary for the management of its affairs, not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this State or of the United States; and generally to do and execute all acts, matters, and things which may be deemed necessary or convenient to carry into effect the powers and privileges herein granted; Provided however, that said corporation shall not have power to make joint stock with, lease, own, or operate any railroad within the State of Kentucky.

SEC. 2. The said corporation is hereby authorized and empowered to contract for, and acquire by purchase or otherwise, bonds, stocks, obligations, and securities of any corporation, company, or association now existing, or hereafter formed or constituted, and bonds, obligations, and securities of any individuals, state, territory, government or local authorities whatsoever, and to enter into contracts with any corporation, company, or association, individuals, state, territory, government or local authorities, in respect of their bonds, stock obligations, and securities, or in respect of the construction, establishment, acquisition, owning, equipment, leasing, maintenance, or operation of any railroads, telegraphs, or steamship lines, or any public or private improvements, or any appurtenances thereof, in any State or Territory of the United States, or in any foreign country, and to buy, hold, sell, and deal in all kinds of public and private stocks, bonds and securities, and said corporation may borrow and loan money, issue its own bonds or other evidences of indebtedness, and sell, negotiate and pledge the same, to such amounts, upon such terms, and in such manner as may from time to time be determined by the directors of said corporation; and it may mortgage all or any part of its property, assets, and franchises to secure such bonds and the interest thereon, on such terms and conditions as shall on that behalf be prescribed by its board of directors.

SEC. 3. The capital stock of said corporation shall be one million dollars, divided into shares of one hundred dollars each; which shares shall be deemed personal property, and may be issued, transferred, and forfeited for non-payment in such manner as the board of directors of such corporation may determine; and no person shall be in anywise liable as a stockholder of said corporation after said capital stock to such amount of one million dollars shall have been paid in in cash, and a certificate to that effect signed and sworn to by the treasurer and a majority of the board of directors of said corporation shall have been filed in the office of the Secretary of State of this State; nor shall the said corporation, nor any of the officers or agents thereof, be thereafter bound to make any further returns or certificates: Provided, however, that if, after the payment of such capital stock, any part thereof shall be withdrawn for or refunded to any of the stockholders when the property of the corporation is insufficient or will be thereby rendered insufficient for the payment of all its debts, the stockholders receiving the same shall be bound and obliged to repay to said corporation or its creditors, the amount so withdrawn or refunded.

SEC. 4. Any two of the persons above named as corporators of said corporation may call the first meeting for the organization of such corporation at such time and place as they may appoint, by mailing a proper notice of such meeting to each of such corporators at least ten days before the time appointed; and in case a majority of such corporators shall attend such meetings, either in person or by proxy, they may open books for the subscriptions to its capital stock; and whenever five hundred thousand dollars shall be subscribed and ten per cent of said subscriptions shall be paid in cash, the stockholders of said corporation may organize the same, and said corporation may proceed to business.

SEC. 5. Each share of stock entitle the holder thereof to one vote, in person or by proxy, at all meetings of the stockholders; the holders of a majority in interest of the capital stock, present in person or by proxy, shall constitute a quorum (the corporation shall have a lien on all the stock and property of its members invested therein for all debts due by them to said corporation, which lien may be enforced in such manner as the by-laws shall prescribe.)

SEC. 6. The stock, property, and affairs of said corporation shall be managed by a board of directors of such number, of not less than three, as may be from time to time determined by the corporators or stockholders. The directors shall be elected by the stockholders at such time and place, and in such manner, and for such terms, as the stockholders shall from time to time determine. Meetings of directors or stockholders may be held within or without the State. No person shall be elected a director who is not a stockholder of the corporation. A majority of the directors shall constitute a quorum of said board for the transaction of business. The directors shall appoint from their own number a president, and they shall also appoint a clerk and treasurer, and such other officers and agents as they may deem proper, to hold their offices during the pleasure of the board. In case of a vacancy or vacancies in the board, the remaining directors may fill such a vacancy or vacancies. The capital stock of said corporation may be increased from time to time to such sum as may be determined by the board of directors of said corporation, provided such increase or diminution shall be approved by at least two-thirds in interest of the stockholders of said corporation.

SEC. 7. The annual tax upon said corporation shall be the same as is now fixed by law for broker's license. Provided, that all property owned by said corporation and situated in the State shall pay the same State and local tax as is assessed upon similar property; and capital stock in said corporation, owned by citizens of the State, shall be assessed against the holders thereof as choses in action under the equalization law.

SEC. 8. The Company shall keep an office for the transaction of business, and the clerk or assistant clerk of said corporation shall reside within the State of Kentucky; but the said corporation may keep offices at such places outside of this State as in the judgment of its board of directors its business may from time to time require: Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed as granting any lottery or banking privileges.

SEC. 9. This act shall take effect immediately upon its passage.

By the Governor:

Geo. M. Adams, Secretary of State.

EXHIBIT NO. 5 TO STIPULATION.

Articles of Association, of Amalgamation and Consolidation, Executed this twenty-second (22nd) day of June, A. D. 1870, by and between "The Central Pacific Railroad Company of California," party of the first part, and "The Western Pacific Railroad Company," party of the second part; both of the said railroad companies being railroad corporations duly organized under and in pursuance of the laws of the State of California.

Whereas, "The Central Pacific Railroad Company of California," was duly organized under and in pursuance of the laws of the State of California, by filing Articles of Association in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of California on June 28th, 1861, and amended Articles of Association on the 8th day of October, 1864, to construct, operate, and maintain a railroad and telegraph line through the Counties of Sacramento, Placer, and Nevada, in the State of California, "from the City of Sacramento, in the County of Sacramento, in said State, to the eastern boundary line of the State of California, at or near the place where said line crosses the Truckee River, and running through Roseville, at the junction of said railroad with the California Central Railroad, and by or near to New-Castle, Auburn, Neilsburg, Illinoistown, Gold Run, Dutch Flat, Bear Valley, Crystal Lake, Summit Valley, and Donner Pass, together with such branches and extensions of the said railroad as the Board of Directors of said company may at any time deem necessary or proper to construct, operate, and maintain, by the laws of the State of California, or other States or Territories, or the Acts of the Congress of the United States, now in force, or which may hereafter be enacted."

And Whereas, by the provisions of an Act of the Congress of the United States, entitled, "An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July 1, 1862, and the Acts amendatory thereof, approved July 2, 1864, and March 3, 1865, the said "The Central Pacific Railroad Company of California" were authorized to locate and construct their road as aforesaid, and to locate, construct and continue the same eastward in a continuous completed line until it should meet and connect with the Union Pacific Railroad, and certain rights, powers, donations, grants, rights of way, privileges, and franchises were given and granted to them, to aid in the construction of their said railroad.

And Whereas, on the 23rd July, 1868, the said "The Central Pacific Railroad Company of California" increased the capital stock of the company from twenty million dollars to one hundred million dollars, the latter amount being necessary for the constructing, completing, operating, equipping, and maintaining said railroad and its extension.

And Whereas, under and in pursuance of the laws of the State of California, "The Western Pacific Railroad Company" was duly organized on the 11th day of December, 1862, and on the 2nd day of November, 1869, the "San Francisco Bay Railroad Company," another corporation organized under and in pursuance of the laws of the State of California, amalgamated and consolidated its interests, capital stock, rights, privileges, and franchises with those of the said "The Western Pacific Railroad Company," and formed both of said companies into one new company and corporation, to be called and known as "The Western Pacific Railroad Company," the objects and purposes of which were to purchase, construct, own, maintain, and operate certain railroad and telegraph lines, so as to form a continuous line of railway and telegraph, "Commencing at a point on the Central Pacific Railroad and connecting therewith at or near the City of Sacramento, and running thence by way of Stockton and the several routes mentioned in the several Articles of Association of the said 'The Western Pacific Railroad Company' and of the said 'San Francisco Bay Railroad Company' to a point on the San Francisco and San Jose Railroad, and connecting therewith at or near the city of San Jose, and to the several other points therein mentioned, to wit: The City of San Francisco, 'Yerba Buena Island,' otherwise called 'Goat Island', and the point in the Bay of San Francisco between 'The Encinal' and the City of San Francisco. Also, to purchase, construct, own, maintain, and operate such branch and side lines and railroads between the said 'The Western Pacific Railroad' and such several points on the Bay of San Francisco as the Board of Directors of said new and consolidated company may from time to time determine. The length of the said railroad and telegraph lines being, as near as may be, two hundred and twenty-three miles."

And Whereas, by the laws of the State of California it is made lawful for any two or more railroad companies to amalgamate and consolidate their capital stock, debts, property, assets and franchises, and they are authorized and empowered so to do in such manner as may be agreed upon by the Boards of Directors of such companies so desiring to amalgamate and consolidate their interests.

And Whereas, the Boards of Directors of the said railroad companies, parties of the first and second parts hereto, have agreed to amalgamate and consolidate the interests of said companies upon the terms, agreements, stipulations and conditions hereinafter set forth.

And Whereas, more than three fourths of the value of all the stockholders in interest of each of said companies, parties of the first and second parts hereto, give and have given their written consent to such amalgamation and consolidation upon the terms, agreements, stipulations and conditions hereinafter set forth.
